SECRET WITNESS LINKS AGENT OF UNION TO KILLING

Says He Plied Bat in Wieboldt Attack.

The climax of a dramatic scene in the state's attorney's office yesterday gave investigators new hope that the murder of James Lawrence would be solved. Lawrence, a truck helper, was shot to death by terrorists last April during a drivers' union dispute with the Wieboldt stores.

The scene:

Fourteen men stood in a line against the wall. Thirteen were supers who had no connection with the case. One was a powerfully built man with wavy brown hair, a union official who was suspected of a share in the killing. Facing the fourteen were several policemen and a witness who had seen deadly gunfire pour from an automobile into the truck on which James Lawrence was riding on April 12.

Points Out Union Official.

Slowly the witness examined the first few men in line and shook his head. Then he came to the union official, Oscar Kofkin, business agent of the Taxicab Drivers' union. Without hesitation he pointed an accusing finger at him.

"That man," he said, "was one of the four killers. I saw him and I don't think I can be mistaken."

Details of the story of the witness, whose identity is being hidden for fear of retaliation, were disclosed by Assistant State's Attorney Richard Devine and Capt. Dan Gilbert of the prosecutor's police force.

This witness, a man of good character, was riding in his automobile near Walton and Paulina streets the morning of April 12. A short distance ahead of his car was the Wieboldt truck.

Killers' Car Darts Ahead.

Suddenly a car in which four men rode cut in front of the witness' machine. It drew up to the truck. A man in the rear seat thrust a gun through a window and fired. Somebody else in the car used a pistol. The bullets crashed into the rear of the truck. This was the fusillade that killed Lawrence, who was hidden behind a tarpaulin.

Both the truck and the killers' car stopped. From the car leaped a powerfully built man with a baseball bat in his hands. He ran toward Roy Rodgers, 2233 South Oakley avenue, driver of the truck. Rodgers fled. The man with the bat pursued.

"A short distance from me," said the witness, "the man swung at the driver, who ducked. The bat struck the pavement and was shattered. The man who swung the bat was Kofkin. He was not, however, one of those who fired from the car."

Plan to File Charge Tomorrow.

Prosecutor Devine said that he would take Kofkin to the Felony court tomorrow and place a formal charge of murder against him.

Meanwhile the important witness will be kept under police guard. Devine said that he was in fear of bodily harm.

"We shall take care of him until this whole matter has been disposed of," the prosecutor added. "We shall make every effort to find others who can identify the killers, and we shall take this case to the grand jury at once."

Kofkin denied any part in the slaying. He admitted, however, that he had been arrested in connection with the Wieboldt disorders two days before the Lawrence murder, that he gave the false name Arthur Jacobs at that time, and that he failed to appear for trial. He is 31 years old and lives at 4423 North Lawndale avenue.

Denies Part in Slaying.

"I'm vice president as well as business agent for the taxi drivers," he said. "Most of my work is settling disputes between drivers and garage men. I was for a while a picket at two of the Wieboldt stores, but I had nothing to do with any killings or sluggings. I wasn't even guilty of dumping clay to keep trucks out of an alley—that was what they accused me of when I was arrested on April 10."

Investigators said the description given by the witness to the slaying corresponded so closely to that of "Jacobs" that suspicion was turned against Kofkin.

The Wieboldt picketing was done by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, with which Kofkin's union is allied. The difficulties were settled in mid-May.

Milk Farmer Is Prosecuted for Price Cut

BY FRED GRAFF.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., June 24.—[Special.] —The Wisconsin department of agriculture and markets today served a summons and complaint on Joseph Lemberger, Mishicot farmer, for selling milk below the ordered price in a regulated market. The department enforces state's fluid milk control law.

The complaint was signed by Ralph E. Ammon, director of the department. It alleges that Lemberger is operating without a license, selling at prices below those prescribed for his area under the milk control law, retailing milk in gallons contrary to state regulations.

Health Threat Charged.

The complaint states further that Lemberger's acts "are a threat to the maintenance of prices to numerous producers, constitute an imminent danger to public health" and adds allegations that Lemberger's milk and his premises do not conform to state sanitary regulations. The action was brought in the Municipal court of Manitowoc county.

Lemberger, who lives on a farm near Manitowoc, is one of two Wisconsin farmers who recently defied the milk control law by announcing they would begin retailing fluid milk at their own prices. The other is William Rohan of Kaukauna, former Democratic assemblyman. Rohan began retailing milk on his farm several days ago at 5 cents a quart and is reported to be doing a thriving business.

Deliveries Made in City.

The state department acted against Lemberger only because he has not confined his price cutting to sales on his farm and has begun delivering milk in the city of Manitowoc, where the regulated price is 10 cents a quart.

The legislature has a bill pending which would extend the milk control law, which expires Dec. 31, 1939, for a year with important changes. The house has advanced this measure to passage stage with amendments requiring the department of markets to fix prices guaranteeing the producer 50 per cent of the retail price and exempting farmers who sell milk on the farm direct to the consumer. If the bill is enacted, Rohan will not be molested because he is not making deliveries. Lemberger, however, would still be subject to prosecution.

MICHIGAN CONVICTS PLAY IN MUSIC FEST; TWO TAKE AUTO, FLEE

St. Joseph, Mich., June 24.—[Special.]—The concert given tonight at Wells High school field by the Ionia state reformatory band ended on a discordant note. The concert was a feature in the southwestern Michigan competitions for places in the Chicagoland Music Festival.

There were fifty players, all convicts and all nattily attired in gray coats and hats and white trousers, shirts, and shoes. Two guards, unarmed because of the special occasion, watched them.

Following the concert the convict musicians marched to a waiting bus. There occurred the discordant note. Jesse Weaver, 22 years old, and Farrel Lehigh, 18, trombone players, fled. Weaver, who is from Goshen, Ind., is under a twenty-five to forty year sentence for robbery and Lehigh, who is from Munising, Mich., is under a five to fifteen year sentence for burglary.

They ran across the field to highway 31, threatened a parked motorist, Constable E. Hendrix of Bridgman, and drove away in his car. The forty-eight other convicts were returned to prison, their usually joyous instruments mute. [Details of the concert, see page 11.]

ALASKA NO SISSY! STILL TAKES ITS RUM LIKE A MAN

JUNEAU, Alaska, June 24.—(AP)—This northland, with its legendary stories of hardy men who took their drinks straight and often—and standing up—has failed to work up much enthusiasm for the modern plush-seat drinking vogue.

The last legislature passed a cocktail bar bill, effective July 1. Licenses are $1,000 each. Only seven applications have been made for licenses in southeastern Alaska, the territory's most populous area.

It's much more economical for residents to buy their liquor by the bottle.

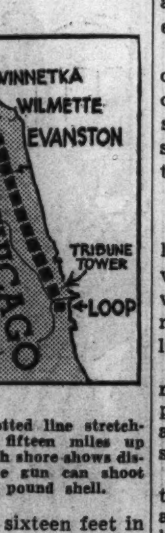
Warden Enjoys a Good Cry with Aid of Tear Gas

HONOLULU, June 24.—(AP)—Take it from Warden L. F. Luckie of Oahu prison, tear gas is the thing to use on an unruly prisoner. Having tried it personally, he prescribed it for a woman prisoner. It worked, he said.

"It's the most humane method of punishment," Luckie said. "Why I took some tear gas just to see what it does. It only made me cry a little."

New Field Gun Shoots 100 Lb. Shell 15 Miles

Washington, D. C., June 24.—(AP)—The army lifted secrecy today from its newest and longest range field gun, a weapon that hurls a 100 pound shell fifteen miles. The gun, which weighs fifteen tons, can be moved on its ten wheel carriage at the rate of twelve miles an hour.



Dotted line stretching fifteen miles up north shore shows distance gun can shoot 100 pound shell.

A 155 millimeter caliber gun, bulky but mobile, it fired a projectile in tests at Fort Bragg, N. C., which traveled about 25,000 yards and blew a hole sixteen feet in the ground.

The shot was the longest ever fired from a standard American army field gun, Col. Ralph Pennell, chairman of the field artillery board, reported.

Arsenals Busy Turning Them Out.

The weapon, developed by the army's own ordnance experts, has been adopted as standard for long range artillery fire and an undisclosed number are being turned out now at arsenals, located throughout the country.

Describing it in the military periodical, "Army Ordnance," Pennell explained its function was the bombardment of enemy reserves, supply dumps and communications far behind wartime lines of battle.

Col. Pennell said the 100 pound projectile is interchangeable with that provided for the shorter range howitzer of the same caliber. A normal charge of powder gives a range of 18,000 yards [about ten miles] and a supercharge a maximum range of 25,000 yards.

Twice Range of Howitzer.

The army's standard 155 millimeter howitzer weighs only about eight and one-half tons and has half the range of the new field gun. It fires shells higher into the air, but the distance the missile will carry is much shorter than the new gun, army officers declare.

A larger calibre but shorter range field weapon is the 240 millimetre howitzer also in service at Fort Bragg. Coast defense guns are still larger, but are not mobile.

4 Blasts Peril Huge Saturday Night Crowds

LONDON, June 24.—(AP)—Hundreds of policemen and members of the British territorial army were rushed into London's busy theater section tonight as four separate explosions threw Saturday night crowds into confusion and tangled the city's trafic. At least twenty persons were treated for injuries, caused mostly by flying glass. They were taken to hospitals for first aid care.

All the explosions took place outside banks. Four men were taken to the Vine street police station for questioning about the blasts.

After the second explosion in Piccadilly the crowd, shouting "Lynch him! String him from a lamppost," manhandled a man who was wrenched from the hands of a policeman. The suspect was rescued by the police and taken away in an ambulance.

Bomb Thrown from Cab.

The first explosion occurred just off Piccadilly Circus about 10 p. m. [4 p. m. Chicago time]. Onlookers said a bomb was thrown from a passing taxi.

It shattered windows for blocks off the Circus and brought thousands of persons rushing out of theaters, hotels, and restaurants of the district. Almost an hour later the second explosion shattered glass and stopped trafic further down Piccadilly, and within fifteen minutes two other explosions rocked the Strand and Park Lane.

Two other bombs were found during the night. One did slight damage to a mail box and the other was found in a public checkroom at Oxford circus, where it had failed to go off. After the fourth explosion, in front of the Midland bank on fashionable Park Lane, there was a wild alley hunt to catch one suspect back of the bank.

Similar to Bombs Used by Irish.

All the explosions apparently were caused by bombs similar to those police have accused the illegal Irish Republican army of using in other recent bombings throughout the British Isles. The anti-British Irish Republican army is agitating for severance of all Ireland's connections with England.

There were conflicting stories about the first explosion in Piccadilly Circus, but most persons in the large crowd of passers-by said two men jumped from a taxi, dropped a bomb, and ran through the crowd when it exploded.

The first blast brought terrified crowds into Piccadilly. People poured out of theaters. Those who were in subways tried to get out into the streets and those in the streets tried to crowd into the subways.

Throngs Follow Police.

The crowds broke through police lines and hundreds of extra police were rushed to the district. They were supplemented by auxiliary firemen and territorial soldiers, equivalent to the American National Guard.

Police commandeered taxis and rushed to the scene of the second explosion when they heard the report and the crowd followed. The blast shattered glass for a hundred yards.

There apparently were no casualties from the second explosion but after the third, in front of Lloyd's bank in the Strand, about sixteen persons were treated for cuts and bruises.

The crowd was unanimous in blaming the outrages on Irish terrorists. Many in the throngs which excitedly followed the police about were dressed in evening clothes.

It was said in the house of commons on May 1 that 100 outrages or attempted outrages attributed to the Irish Republican army had been committed between Jan. 1 and May 5 this year. Many of these were bombings directed against waterworks and other municipal services.

BOASTS BRITISH POWER; OFFERS DEAL TO HITLER

Chamberlain Also Lashes at Japan.

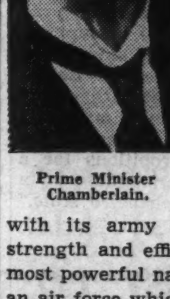
BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, June 24.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today made a striking appeal to Germany to stop its attacks on the British empire and join a coalition which would do good for both British and German industry. Dispatches from Berlin said the plea was promptly rejected by the Nazi controled press.



Prime Minister Chamberlain.

Chamberlain coupled his appeal with a boast that England, with its army increasing daily in strength and efficiency, now has the most powerful navy in the world and an air force which is not excelled by that of any other nation. He declared Britain never would submit to dictation from another power on its foreign policy.

Seen as Blunt Warning.

Despite his plea to Germany for appeasement, the speech was looked upon by some observers as a blunt warning to both the Nazis and Japan.

Chamberlain spoke at Cardiff, Wales, one of this island's sorest spots of unemployment. He addressed a political rally as rain fell heavily.

"I don't mind the rain," he said. "As you know, I still have my umbrella."

The premier's appeal to Germany was made at a moment when the British appear to be getting more and more tangled up with the Japanese and also at a moment when negotiations for an alliance with bolshevik Russia appear to be breaking down.

Wants a Peaceful World.

After disclaiming that the British had any wish to encircle Germany, Chamberlain told his audience that the aim of Britain's foreign policy now is, as always, to establish a peaceful world where each nation can pursue its occupations in security and confidence. In such a world, he said, Britain can see great prospects for expansion of German industry and employment of workers. Every country, he said, needs good equipment such as German and British industries are able to supply.

"In a world in which confidence has been restored," Chamberlain said, "our two countries—England and Germany—could well coöperate in developing resources which still lie latent and which would bring in returns of solid value to us both. But such a happy future must remain a dream until Germany is ready to drop its unjust suspicions of others and show that it is sincerely ready to talk reason with reasonable people."

Cites Far East Situation.

After his appeal to Germany, Chamberlain turned to the far eastern situation.

"Europe is not the only center of disturbance in the world," Chamberlain said. "The blockade of British and French concessions in Tientsin has been followed by high handed, intolerable and insulting treatment of British subjects by Japanese soldiers. The incident is becoming the pretext for far reaching and quite inadmissable claims for alteration of policy which we and other governments hitherto have followed in these regions.

"Up to the present no formal claims of this character have been put forward by the Japanese government and if the issue is confined to the original subject of dispute it ought to be possible to settle it by negotiation."

[The original demand by the Japanese was for the surrender to them by the British of four alleged Chinese terrorists accused by the Japanese of slaying a Tientsin official.]

Resolved to Oppose Force.

"But I am bound to add," Chamberlain continued, "that no British government could submit to dictation by another power as to its foreign policy and I trust, therefore, that we are right in supposing that no such intention is in the mind of the Japanese government.

"We have resolved to oppose the use of force to bring about changes which should be determined by discussion and coöperation, and I trust that, despite all the dangerous possibilities which are only too apparent, the people of all countries who cry for peace may yet find the patience and the will to achieve it.

"When I compare the state of our armed forces and our ability to resist attack as it is today with what it was only a year ago, I feel that we can face the future with calm confidence in our growing strength.

"Our navy today is the most powerful in the world, our army is daily increasing in number and efficiency of its equipment, and as to our air force, I give you no figures, but I can tell you that it has expanded in these twelve months at a rate far beyond our expectations, while in quality, personnel, speed, and power its machines are unexcelled by the air force of any other country.

"These mighty armaments threaten no one, but they are available today to resist aggression or domination.

Nazis Are Suspicious.

BERLIN, June 24.—(AP)—Suggestions by Prime Minister Chamberlain that British-German coöperation still might be possible are regarded here with deep mistrust, the semi-official Deutsche Dienst News service said.

"They [Chamberlain's suggestions] awaken suspicion in us because London may wish to have something to fall back upon in view of the high price demanded by Moscow for coöperation," Deutsche Dienst said.

"If England no longer is capable of some insight or is insensible to honor it should on grounds of good taste stop calling its political, military and economic alliances against Germany a 'peace front.'"

ALMANAC SEES PERIOD OF GREAT TENSION IN BERLIN

CARDIFF, Wales, June 24.—(AP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today advised people who want to know what's going to happen in Europe this fall to look it up in Old Moore's Almanac, an annual publication popular in England. Chamberlain was addressing a conservative party rally.

"Old Moore's is as likely to be right as I," he added.

And here is what Old Moore's says:

"In the first half of September there are signs of much tension in Berlin, to be followed by calm in the latter half. In October foreign affairs will continue to be of supreme importance inasmuch as Venus is culminating at both Rome and Berlin. There is good ground for anticipating that the cause of peace will make further great headway, for conditions are certainly most propitious for a real and lasting understanding on a very wide and comprehensive scale."

EPISCOPALIANS OF MIDWEST TO MEET TOMORROW

The annual Episcopal conference for clergy and laity of the central west will open tomorrow for two weeks under the De Koven foundation on the former Racine college campus at Racine, Wis. The chairman of the conference is the Very Rev. Gerald G. Moore, dean of St. Luke's procathedral, Evanston. Courses in Christian marriage, social psychology, church music, religious drama, and community problems will be conducted. Among members of the faculty are the Rev. G. Clarence Lund of Milwaukee, the Rev. Alden Drew Kelley of New York City, the Rev. Dr. Harold Holt of Oak Park, and the Rev. Walter K. Morley, head of the social service department of the diocese of Chicago.

JAPS PLACE CURB ON BRITISH SHIPS IN CHINESE RIVER

More Britons Searched in Tientsin Siege.

BULLETIN.

TIENTSIN, June 25 (Sunday).—(AP)—United States Consul General John K. Caldwell has made representations to the Japanese charging mistreatment of Robert S. Casey, an American seaman from Seattle, Wash. Casey was said to have been held by the Japanese four days, one day without food, when he came here to join his boat. Japanese gendarmes, it was said, refused to recognize Casey's credentials. He was released yesterday.

TIENTSIN, June 24.—(AP)—The Japanese extended their military blockade of the British and French concessions today with increased restrictions on river travel from Tientsin to the port of Tangku.

A British passenger ship was delayed on the eighteen mile trip, one British subject was held for four hours before being permitted to go on to Tangku, and others reported that they were searched. Previously shipping on the Hai river encountered only occasional difficulty.

Two British subjects reported that they were compelled to undress and were searched at the concession barricades, making a total of eleven such incidents in the last three days.

Taxi Driver Solves Situation.

A lack of fresh food in the French concession became apparent for the first time since the blockade was imposed on June 14 after the British authorities refused to hand over four alleged Chinese terrorists. The British area felt the shortage almost at once but the French had been using their military trucks to get supplies from the Italian concession.

A Chinese taxi driver in the French concession partially solved the problem of submitting to search by the Japanese—he sat in his cab in his underwear. He explained that he was tired of taking off his pants every time a fare took him into Japanese territory.

One of the British searched today was Cecil Davis, honorary agent of the New Zealand government, who reported that he was slapped three times and forced to stand naked in the examining shed yesterday. The Japanese permitted him to keep on his undershirt and trunks today.

Throw Clothes at Briton.

The other was J. A. Whitewright, secretary of the Tientsin Country club, who said police rushed him from the shed and threw his outer clothing after him when they had finished their search.

Dispatches from Shanghai reported that the Japanese now were making no objection to American and British ships entering or leaving the port of Swatow with passengers and mail but without cargo. A Shanghai spokesman denied that the Japanese ever proclaimed a blockade of Swatow, which they occupied Wednesday.

A Domei [Japanese news agency] dispatch from Swatow said Japanese naval authorities had asked that twenty-four hours' notice be given of the entry of any foreign vessel into the port.

A Domei dispatch from Hankow reported that Japanese soldiers had arrested but later released two intoxicated British sailors who had attacked a Japanese sentry.

The Japanese virtually closed the port of Ningpo in their drive to wrest from the Chinese the few remaining coastal cities which have been gateways for armaments. Japanese naval officers announced an operation shutting off the maritime approach to Ningpo, 120 miles south of Shanghai.

Bombs Burst in Busy London Areas

Four crosses, two in Piccadilly Circus and one each on the Strand and Park Lane, mark spots where bombs, supposedly placed by members of Irish Republican army, exploded in London last night. The explosions, occurring in three of the city's busiest areas, endangered huge crowds, but only twenty were injured.

POLES VOW THEY WILL KEEP THEIR OUTLET TO SEA

Warned Nation to Die if They Fail.

WARSAW, Poland, June 24.—(AP)—Poland's traditional navy week began today with the motto: "We will not permit ourselves to be driven away from the Baltic."

The words were those of Foreign Minister Josef Beck in a speech May 5 rejecting German demands for the Free City of Danzig on the Baltic and a sovereign right of way across Pomorze, the Polish corridor.

Gen. Stanislas Kwasniewski, president of the Naval league, inaugurated the program with a speech in which he said, "The most important problem of the present is that of a Polish outlet to the sea."

Observe Traditional Ceremony.

"That is," he added, "whether Poland will be strong and independent due to its access to the sea or whether the country again will be pushed away from the Baltic and thus condemned to failure, dependent on others and a new partition."

Tonight the traditional Wianki [wreath ceremony] was observed in Warsaw and all towns located on the Vistula river and its tributaries.

An Ancient Rite.

For centuries Polish girls have floated wreaths on the Vistula each June 24, which is St. John day, symbolizing their wish for a happy marriage.

This year the wreaths bore the inscriptions "We will not permit ourselves to be driven away from the Baltic," "We will arm Poland on the water," and "Hands off Polish Pomorze."

German Sailors in Danzig.

FREE CITY OF DANZIG, June 24.—(AP)—Seventy German sailors, including thirty musicians of the 5th marine artillery, arrived today to participate in the free city's navy day ceremonies tomorrow. They were met by several hundred Danzig citizens. They will take part in the unveiling of a naval memorial tomorrow.

NORTHERN BAPTISTS APPROVE ACCORD AT THEIR CONVENTION

Los Angeles, Cal., June 24.—[Special.]—Northern and Southern Baptists of the country, comprising more than five million members, can now speak with a single voice on civil and social affairs affecting their religious practice. This was made possible here yesterday at the sessions of the Northern Baptist convention when an accord proposed by the recent southern convention was approved. The agreement sets up a permanent joint public relations commission.

The convention also voted to become a member of the now forming world council of churches. When the council is completed it will federate more than 350 million members of 130 denominations of the world. The first pronouncement of the new joint public relations commission was approved by the convention. It attacked trends toward union of church and state through proposed taxes on churches for social security programs.

The Rev. Mike Elliott, editor of the Baptist Minister, Chicago publication, stated that the present convention will go down in Baptist history as one of the greatest meetings of the denomination because it reunited Northern and Southern Baptists on a working basis when matters important to all Baptists are concerned.

GERMAN-ITALIAN AIR FLEETS TO BE POOLED IN WAR

Fascist Aviation Chief in Berlin for Parley.

(Turn to the Graphic section for Kurt Ludecke's story of Germany's Day of Terror, five years ago.)

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, June 24.—Gen. Giuseppe Valle, Italian undersecretary of aviation, arrived in Berlin by air today. He will participate in another of the series of conferences between military leaders of the axis powers which have been carried on almost incessantly since the conclusion of the Italian-German military alliance on May 22.

Gen. Valle, who was accompanied by a big staff of Italian air experts, will confer with Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, German minister of aviation, with a view to perfecting coöperation between the Italian and German air forces. Agreements already have been made for army and navy coöperation.

Commission New U-Boat.

Germany's navy is keeping pace with the rapid growth of its air force. At Kiel harbor today, the submarine U-53 was placed in commission. The new vessel is one of a group of fourteen U-boats, each displacing 517 tons.

It is estimated that Germany now has about seventy submarines in commission and more on the stocks.

The new craft was numbered after its world war predecessor, which called at Newport, R. I., on Oct. 7, 1916, and left after two hours without refueling or taking on food supplies.

On July 3 Germany's fifth 10,000-ton cruiser will be launched at Bremen in the presence of Reichsfuehrer Hitler. He is expected to make an important speech on that occasion. A few days later Germany's third 35,000-ton battleship will slide down the ways.

Train More Army Officers.

No efforts are being spared to enlarge Germany's army, already the world's most powerful. Special courses have been instituted for the mass training of officers and noncommissioned officers. These courses will begin on July 18 and end on Oct. 17.

While the military preparations of the axis powers continue, the tone of the German press against Poland is becoming sharper. Asserting that the Poles are waging a war of extirpation against hundreds of thousands of Germans in Poland, the Hamburger Fremdenblatt declares:

"The recent happenings in Poland are so bestial, revolting and appalling that their publication in Germany would evoke a unanimous cry for immediate reprisals."

China Digs Into Good Earth to Find Jobs and New Life

BY L. LE GAY BRERETON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HONGKONG, June 24.—China's attempt to solve the problem of nearly twenty million destitute refugees by establishing 30,000 individual industrial coöperatives is one of the amazing economic developments in East Asia since the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Far outweighing the value of the efforts to maintain, with the help of third powers, the value of the national dollar is China's own effort to preserve her trade and industry and at the same time to solve the problem of her destitute millions.

Today China is not only caring for her helpless population driven westward before advancing armies, but she actually is providing them with constructive work by a new system applied piecemeal, but on the grand scale. Nearly a thousand coöperative units have already been established, each unit providing work for between 75 and 100 men and their families. The government supports and transports the refugees far inland, where they will be free of air raids and war and then subsidizes them for a short term until they become self-supporting.

Cover a Wide Field.

There is no field that the coöperatives do not touch, from making matches and soap to work in engineering shops. Their progress is due mainly to their having proved themselves the answer to China's greatest economic need of today. Even the Japanese blockade is a favorable factor, for it provides a form of protection to the hundreds of infant industries.

In caves and huts, and in makeshift workshops and bombproof dugouts throughout unoccupied China, and often, also, far behind the Japanese lines, the coöperative system is bringing together for the first time China's tremendous resources of raw materials and the labor power of her millions of destitute—while the tools used are those nearest at hand, some moved from more developed areas before they were devastated by war, others the age-old implements used for centuries in the primitive attempts at industry already made in western China.

In Shensi province thousands of bales of wool, formerly exported each year, will this year be turned into a million blankets for Chinese soldiers, who last year nearly froze in imported cotton suits. Interesting stories are related by the coöperative organizers, led by a young New Zealander, Rewi Alley, concerning the methods adopted to save China's battered industry, which only during the last few years was beginning to be modernized and made efficient according to western standards.

Some Bold Steps Taken.

The entire system is marked by bold improvizations in industrial methods and raw materials. In Szechuen, where cotton was insufficient to meet the demands of the hospitals, medical cotton is being made from a substitute plant. Experiments have proved that motor fuel can be made successfully from vegetable oils, and soap from a Chinese nut.

Where it is impossible to obtain modern machinery and the market is denuded of articles of daily use by the breakdown in communications, coöperative technicians are teaching the population to use old handicraft tools, long forgotten since the advent of cheap imported machine-manufactured goods. But this is not merely a return to the primitive, for the technicians also are improving output by up to 500 per cent by simple technical changes in the old methods.

These developments are all a part of the story of war time China; people who were starving have found a way to live and prosper, and regions which were impoverished by war are producing and progressing. China's day of trial has, for millions, become a day of rebirth and new strength.

Miners' coöperatives, staked by the government, now make $70 a month a man. Other units are tapping the vast resources of iron, coal, soda and other minerals for so long left unworked. Some coöperative units are self-supporting making spinning and carding machines and looms and printing presses for other units.

Turn to Good Earth.

Since wood and bricks are scarce in China, refugees arriving in the west by the tens of thousands are turning once again to the good earth for homes as well as every other need. Great cave colonies have been formed, each cavern dug from the loess hills providing home and workshop for a group of workers. Thousands of such tiny units are working in dugouts in western China.

Lack of personnel to guide the illiterate farming and industrial classes who form the mass of the refugees is holding up the work of establishing the full 30,000 units planned by the Chinese government, but schools have been established at dozens of inland cities to train men and women to carry on the work of teaching their countrymen to maintain their industries and solve the war-time problem—a solution which will increase China's productiveness after the war by many millions of dollars.

The fact that in eight months no coöperative unit has failed and many have already paid back the original loan from the government is evidence that the plan to rehabilitate China's industry and her destitute refugees probably will be crowned with success.

THUNDERING FIRE ENGINES TO LEAD BIG THRILL SHOW

Police to Direct Gun Fight by Radio from Plane.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

You have seen them standing in the dim interiors of Chicago fire stations, these monsters of red and gold. They are waiting there for the bell's clashing warning that the city's greatest natural enemy is at work.

Perhaps you have been near one of the big downtown firehouses at the stirring moment when an alarm has sounded. If you have, you never will forget it.

The quiet of the station is shattered by the gong. The great doors snap open. Within, the trucks roar into life. One by one they plunge into the street. The thunder of their heavy motors is earth-shaking. Clinging to the lurching engines with one hand, firemen struggle into rubber coats and helmets. In a flash all the big machines are out of sight, the wails of their sirens receding in the distance.

City's Equipment Among Best.

The chances are that this is as near as you ever will be to these fire fighting monsters when they are fighting real fires. The public is kept away, out of danger and out from under foot. That may be the reason the public knows so amazingly little about its fire department equipment—among the most modern in the world.

It is in supplying this need of information that the Police and Fire Thrill show serves a practical purpose in addition to offering more than two hours of excitement and entertainment. The show—the second to be held—will go on in Soldiers' field the afternoon of Sunday, July 16.

Taking part in it will be more than eighty of the mechanical marvels that have proved such telling weapons against fire and crime in Chicago. Nearly 1,000 members of the police and fire departments and the Chicago park district also will participate. These three groups and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE are sponsors of the thrill show.

Big Engines to Be Paraded.

The fire fighting engines probably will draw the eyes of the audience first in the parade around the field. The men themselves will be dwarfed by some of these monsters.

Among the most amazing of the big machines is the de luxe sedan pumper designed especially for the Chicago fire department after Deputy Chief Fire Marshal Anthony J. Mullaney and Engineer James Gleason had studied—and improved upon—the finest equipment in the nation.

This monster—if you think it isn't, compare its measurements with those of your automobile—is 8 feet high and 27 feet long. Your car is 10 or 11 feet long and about 5 feet high. The big pumper can carry six men in the sedan compartment, which is equipped with shatterproof glass.

Two Ride in the Cab.

In the cab there is room for an engineer and an officer. Two thousand feet of hose is carried in the rear compartment. The thunder of the 225 horse power motor is deafening when it is driving the pumper at high speed. [It can attain seventy-five miles an hour.] By the pull of a lever, this same motor is connected with the mighty pumps that drive 1,800 gallons of water a minute through four hose lines.

Such a stream can be shot 180 feet into the air—the height of a sixteen story building.

The water tower and the pumper, working together, form one of the greatest weapons known in combating the enemy that once laid waste an appallingly large section of this city. The tower, too, owes one of its most valuable features to a Chicagoan—Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan. He designed an additional tower pipe and a crow's nest from which to operate it—enabling a fireman to look into the heart of flames on upper stories. Widely used now, this improvement is known everywhere as the Corrigan pipe.

The pumper and the tower worked together yesterday at the Fire Department Drill school, on Gladys street near Des Plaines street, as picked men went through practice in preparation for the thrill show. The two big machines will have star rôles on Soldiers' field the afternoon of July 16.

The third of the monsters that will star in the show is the great aerial ladder truck that can rear its spidery rungs eighty-five feet upward, enabling men to enter seventh story windows.

This piece of equipment cost $20,000 to build and is the longest type in use. It also is one of the oldest types, its ancestors having been created in the days when fire apparatus was pulled by hand.

Veterans to Attend Show.

The heroic firemen who used the old types are gone—most of them. But a handful of veterans will have their place in the show and will watch the firemen of today, who are no less heroic, as they go through the stirring display.

The firemen will not be the only heroes. The men who war upon another great public enemy—crime—will share in producing the thrills. There will be a hijacker chase and gun battle, directed from the air by police in a radio equipped plane. The voices of the men high above the field will be picked up by the two way radio squad cars of the Chicago and Park district police. These voices will be as plainly audible to the throng in the field as the pistol and machine gun shots.

The admission price for this afternoon of thrills is 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults.

Drill on Tower

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

Firemen going through practice drills with huge water tower for Police and Fire Thrill show, to be held July 16 in Soldiers' field. Far up in the crow's nest a fireman directs two streams of water. The lower nozzle was perfected by Fire Commissioner Michael J. Corrigan, and is known over the nation as the Corrigan pipe.

CHICAGO STUDIED IN EFFORT TO PUT SPUR TO BUSINESS

Strong and Weak Points Examined in Drive.

BY JOSEPH ATOR.

Something is wrong with Chicago business. One of the chief things wrong with it is that it does not know what is wrong. A worried business and industrial community does not know specifically and accurately the causes of the decline it feels it is suffering. Neither does it know with certainty the sources of strength that can lift it out of that decline.

Thus did members of the Chicago Association of Commerce staff sketch the city's problem yesterday. Chicago's present recognition of its business troubles is visceral rather than mental—a sinking feeling in the commercial solar plexus rather than a situation clearly portrayed by statistics and surveys, they held. But they admit that this does not prevent three simple and appalling facts from standing out for all to see.

Chicago is losing industries.

Chicago is doing virtually no building.

Chicago is plagued by high taxes and tax delinquency.

The Clinical Report.

These are symptoms rather than the disease itself. The clinical report, briefly elaborated, is this:

Plants in the Chicago industrial area, counted by the federal census bureau, dropped from 9,302 in 1935 to 9,019 in 1937. Meanwhile more wideawake cities were gaining industries. Boston increased its count, in the same period, by 239. Los Angeles added 143; Pittsburgh added 114, strike torn San Francisco added 128.

The new Greater Chicago Plan of the Chicago Association of Commerce is designed first and foremost to provide a detailed appraisal of the city's liabilities and assets as a manufacturing and trade center.

Then it is proposed to do something about it—to remedy the weaknesses that can be remedied; to make the most of the advantages; most important of all, to tell the world about these advantages, which are substantial, many of them unmatched in any other city.

Building Forms Pillar.

More than one-quarter — an estimated 28 per cent—of all business activity in Chicago depends directly or indirectly on the construction industry. Yet last year in Chicago the per capita expenditure for new building was only $8.17. The figure for New York was $44.71. Houston, Tex., led the country with $63.50. Chicago's figure would be better if residential building in the suburbs were included, but the exodus to the suburbs highlights another grave problem, the tremendous and increasing blighted area ringing the downtown district.

Chicago taxes are a burden to industry. They were a frequent cause of complaint in the hundred business clinics recently conducted by the Association of Commerce. They are not as heavy a burden, however, as industry bears in some other industrial areas, such as Pennsylvania and New Jersey. But Chicago's tax delinquency is far worse than in most other cities. It increases the tax burden on those who pay and unsettles all real estate values in the city.

These, it has been said, are symptoms. An economist cited a few of the deeper lying causes that bring about the symptoms.

World's Rail Center.

Chicago is the great railroad center of the country, the greatest railroad center in the world. That made it also a center of manufacture for railroad equipment and supplies. The railroads are broke. They have not been, as Ralph Budd, president of the Burlington railroad, suggested recently they should be, paid for not hauling the crops the government has paid farmers not to raise. The long and short haul rate law has diverted much trafic from transcontinental railroads to ships. Not only have railroad pay rolls [spent in Chicago] fallen, but the supply industry also has suffered with the railroads.

Chicago once was a great wholesale center. It still is, to a lesser extent. But the wholesalers have also suffered from the long and short haul rule. Along with the railroads, meat packers, who thrive on volume, have been hurt by scarcity economics. When the packers suffer, hundreds of firms using stockyards by-products or making packing supplies also suffer.

Home of Split Mortgage.

Chicago was the home of the split mortgage, the real estate bond issue sold to numerous small investors. This overeasy form of financing caused serious overbuilding, particularly of office and commercial buildings, during the boom. The collapse left a building surplus and burnt investors, wary of new building investments.

Some of the underlying causes of Chicago's trouble listed above arise outside the city, in national political policies. But the Greater Chicago Plan has them in mind, as well as local problems. One of its features is provision for more vigorous representation of Chicago business at Washington and Springfield, and before governmental boards, commissions, and committees.

So far this recital has been pretty much on the dismal side. But there is a bright side to the Chicago business picture, a side of tremendous advantages and potentialities which the city cannot lose, but which it needs to tell the world about.

Harbor Outlets Cited.

Chicago has matchless transportation facilities. Along with its rail lines it has its harbor outlets to the Great Lakes and the sea, its waterway connections with the Mississippi valley and the gulf.

Chicago has a great and diversified labor market. It has a greater degree of labor peace than any other large city, although it also has some labor rackets that prey on business and raise its costs.

Chicago has a good climate. The association of commerce experts are not talking here about Chicago as a summer resort, although they are not neglecting that, either. Smart industrialists are finding that climate has a direct effect on the efficiency of workmen.

While general property taxes, particularly personal property taxes, are burdensome, Chicago overcomes most or all of this disadvantage by its freedom from state and local income taxes.

Still Has Pool of Capital.

Chicago, despite financial reverses, still has a great pool of capital for financing new industries and industrial expansion. It is a financial center, a center of bond underwriting and investment banking.

Chicago industrial sites compare favorably with the best in the country. There are many unoccupied industrial buildings available. There is a hundred square miles of vacant land, accessible to railroad switches and much of it open to water transport.

The Association of Commerce says that one of the things wrong with Chicago is the Association of Commerce. During the depression, its revenue was cut in half. It curtailed its activities, dropped a third of its employés. Other cities started pepping up their business associations in 1935 and 1936. They started out to get new industries and they got them. Chicago is just now getting started.

Its start, the start of the Greater Chicago Plan, is the present drive to raise the association's annual budget from $218,000 to $625,000. The fund is over the $400,000 mark now.

Divisions Are Reorganized.

Oscar G. Mayer, who as president of the Association of Commerce has led the drive for the Greater Chicago Plan, outlined with it a program for reorganizing the work of the association in twelve divisions. All have important tasks, but the most important, aside possibly from that of publicity and advertising, are the three that will deal with the three primary symptoms—lost industries, the building slump, tax burdens, and other governmental problems.

The industrial department plans to survey available sites for new industry. It is going to talk to every employer of fifty or more workmen, and many smaller ones, to find just what advantages he finds in Chicago, just what problems he faces here.

Manufacturing costs in competing cities will be studied. The Chicago consuming market will be studied.

"Get out your pencil," advised one of Mr. Mayer's assistants, "and figure what a $1,000,000 pay roll means to Chicago business and Chicago people. That money turns over six to twelve times a year. At the median figure for family incomes, that means income for 4,000 to 8,000 families. That many families means a market for 140 to 280 retail establishments. It means patients for a good many doctors, clients for a number of lawyers, depositors for banks. Everybody in Chicago benefits by added pay rolls."

KELLY WIRES ALL LEGISLATORS: O.K. SUPERHIGHWAYS

Democrats and G. O. P. Get Personal Plea.

WALTER BIALCZEK, Avondale Chamber of Commerce.

North siders have shown a twofold interest in superhighway plans. The outer drive would be extended north from Foster avenue and the northwest elevated highway would relieve the north side lake front of much of its present congestion.

Representatives from North.

In the house of representatives from the north side and north suburbs are Charles H. Weber [D.], George H. Smith [D.], Drennan J. Slater [R.], Edward P. O'Grady [D.], Arthur J. Quinn [D.], Robert M. Woodward [R.], Pierce L. Shannon [D.], William B. Greene [D.], and Edward P. Saltiel [R.].

They will be told that the following home folks have been working for superhighways.

JUDGE JAMES G. BARBER, Evanston.

LEO DOLKART, Rogers Park Kiwanis club and Howard District Business association.

J. W. HENDLEY, Central Uptown Chicago association.

MRS. ETHEL KELLEY, Northtown Economist.

JOHN TONE KELLY, Evanston.

HARVEY A. KENNEY, chief of police, Glenview.

WILLIAM R. MATTHEWS, department of public works, chief of police, Wilmette.

WILLIAM D. McJUNKIN, Winnetka.

RALPH R. OBENCHAIN, Evanston.

GEORGE SEEBACHER, North End Improvement association of the 45th ward.

L. Q. YOWELL, Lincoln-Belmont Booster.

South Side Wants Extension.

South siders also want an extension of their present superhighway facilities that now end at Jackson park. The present plans would provide fast and safe travel between Jackson park and the Indiana state line. A second safety road would extend southwest from the central business district with a connection to the Chicago airport.

In the house from these districts directly concerned with the south and southwest portions of the building program are the following: George Garry Noonan [D.], Charles J. Jenkins [R.], A. Andrew Torrence [R.], John C. Kluczynski [D.], James P. Boyle [D.], Michael A. Ruddy [R.], James Weber Linn [D.], Louis G. Berman [D.], William J. Warfield [R.], Richard J. Gormley [D.], Peter P. Jezierny [D.], William S. Finucane [R.], Michael E. Hannigan [D.], George A. Fitzgerald [D.], David I. Swanson [R.], John G. Ryan [D.], Adam S. Mioduski [D.], and Elmer Schnackenberg [R.].

Another List of Indorsers.

They will be given the following list of superhighway indorsers from their neighborhoods:

ROY F. HEALY, Ridge Civic council.

WILLIAM B. GIBSON, South Chicago Chamber of Commerce.

HERMAN ORDAS, Morgan Park Improvement association.

JOSEPH FIENBERG, South Side Business Men's association.

WILLIAM H. DOYLE, Grand Crossing Improvement association.

J. G. STRADER, 55th Street Business Men's association.

MRS. C. C. LOVELY, South Side Federation of Improvement associations.

O. H. BRULMAN, conservation council.

CLARENCE J. BOHLING, East Side Chamber of Commerce.

SEVERN GOLKOWSKI, South Chicago Y. M. C. A.

HARRY PON, North Roseland Improvement association.

L. O. STANSBURY, South End Reporter.

ALD. ARTHUR G. LINDELL [9th].

ALD. WILLIAM A. ROWAN [10th].

WILLIAM J. VENNING, South End Chamber of Commerce.

OSCAR E. ANDERSON, Gresham Business Men's association.

CARL G. BUCK, South Deering Improvement association.

JOHN GERINGER, Washington Heights Improvement association.

LAWRENCE HEYWORTH, South Shore Protective association.

SIDNEY GOLDSTEIN, Chesterfield Commercial club.

DR. H. J. URBANOWICZ, Central Council of Polish Organizations of South Chicago.

West suburban residents now have narrow and dangerous boulevards to travel to and from the loop. They want a pavement with continuous grade separation comparable functionally with the outer drives enjoyed by the north and south sides. The construction program includes such a project.

Representatives from West.

The west suburbanites are represented in the house by John O. Hruby [D.], John J. Gorman [D.], Arnold L. Lund [R.], Arthur M. Kaindl [D.], Stanley A. Halick [D.], and William Thon [R.]. They will be given a list of the following names as elevated highway indorsers from their district:

O. W. LEKSTRUM, North Oak Park Improvement association.

O. B. BLACK, Oak Park Coöperative club.

RANDALL R. COOPER, Oak Park Chamber of Commerce.

B. H. CHILDS, Northwest Oak Park Community club.

F. C. OGDON, Southern District association, Oak Park.

J. ERNEST SHELBY, Oak Leaves.

ROBERT L. HOLMES, Oak Park elementary schools.

C. H. BULLEN, Franklin Park Kiwanis club.

THOMAS M. FILAS, Cicero.

ROY F. NIX, River Forest.

A. L. HALL, River Forest Leaves.

HENRY C. RIECK, Forest Park Chamber of Commerce.

ERWIN THOENDEL, Forest Park Safety council.

Some of the civic leaders, in addition to the presentation of their names by the motor club, are wiring directly to their representatives, "Vote for superhighways to save lives."

Nazis to Electrify Farms Without Cost to Farmers

BERLIN, June 24.—(AP)—The Nazis aim to make life easier for the overburdened farmer and his wife by subsidizing electrification of German farms. An announcement today said that needed electrical appliances worth $70,000,000 would be made available to farmers without cost during the next five years.

BLEEDS TO DEATH AS HOOK ON AUTO CUTS HIS NECK

Norman Simons, 24 years old, 1319 South Christiana avenue, stepped off a street car yesterday at 15th street and Wabash avenue and walked against the side of a passing truck. An iron hook, protruding several inches from the truck, struck his neck. Simons bled to death before he could be taken to a hospital. The driver was Marcel Sutter, 5918 Thorndale avenue.

John Breen, 45, of 4763 Wentworth avenue, a car washer, was killed when he was crushed by a truck that was being backed up in the Borden-Wieland company garage at 315 West 70th street. The driver was Donald Hansen, 4153 West Crystal street.

An unidentified man, about 40 years old, evidently struck by a hit and run car, was found dead early today in Irving Park road near Kilpatrick avenue. He was well dressed, and had $6 and a raffle ticket on a car from Gladstone post, American Legion, 5300 Milwaukee avenue, in his pockets.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday, 390 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 303 were killed in Chicago where 9,749 were injured in the same period.

MASKED GUNMEN HOLD UP SCORE IN HANDBOOK RAID

Four men held up a handbook last evening in a room above the Radio Grille at 106 East Hubbard street. Witnesses said three of the men entered the room by two different doors. They wore handkerchiefs over their faces and carried pistols.

After ordering twenty customers to line up facing the wall with their hands above their heads, two of the men methodically frisked every one present, pocketing the money. The bandits got $1,000 in money and checks and a ring containing a large diamond from the proprietor, Harry Grossman, witnesses said.

THE MASSACRE Chicago's 1939 Trafic Toll

More than 98% of the city's automobile fatalities are of a nature physically impossible on an elevated highway.

WINNETKA VOTES $100,000 IN BONDS FOR NEW SCHOOL

By a vote of 195 to 100, Winnetka residents yesterday approved a proposal to issue $100,000 in bonds to be applied to the building of a new grade school at Willow road and Glendale avenue.

The village is seeking a Public Works administration grant of $112,500 to be added to its own funds. If the school is built it will replace Horace Mann school in the business section. The village plan commission has recommended that the Mann school site be used for a new postoffice building, a playground and a municipal parking lot.

TWO PASSERSBY SHOT AS POLICE SEIZE SPEEDERS

Two passersby were slightly wounded by police bullets last night during a six mile automobile chase on the north side. Detectives James Amman and George Green of the East Chicago station were cruising when they saw a speeding car at Huron and Orleans streets. They pursued it around the block and forced it to the curb. Green said he stepped out, gun in hand, and told the men he was a policeman.

The speeders then threw the car in gear, Green said, and almost ran him down. He and Amman took up the chase again. The fugitives stopped at Chicago and Racine avenues after the police began firing.

The speeders identified themselves as Ray Erikson, 31 years old, 3843 Adams street, and Harry Courtney, 21, of 257 West 48th place. They said they had been drinking. The two wounded were Narcisso March, 42, of 446 North Sangamon street, and Joseph Camosto, 22, of 1043 Grand avenue. They were treated at the Henrotin hospital.

OVERLAPPING TAX UNITS RAPPED IN TALK BY CASSIDY

Reduction of the number of overlapping public services and taxing units was demanded last night by John E. Cassidy, attorney general of Illinois. He spoke at the commencement ceremonies of the John Marshall Law school, urging revision of the Illinois constitution to permit more efficient government. Degrees were conferred upon sixty-five prospective lawyers. Postgraduate scholarships were awarded by Dean Edward T. Lee to John B. Lampe and Otto P. Bauer.

VERA CRUZ LIVES BOTH IN PRESENT AND ANCIENT PAST

Settled in 1519, It's Busy Seaport Today.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, June 24.—Besides offering the usual inducements of venerable churches and other historically interesting points, this city has two other attributes which make a sojourn in it a fairly pleasant experience. They are the absence of heat and mosquitos. The presence of either in an extreme degree might make more difficult the task of assessing the city's part in Mexico's national life.

With its population of 50,000, Vera Cruz is the nation's leading seaport and next to Mexico City, the nation's most famed metropolis.

The city came into prominence in the United States of America when Gen. Winfield Scott occupied it in the spring of 1847 during the Mexican war, and again sixty odd years later when the United States of America sent the marines down here to do a little janitor work. Local sages express a hope for a return trip by the marines, as they say it was the only time the place ever has been clean.

[American marines and sailors occupied Vera Cruz on April 22, 1914, the occupation growing out of an insult to the American flag and indignities to which Americans in Mexico had been subjected.]

Modern Equipment.

While the city perhaps has been overpublicized, it is on the other hand more than some writers have stated—just a place to switch from boat to train.

The coast line is virtually straight, with the Atlantic proper stretching away to the east. The docks, warehouses and shipping facilities were modernized years ago by an English outfit. Inland connections are limited to one railroad across the isthmus, and the air, rail and motor lines to Mexico City. All freight and passenger trafic from the east to Mexico City clears through here.

Hotels, restaurants, bars and street cars are just about what are expected of a small city, but of course not up to American standard. Villa del Mar is a nice recreation, dance and swimming place on the beach at the southern limit of town. Other beaches are five miles farther south, near Boca del Rio, which is the end of the car road to the south. The latter place is famed as an oyster gathering spot.

Fishing also is quite an industry here. Fish nets, boats and other equipment dot the waterfront. Many boats from all nations pass in and out to sea. Port authorities are quite strict on health requirements of incoming passengers. While water and milk should be boiled before drinking and other precautions necessary in tropical countries taken, the general conditions of health are said to be good.

Interesting Historically.

Settled in 1519 by the Spanish explorers, the city has many old churches and other interesting points for the archeologically inclined. The arena of modern activity is centered around the city square in the heart of town, two blocks from the ocean. Here the leading hotels, sidewalk eating places and principal commercial houses are gathered.

Two evenings a week the band plays from the balcony of the government building on the east side of the square from 8 o'clock to 10 o'clock. These are the occasions for local color to break loose. It is promenade time in Vera Cruz.

A Romantic Occasion.

The town turns out. There are exercise and open air for the aged, and romance for the young. Flower venders are about. When a boy spots a girl he likes he buys a flower and presents it. If the girl takes the flower, the couple moves to one of the many benches inside the square.

If she refuses the boy calls it a night, or rather is supposed to, as the custom goes. When the benches are pretty well filled and at an unexpected moment, a city electrician cuts off all lights for several seconds. These moments offer the romantically inclined an opportunity to whisper sweet nothings and perhaps to steal a kiss.

Winning Milkmaid

MISS EVELYN EISENHUTH.

Evelyn Eisenhuth, 19 years old, of Spencer street, Aurora, yesterday was selected as the comeliest and most adept milkmaid at the cattle show held at the Home for Convalescent and Crippled Children in West Chicago. The show was sponsored by three counties, Du Page, Kane, and De Kalb. Miss Eisenhuth won over twenty other contestants. Second and third places, respectively, were won by Virginia Kress, 20, and Mary Nagle, 19, both of West Chicago. The three girls qualified for the milkmaid contest to be held at the state cattle show in Mooseheart next Saturday.

MacMillan Sails on His 18th Arctic Expedition

Boothbay Harbor, Me., June 24.—(AP)—Flying Maine's new marine flag, the 18th Arctic expedition of Commander Donald B. MacMillan sailed today for a scientific exploration of Greenland glaciers. The schooner Bowdoin, carrying the explorer and his crew of twelve collegians and officers, moved out of the harbor on an eleven weeks' cruise of 6,000 miles to measure glacier movement in the vicinity of Disko Bay, Greenland.

BORAH AND LUCAS LEAD ASSAULT ON LENDING SCHEME

Review South American Record of Defaults.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—Senator William E. Borah [R., Idaho] took the senate floor today to fire a blast at President Roosevelt's proposal to lend $500,000,000 to foreign governments. The proposed loans are a part of Mr. Roosevelt's new 3 billion 860 million dollar lending-spending program.

Senator Scott Lucas [D., Ill.] joined in criticism of the loans. Only an apathetic defense was offered by Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley [D., Ky.] and Senator Robert Wagner [D., N. Y.], ardent New Deal supporters. In the house Representative J. William Ditter [R., Pa.] also denounced the proposal.

Senator Borah pointed out that no attempt whatever has been made to adjust the South American loans already in default to the United States.

Recalls Huge Defaults.

"This plan would simply turn over vast amounts of the taxpayers' money for the South American politicians to play with," he declared. "No new foreign loans should be granted until provision has been made to take care of those already long overdue.

[Latin American countries have defaulted on about 1¼ billions in bonds held by American investors.]

Senator Lucas expressed immediate approval of Borah's remarks.

"I think every one is familiar with the unsound, unstable conditions in South America in the last few years," he told the senate. "It is one thing for this government to lend money to our own citizens and quite another thing to delegate a wide latitude of power to the Export-Import bank or the Reconstruction Finance corporation and let them loan money outside the confines of the United States without securing approval of the senate."

"Plan to Pluck Taxpayers."

In the house Representative Ditter declared in a statement that the foreign loans plan is another New Deal attempt "to pluck the American taxpayer to save the face of an administration bankrupt of ideas except to spend and spend."

"It is even more than that," he said. "It is a direct violation of a pledge made by Mr. Roosevelt to the people of the United States in St. Louis on Oct. 21, 1932. There, in a campaign speech—after caustic reference to Latin American loans made by private interests during the 1920's as 'the abuse of American investors'—Mr. Roosevelt promised it would be his job to 'prevent the hard earned dollars of American investors from being frittered away in foreign fields with the encouragement of the federal government.'"

Despite the defaulting record of South American republics, Ditter continued, the President has stated that he believes these nations are entitled to participate in the benefits of his new disguised spending scheme.

"Moreover, he made no mention of a very vital difference," Ditter said. "The investors who lent their money to the Latin-American countries in the 1920s did so voluntarily, with their eyes open, and fully aware that they were taking a risk. They knew they would be out of pocket in the event of default.

"But if the New Deal puts over this new lending scheme, the taxpayers will be the goat. In the case of default, it is the taxpayer who will have to dig down in his already threadbare pocket and make good the loss. This may be called the good neighbor policy, but in view of the heavy losses which Americans already have sustained in Latin-American loans, it appears more to be a sucker policy.

Senator Robert A. Taft [R., O.] joined in the chorus of criticism of the President's new pump priming program.

The proposed loans to railroads, under which the United States will own equipment and lease it to the roads, looks like an entering wedge for government ownership, Taft declared.

Default on Bonds

South American countries shown in gray have defaulted on bonds.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—The latest available statistics on defaulted South American bonds, as reported by the Foreign Bondholders Protective Council, Inc., follows:

50 INJURED WHEN STAND FALLS AT POLITICAL RALLY

Shelbyville, Ky., June 24.—(AP)—Fifty persons were injured today when the speakers' stand collapsed a minute after Lieut. Gov. Keen Johnson completed the opening speech in his campaign for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

State Finance Commissioner J. Dan Talbot of Bardstown was injured seriously and taken to a Louisville hospital for treatment.

At the Kings Daughters hospital attendants said about forty persons received treatment for cuts and bruises.

Chief of Police Roy Jones estimated a dozen persons received first aid from doctors at the scene.

As Johnson turned away from the microphones, witnesses said, the speakers' platform, which is a part of the grandstand at the Shelby county fair grounds, appeared to slip toward the ground, piling all those on the stand into a heap. Johnson was not hurt.

33D DIVISION VETS ASSAIL TINKERING WITH NEUTRALITY

Members of the 33d Division War Veterans' association, meeting yesterday in the Morrison hotel for their thirteenth annual reunion, passed a resolution protesting any attempts to amend the nation's neutrality laws. So-called liberalization of the neutrality act, the resolution pointed out, might embroil this country in another world war.

Nearly 3,000 veterans, who were members of National Guard units when mobilized for service in France, have registered for the two day convention. Twice as many are expected to be on hand for today's activities.

Warns Veterans of Perils.

Before the neutrality resolution was passed, Ramond L. Keegan of Chicago, retiring president of the association, told the veterans it was their duty to combat all subversive influences in this country.

"The time now has come to broaden our perspective, to recognize more fully the intense problem America is now confronted with, and to dedicate ourselves to the development of a new and wider vision of patriotism," Keegan said.

"Right this minute, the future of America is being decided. And in many of our most acute and important problems, alien and ism voices have been too predominant. Not only in Washington, but throughout the largest cities in this country, there are too many Charlie McCarthys in politics who serve as rubber stamps for greedy local organizations."

32,000 In Division.

Of the 43,000 men who were in the 33d division, 32,000 are still alive. Forty per cent of the members are from Cook county.

Speakers at the association's annual banquet last night included Junius B. Wood, former war correspondent, and Edward Hayes, former national commander of the American Legion. The reunion will end today after a memorial service for the division's dead. Oscar Carlstrom, former attorney general, will be the chief speaker at the service.

FOG HALTS FLIGHT OF CLIPPER ON NORTHERN ROUTE

Held in Canada as Sister Ship Leaves Azores.

New York, June 25 [Sunday].—(AP)—The four motored flying boat Atlantic Clipper droned toward New York today above the Atlantic, while her sister ship, the Yankee Clipper, was fog-bound at Shediac, New Brunswick, on a flight to Europe along the most northerly airlane.

The Atlantic Clipper, flying the southerly all year course, paused for two hours at Horta, the Azores, yesterday to refuel, then headed westward again at 2:42 p. m., Chicago time. At 4:30 a. m. the ship gave her position as 794 miles out of New York. Head winds sometimes were 52 miles an hour.

Brings Back Previewers.

She is bringing back to the United States part of the group of newspaper writers and radio men who made a special "preview flight" to Europe last week, preliminary to Pan-American Airways' inauguration of regular passenger service Wednesday.

The Yankee Clipper, battling fog over the Gulf of St. Lawrence, traveled 601 miles to Shediac from Port Washington, N. Y., in 5 hours 31 minutes, landing there at 1:58 p. m. yesterday on a mail trip, with twenty-one federal officials and observers aboard.

Off to Botwood Today.

Capt. Harold E. Gray planned to start the next leg, to Botwood, Newfoundland, at 5 a. m. today, and to arrive in Southampton, England, tomorrow afternoon following a stop at Foynes, Ireland.

His course over this great circle route, which was pioneered twelve years ago by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's solo hop to Paris, is 3,418 miles long. The over-ocean flight from Botwood to Foynes is 1,995 miles.

The Atlantic Clipper was expected to reach her Port Washington, N. Y., base this morning.

CLIPPER TO TAKE BISHOP SHEIL ON VISIT TO VATICAN

Bishop Bernard J. Sheil will be the first Catholic prelate to cross the Atlantic ocean by airplane. He will fly on the Atlantic Clipper July 26 in response to a summons to the Vatican by Pope Pius XII. The pope wishes to discuss the Catholic Youth organization which Bishop Sheil founded in Chicago in 1930 and of which he is now national director.

Bishop Bernard J. Sheil.

When the Clipper flights were established by Pan-American Airways, Bishop Shell said, he found it possible to remain in Chicago until after the C. Y. O. international boxing matches on July 19, between champions of Ireland and the Chicago C. Y. O., and still comply with the pontiff's summons. The tour will include visits to principal European cities where he will study slum conditions and youth activities.

CROWD OF 50,000 SEE JACK BENNY IN STREET PARADE

Fifty thousand persons lined Waukegan's streets last night to watch a parade in which Jack Benny rode with other stars of the radio and screen. Others were his wife, Mary Livingston; Dorothy Lamour, Phil Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Andy Devine, and Eddie [Rochester] Anderson. The parade was part of the program in honor of Benny's return to his home town. The première of his new picture, "Man About Town," will be presented today in the Genesee theater in Waukegan.

ASSEMBLY FACES JAM AS SESSION DRAWS TO CLOSE

Must Make Decisions on Sales Tax, Relief.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—The sixty-first regular session of the general assembly enters its twenty-second and final week on Monday, with last minute decisions to be reached on such topics as relief, superhighways, old age pensions, and extension of the sales tax for another two years.

Sine die adjournment is scheduled for midnight of June 30—next Friday. The final night, however, generally brings such a pile of unfinished business that the clock is stopped about 11 p. m. and work goes on in defiance of the provision that legislative action after July 1 must be taken by two-thirds vote in each house.

An effort to avoid the closing jam will be made this year. Whether it is successful depends upon the speed attained early in the week.

Relief Outlay Set at $72,000,000.

State aid on the relief load has been fixed by the senate at $72,000,000 for the next twenty-four months, to be expended at a rate of not more than $4,000,000 monthly. Such expenditure, of course, would exhaust the sum in 18 months, and an effort will be made in the house to amend the bill so as to limit the spending to not more than $3,000,000 monthly.

The life of the commission itself is at stake in a senate bill now on second reading in the house. If it passes the commission will continue its work for another two years.

The senate has the problem of passing on a house bill fixing the monthly old age pension—which now averages about $19—at a minimum of $30. The house sent the bill to the senate and then failed to pass a $40,000,000 appropriation increase to pay the increased bill.

Other highly important matters on the house agenda are the bills for the superhighway program for Chicago and Cook county, and the public service building corporation measures for slum clearance. Both sets of bills have been approved by the senate.

Income Tax Bill Pending.

Although Republicans have criticized the sales tax on many occasions it is believed the senate bills for continuance of the 3 cent levy will be approved in the house.

A flat 2 per cent state income tax bill is pending on the senate calendar. It is ready for a roll call early in the week. Its sponsor, Senator Richard J. Daley [D., Chicago], thinks it would produce $60,000,000 annually. Its chances of approval before sine die adjournment are not considered bright.

Increase of workmen's compensation by 10 per cent of the weekly wage is pending on the senate calendar after passing the house. Both labor and industry are behind this plan and passage is predicted.

A program to remedy conditions at the St. Charles School for Boys by construction of a wall around the institution and by changing legal provisions for delinquents will be called in the house.

KILLED IN FALL FROM WAGON.

Benton, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—John S. Anderson, 58 years old, was killed late yesterday when he fell from a load of barley on a farm near Benton.

CONTINUE SEARCH FOR ARSONISTS IN FIREWORKS BLAST

Authorities continued a search yesterday for three arsonists who set fire to a warehouse of the Acme Fireworks company at 1st and North avenues in Proviso township Friday, causing damage of $25,000. They tied up Frank Folisi, a watchman, and carried him several hundred feet from the building before starting the fire. An attempt also was made to set fire to another warehouse of the company.

Folisi was questioned yesterday by Frank E. Doherty, acting state fire marshal, and later submitted to a lie detector test at the request of the authorities. Harry Cohen, president of the company, has blamed competitors for the vandalism.

A warning was issued yesterday to spectators at the fire who gathered up unexploded fireworks. The Illinois Society for the Prevention of Blindness announced that the unexploded fireworks are doubly dangerous because they have been saturated with gasoline and otherwise damaged.

3 BIG WEDDINGS DRAW INTEREST IN CHICAGOLAND

Miss Massey Becomes Bride of Mr. Ryerson.

BY JUDITH CASS.

Of the many weddings of interest to Chicagoans that took place yesterday the three largest were those of Miss Phoebe Massey to George W. Ryerson, in Winnetka; of Miss Kathrine McNulty to Henri V. Bouscaren, in Chicago, and of Miss Margaret Walker to George W. Dixon Jr., in Racine, Wis.

The Ryerson-Massey wedding was held in the gardens of the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ayres Boal, at 5 p. m., with a reception following. Later a supper for the twenty-four members of the bridal party and out of town guests was given in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Massey.

Miss Massey wore a gown of white satin trimmed with a collar of heirloom lace. She carried lilies of the valley. Mr. Ryerson, the son of Mrs. John A. Ryerson of Evanston, and his bride will live in Winnetka until fall, when they will move to the near north side.

Bouscaren-McNulty.

Mr. Bouscaren and the elder daughter of the Joseph D. McNultys, who were married at noon in Our Lady of Mount Carmel church, also will spend the rest of the summer in Winnetka, and then will move to Chicago.

Miss McNulty wore a cream satin gown made with a tight bodice and gathered at the hips to fall back in a wide train. A cap of stephanotis held a tulle veil to her dark curls, and she carried a prayer book tied with sprays of stephanotis.

Mr. Bouscaren is the son of the Louis H. G. Bouscarens of Winnetka.

Dixon-Walker.

Miss Walker became the bride of Mr. Dixon in the Racine college chapel. She wore a flowing gown of white satin with a square neckline outlined with lace and a coronet and long veil of more lace. A reception by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Willard T. Walker, followed at the Racine Country club. After a wedding trip to England Mr. Dixon and his bride will be at home at 1448 Lake Shore drive.

A charming frock of glazed organdie with a billowing skirt and puffed sleeves was worn by Miss Nancy Merrick, daughter of the Clinton Merricks' of Evanston, for her marriage to Phil E. Gilbert Jr., of Evanston, in St. Mark's church last night. A reception followed at the Merrick home.

Mr. Gilbert and his bride will spend the summer touring the west and will go to New York to live in September.

Knudsen-Siqueland.

The young women who attended Miss Alyce Siqueland when she became the bride of Ditlef Knudsen in the Oak Park Evangelical Lutheran church yesterday afternoon wore hoopskirted frocks of white net over taffeta, trimmed with red velvet ribbon.

The bride, who was given in marriage by Jens Paasche, wore white Chantilly lace and a tulle tiara and fingertip length veil. Mr. Paasche and the bride's mother, Mrs. Tryggve A. Siqueland, are engaged to be married.

Mr. Knudsen and his bride are going to Norway for a month and then will go to Ankara, Turkey, where he will be connected with the Norwegian legation.

The former Florence Helen Clark chose a summery gown of white lace and chiffon over white satin for her marriage to John Phelan Gorman yesterday morning in St. Luke's church, River Forest. The bride is a daughter of the Herbert A. Clarks of River Forest. Mr. Gorman's parents are the John S. Gormans of Oak Park.

Purdy-Clark.

The elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin Clark of Hinsdale, Miss Marjorie Lee Clark, and John Dean Purdy III., were married in a pretty ceremony in the Hinsdale Union church yesterday afternoon. Mr. Purdy is taking his bride on a month's cruise. They will live in Evanston.

Still another pretty bride of yesterday was Miss Eileen Nancy Ryan, daughter of the Clement D. Ryans of 3240 Lake Shore drive, whose marriage to David Chapman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arms Chapman of Evanston, took place at 4 p. m. in the Lady chapel of St. Luke's church, Evanston.

MISS MARY BEAN BECOMES BRIDE OF GEO. SPEIDEL

Miss Mary Bean and George Speidel were married yesterday in a quiet twilight ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Bean, in Brookfield. The Rev. Alfred F. Waldo, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Riverside, officiated. Mrs. Carl Speidel was matron of honor, and Robert Bean, brother of the bride, served as best man. The bride's father is director of the Chicago Zoological park. Mr. Speidel is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Speidel of Brookfield.

KILLED IN FALL IN HOME.

FEW NEW DEAL BIGWIGS KNOW WAR FIRST HAND

Only 1 of 23 Served with U. S. Troops in Battle.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—Most of the inner circle New Dealers who support President Roosevelt in his belligerent gestures toward the Rome-Berlin axis have no personal knowledge of what modern warfare is like.

Research in biographies indicates that of ten cabinet members only three had any kind of service in the armed forces of the United States in the world war. Of twelve others, who form the New Deal advisory counsel, only two had active service. Of the five who were signed for service one, Attorney General Frank Murphy, actually was in battle in France.

The President's information on European affairs nowadays is transmitted principally through Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy in London and Ambassador William C. Bullitt in Paris. In 1918 Kennedy was 30 years old. He was not in service. From 1914 to 1917 he was president of the Columbia Trust company of Boston.

Bullitt in State Department.

From 1917 to 1919 he was assistant general manager of the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation.

Bullitt was born in 1891, the son of a wealthy resident of Philadelphia. In 1917 he prepared to go to Europe as a war correspondent, but instead became an assistant secretary in the state department and served through the war, and after, in that post.

Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin V. Cohen, the President's ghost writers and general handy men, had no war service. Corcoran was born in December, 1900, and was in school during the war. Cohen, 23 years old in 1917, was rejected for poor eyesight and was attorney for the United States Shipping board in the war years.

Hopkins in Red Cross Work.

Harry L. Hopkins, secretary of commerce and former WPA head, also is reported to have been rejected for defective vision. He was in relief and Red Cross work during the war. In this connection it is noted that thousands of Americans, turned down for poor vision, joined up with other allied armies.

Another close adviser of Mr. Roosevelt is Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes. In 1917 he was 43 years old. He went to France, but as a Y. M. C. A. worker.

Attorney General Murphy was a captain of artillery overseas. Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring enlisted in the tank corps, but was kept in the United States as a personnel officer after being promoted to a lieutenancy. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., son of a wealthy father who endowed him with a trust fund, served as a lieutenant, junior grade, in the navy.

Hull, Swanson in Congress.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson were beyond the normal military age and in congress during the war. Postmaster General James A. Farley was 29, a politician and business man, during the war. There is no mention of service in his biographical sketches.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was 29 years old in 1917. He has no record of service in the armed forces of the United States. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins did her part by acting as a member of the New York council of organization for war service.

One of the most influential New Dealers is Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson. He was 25 years old in 1917, and there is no war service in his record. Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the federal reserve board, was born in 1890. During the war he was a banker, business man and chairman of the Logan City, Utah, council of defense.

Frank Has No War Record.

Jerome N. Frank, former Chicago lawyer and member of the Securities and Exchange commission, as well as the author of much New Deal legislation, has no war record. He was 28 years old in 1917. David Lilienthal, head of the Tennessee Valley authority, was young for the service. He was born in 1899.

Jesse H. Jones, chief of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, was 43 years old and a Texas banker at the outbreak of the war. He was active in Red Cross work during the combat period. Isador Lubin, New Deal economist, was 21 in 1917, when he was an instructor at the University of Missouri. He became statistician for the United States Food administration and an expert for the war industries board in 1918.

Seventeen Had No Service.

The most prominent New Dealers with war records are Justice Felix Frankfurter of the Supreme court, and Leon Henderson, Securities and Exchange commission member. Prof. Frankfurter was a major in the judge advocate general's department, a noncombatant service. Henderson served in the ordnance department, also a noncombatant service.

President Roosevelt was assistant secretary of the navy in the war years. He did not resign and follow the example of Theodore Roosevelt in seeking battle line service, although he was 35 years old and in good health.

In summary: Of twenty-three New Dealers now most prominent, including Mr. Roosevelt, six may lay claim to some form of war service. Seventeen had none. Only one, Murphy, is equipped by experience to understand the unromantic attitude toward war that marks the old soldier.

WORKING ON HIS LAWN, HE DIGS UP WEDDING RING LOST 20 YEARS

Belleville, Ill., June 24.—(AP)—George Wettengel was working so hard moving earth for the lawn of his new house that his neighbor, John Roth, thought he'd kid him a bit.

"Finding any treasure?" Roth asked.

"No, but I found this gold ring," Wettengel answered.

It proved to be Roth's wedding ring, lost twenty years ago.

HORNER HOPES TO PUT OVER BILL FOR ILLINOIS TVA

$5,000,000 Power Plan Still in Senate.

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—It was indicated here tonight that an attempt to establish a little TVA in Illinois, favored by the Horner administration, might be made in the closing days of the legislative session.

The proposal is that the state, at an estimated cost of $5,000,000, authorize construction of three waterpower plants along the Illinois waterway. One would be at Brandon road dam, one at Dresden Island dam, both near Joliet, and the third at Starved Rock dam, near Ottawa.

The total horse power of this state operated enterprise would be 43,650. Carter Jenkins, chief engineer for the state department of highways, who drew plans for the plants, has estimated that with the present flow of water 175,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity could be produced annually.

"This electricity," he said recently, "would be used to supply fourteen state institutions which now buy power. The surplus power would be sold wholesale to utility companies."

Two Bills in Legislature.

The project has been presented to the legislature only in sketchy form. Two bills have been introduced in the house and senate. One provides for establishing an Illinois waterpower administration with five members. The chairman of the commission would be the state director of public works and the four other members would be appointed for four year terms by the governor. The body would be given specific authority to start the plants on the waterway. The second bill would appropriate $30,000 for expenses of the administration.

Senate Measures Alive.

Both measures, however, are still alive in the senate and ready to go to third reading, possibly on Monday.

The house supposedly had squelched the measures during the last few days. The appropriation plan was killed when the house voted to table all bills calling for expenditures. The measure to create the commission was apparently buried in the enrolling and engrossing committee.

Opponents say there is danger that the bill may be passed without adequate deliberation by the legislators. The campaign for them has been quiet. Utility companies have not made protests, supposedly because their officials believe the waterflow available would not be sufficient to provide production even close to the estimate.

It is recognized, however, that the bills, if passed, would put the state directly into competition with private power firms and form the groundwork for extension of socialistic activity into much broader fields.

Federal Approval Sought.

Elaborate blue prints have been drawn and used in an application to the federal government for permission to erect the proposed plants. Such permission is necessary because the government controls navigable waters.

The Brandon road project would have horse power of 13,000 and would cost $1,118,000. That at Dresden Island would have horse power of 13,650 and would cost $1,580,000. The Starved Rock plant would have 17,000 horse power and cost $2,300,000.

ASKS ROOSEVELT TO CALL WORLD PARLEY ON TRADE

MIDHURST, England, June 24.—(AP)—Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, said today he would like to see President Roosevelt call the nations of the world together "to end the doctrine of economic nationalism."

Butler, addressing the Dunford House association on international affairs, said: "The doctrine of economic nationalism is fatal first to prosperity and then to peace. The cry should not be buy British or buy American, but sell British and sell American and buy where you can."

The Dunford House association is a memorial to Richard Cobden, 19th century English economist, who was born at Midhurst.

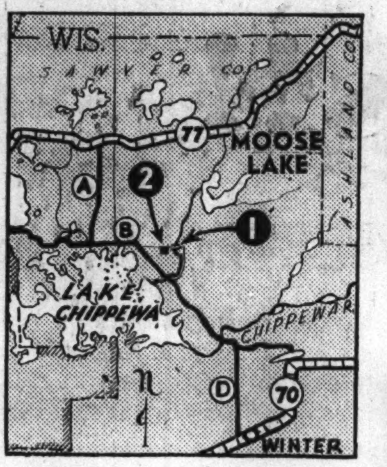
Possemen surround cabin where Ray Olson slew two Wisconsin deputy sherifs a week ago. Earlier searchers for the slayer had fired at a man who came out of the brush and started across a bridge leading toward the shack.



Arrow No. 1 points to bridge near Hayward, Wis., where possemen surprised Olson. Arrow No. 2 locates the cabin, about a mile from the bridge where Olson killed the two deputy sherifs.

Unaware that her husband was sought after the killings, Mrs. Ray Olson is shown in the county jail at Hayward, where she is being kept for questioning.

200 on His Trail

Hayward, Wis., June 24.—[Special.]—Two hundred possemen tramped through the woods in the Moose lake region, twenty-five miles east of Hayward, all day today without getting a glimpse of Ray Olson. Olson killed two men last Saturday when they sought to arrest him for automobile theft and has been hunted in Sawyer county ever since. He has been sighted three times.

Olson was last seen at dawn today when he slipped out of the brush and started to trot across a Chippewa river bridge leading to the timberland shack where he lived for two years. Undersherif James Berrard and three deputies were guarding the bridge.

When Olson reached the center of the bridge Berrard called "Halt." The fugitive ran and the officers fired, but their bullets did not stop the man. Bloodhounds were put on the trail with little success. Tonight Sherif George Seehuetter has a circle of possemen around a five mile area. The search will be resumed at dawn.

WISCONSIN YOUTH GUILTY AS SLAYER OF SOAP SELLER

Akron, Colo., June 24.—(AP)—A district court jury late today convicted Ellsworth E. Medberry of first degree murder and recommended life imprisonment for the hitch-hike shooting of John T. Gray Jr.

The 22 year old hitch-hiker from Fond du Lac, Wis., claimed Gray, 32 years old, Colorado Springs soap salesman, was shot accidentally in a fight in rural school garage March 10.

During two days on the stand Medberry firmly held to his story that Gray was shot while the two struggled for possession of Medberry's pistol.

Their struggle started, Medberry testified, because Gray attempted to leave Medberry at the school after informing the youth his company did not permit him to carry hitch-hikers.

The youth's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Medberry of Fond du Lac, were in the courtroom during final arguments.

Medberry was arrested March 18 after he had hitch-hiked back to Fond du Lac.

AFRAID ELECTRIC CURRENT WOULD GET HIM; IT DOES

Canadian Meets Fate He Had Long Dreaded.

LITTLE CURRENT, Ont., June 24.—[U. P.]—Al Griffith, an electrician, was dead today, a victim of the hazards of his own trade and the very fate he had dreaded with increasing morbidity for several years.

Griffith, 40 years old, was electrocuted Thursday night as he lay struggling in a pool nearby a short-circuited electric plant he had been repairing, but it was not until today that authorities were able to piece together the details of his death.

Worried—As Usual.

With Albert Muckler he had gone to the Beagle Power company plant to repair a broken transformer. As usual, he was nervous and worried about the high voltage and the risk of electrocution.

Muckler discovered that the transformer itself was short-circuited and that the small fence surrounding the equipment was electrically alive. He warned Griffith who, panic stricken, dropped his tools and ran for a gate in the fence. As he stumbled through it, one of his steel climbing spurs got caught and he was pitched into a pool of water. The water provided a perfect ground and the current bolted at and around him as he lay dying. Countless thousands of volts were surging through his body and he quickly died.

Warning Saves Wife.

Muckler was unable to move from his position near the transformer for forty-five minutes until the power was shut off.

"I want to forget it," was his only comment on the tragedy.

Muckler was credited with saving the life of Griffith's wife, who, seeing him fall, rushed to his aid but was warned back by Muckler.

"Stand back, or you will be gone, too," he screamed at her.

Drexel Paul and his bride, the former Miss Margaret Delano.

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 24.—[Special.]—Mindful that his own wedding had been overshadowed by a distant but important relative, President Roosevelt today stayed away from the marriage of his second cousin, Miss Margaret Delano, and Drexel Paul of Philadelphia.

On March 17, 1905, Mr. Roosevelt came off second best at his own wedding because of the presence of Theodore Roosevelt, then President.

When the young couple marched down the aisle of the Church of the Messiah [Episcopal] at nearby Rhinebeck, N. Y., this morning, the President was breakfasting with his mother in his family home on the banks of the Hudson, twelve miles to the south. He had planned to go to the wedding, but remembering that he had been dwarfed at his own nuptials by the presidency, decided at the last minute to let the young couple be the center of attraction.

In the afternoon the President motored to the home of the bride, the daughter of his first cousin, Lyman Delano, and took a place in the receiving line at the wedding reception in Barrytown, N. Y.

SLAYS SUBWAY ENGINEER AFTER FIGHT IN TAVERN

Henry Izzo, 33 years old, a subway engineer, was shot and killed early today in a fight with another man in front of 2633 Taylor street, Izzo's own gun jammed and the killer escaped. The story of the shooting was told by a witness, John Ciccone, 28, of 905 South Kedzie avenue.

Izzo and Ciccone had been to a wedding in Cicero. On the way to Izzo's home at 1009 South Hamilton avenue, they stopped at a tavern at Roosevelt road and Campbell avenue. There a man identified as Frank quarreled with Izzo and hit him.

Later as Izzo and Ciccone were driving to the latter's home the same man curbed their car in front of the Taylor street address. He and Izzo alighted. He struck Izzo again, and then shot him. Izzo tried to fire his own revolver twice, but it jammed. Ciccone told police he didn't know what the men had quarreled about.

CHALLENGE AHEAD!

By CALEB

IF you were graduating from college now, would you feel—as many young people do—that there are few, if any, opportunities ahead?

Since all men and women have great difficulty in viewing things for the long range, how can we expect boys and girls in college to have perspective?

We can't.

But it is profitable to have perspective. A lifetime is short in the scale of eternity. But from the graduating platform it may loom long. Every dramatic incident, every minor convulsion in local and world politics, brings nearer the day when uncertainties will lessen, when adjustments will for a time have been made, and the world may once again move forward more comfortably.

Until that time comes, precious months—or even years—may be turned to good account, or irreparably wasted, by possessors of shiny new degrees.

The greatest tragedy of depression has been not wasted money, but wasted lives. Not lost prosperity, but lost spirit, lost will, lost courage, and lost objectives.

Youths who will work, even if there is no immediately profitable work to be done, will be standing with tools in their heads and hands when the politico-economic earthquakes subside into normal quietude.

Opportunities lie ahead as great as any that have yet been in this world. They are in the realms of science, business, agriculture, medicine, preaching, teaching. They are in all fields.

Some day we shall have light without heat—transportation without sound and waste weight. We shall have air conditioning without shock to the system; whole winters without colds. We shall have farming with less than fourteen hours a day work. We shall have business without strife. Cyclical swings will be gentler. There will be world trade as there is now interstate commerce. Parents will go to school to learn a little of child-rearing, and adults to learn something of state-making and world-building; for in these every person will some day play his part.

But none of these things will fall full-blown into our laps. They will be wrought ever so slowly out of human endeavor and struggle, one mite and bit at a time. And they will be wrought by youths of today, and youths not yet born, long after today.

The world is full of problems. A full life of opportunity is ahead for any capable person, young or old, who will diligently work to understand, instead of to condemn, his place in society.

THRONGS VIEW NUDE MOVIES AT PASTOR'S TRIAL

Minister's Wife Sobs as Raider Testifies.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 24.—[Special.]—Another capacity crowd is expected Monday in the courtroom of Judge Charles W. Fricke upon resumption of the trial of the Rev. Joe Jeffers and his brunet wife, Zella Joy, charged with morals offenses. When the trial adjourned for the week-end yesterday, more than 200 disappointed men and women were waiting outside in the corridors, hoping to get inside.

The highlight of yesterday's proceedings was the showing of a motion picture of a nude man and a nude woman, alleged to have been the evangelist and his wife. The two face a maximum sentence of fifteen years if convicted on all counts in the indictment. Their case is being heard by a "shock proof" jury of six women and six men.

Jury Asks Second Showing.

The motion picture was taken by a detective from the district attorney's office as he and other raiders broke into the Jeffers apartment in Hollywood. Jeffers sat quietly during the exhibition. His wife sobbed. The jury asked that the film be run a second time. Parts of the movie were hazy, but other parts were clear. The woman's face could not be recognized, but the man allegedly was identifiable as the evangelist.

The chief prosecution witness thus far has been Vincent Higgins, a blushing, husky detective from the district attorney's office. His arrest of Jeffers and Mrs. Jeffers was no haphazard affair, he said.

"There were complaints to our office that the Rev. Mr. Jeffers was planning to burn down his church, that he was suspected of smuggling, and finally, that he was holding wild parties in his apartment," testified Higgins. "So I took an apartment in the same building."

Tells of Starting Flirtation.

One day, the detective said, he flirted a little with Mrs. Jeffers, and she invited him to her apartment. There, he said, she showed him several samples of imported perfume with exotic names. Not long afterward, Higgins related, he was invited again to the Jeffers apartment, Mrs. Jeffers promising to provide a girl companion for him.

At the next meeting Higgins met Miss Marguerite Morgan, a beauty parlor operator. The Jefferses produced a book containing pornographic pictures, Higgins declared.

"I told them I was just a schoolboy about these things, and Mrs. Jeffers remarked that maybe I needed a teacher," continued Higgins.

Shortly afterward the Rev. Mr. Jeffers, Mrs. Jeffers, Higgins and Miss Morgan went into another room, Higgins and Miss Morgan as spectators. At a spoken signal from Higgins, fellow detectives broke into the apartment. One of the raiders took a fleeting movie shot as they dashed in.

One of the raiders, Detective Harry Dean, testified. He said Jeffers leaped up, tore his hair, and paced up and down the room in excitement. His wife first tried to hide under the bed, Dean said.

"I told her I'd turn my head like a gentleman while she dressed," testified Dean. "She went to the closet, but came out with a gun, and threatened to kill herself and me. But I finally got the gun."

FOUND DEAD BESIDE RAILROAD.

Plymouth, Ind., June 24.—[Special.]—Frank Gibbons of 229 Laflin street, Chicago, was found dead on the Nickel Plate railroad right of way near Tippecanoe, Ind., last night. He was released from jail about ten days ago after serving a ten day sentence for intoxication. Coroner L. W. Vore decided Gibbons fell from a Nickel Plate train.

U. OF C. EMPLOYE SINCE ITS FIRST YEAR RETIRES

Students wore swallow tail coats and striped trousers to classes when Thomas W. Dinsdale of 6225 Ingleside avenue went to work for the University of Chicago. Some of them had long beards. President William Rainey Harper kept his cows where the university chapel now stands. Co-eds were sternly forbidden to cross the street to the gymnasium in their bloomers unless they wore skirts over them.

That was in 1893, when the university was finishing its first year. Mr. Dinsdale, who is 68 years old, retired yesterday after forty-six years in the university's service. He was the school's oldest nonacademic employé in point of service. Friends and fellow workers in the engineering department gave him a wrist watch as a memento of his long service.

BULLET IS CLEW IN MYSTERIOUS SUITOR KILLING

Lansing, Mich., June 24.—(AP)—A .32 caliber bullet and the description of a scarfaced man were among the few clews state police held tonight in the mysterious slaying of George G. Hall, 50 year old Detroit oil promoter. The bullet was taken from Hall's body, found yesterday beside a lonely Shiawassee county lane.

Mrs. Ruby Doty, also known as Miss Ruby Colby and Mrs. Ruby Hall, told police a hitch-hiker shot Hall while in Hall's automobile on Thursday, disposed of his body and made love to her before releasing her in Grand Rapids. She is 32 years old, lives in Pinconning and had been Hall's companion on frequent trips through Michigan. She described the killer as 30 years old and having a two inch scar on his left cheek.

Mrs. Doty was freed by the killer, she said, when she promised to keep a date with him. She said he told her to go to a hotel room, the number of which he gave, and ask for John. A man whose first name is John occupied the room but had checked out, police reported today.

Ray Watkins of Gladwin, a business associate of Hall, was asked to appear at the inquest at Laingsburg on Monday. Capt. Ira H. Harmon of the state police said Watkins told police he had been with Mrs. Doty and Hall in Wayland a few hours before the killing and that Mrs. Doty had suggested that Hall divorce his wife and marry her, but Hall refused. Mrs. Doty, now at her home, also will be a witness.

DIES IN VETERANS' HOSPITAL.

Edward A. Kiessling, 47 years old, 6908 Cornell avenue, died yesterday in the Hines veterans' hospital. He was a former investigator for the County court.

SOCIAL WORKERS MAP NEW BILLION DOLLAR TAX LOAD

Start Home to Sell Their Schemes to Lawmakers.

BY WILLIAM FULTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Buffalo, N. Y., June 24.—[Special.]—More than a billion dollars a year would be extracted from the pockets of taxpayers if all the new spending schemes hatched here this week at the National Conference of Social Work were injected into the nation's economy.

With this spending propaganda dinned into their ears at 500 conference sessions, the 8,000 social workers wound up their meeting this afternoon and left for their homes.

The delegates were exhorted to go home and work actively in the political arena for vastly increased expenditures on social security, old age pensions, payments to children, new styles in kid glove handling of delinquents and a host of other proposals of "social significance."

La Guardia Urges More Spending.

Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York City, who has enjoyed spending a billion and a half in Roosevelt easy dollars in his own bailiwic, headed the list of platform spellbinders who urged the social workers to get into politics in order to stave off the economy drive in congress.

The Roosevelt planning brigade from Washington invaded the city and the convention was dominated by federal pay rollers. Employés of private agencies had to take a back seat.

Only once in a while did even a mildly critical note slip into the conference. There was such an instance in the speech of Ernest K. Lindley, a magazine writer and Roosevelt biographer. The delegates greeted his remarks with stony silence.

Points to Continuous Burden.

"Without further recovery we can't stand any expansion of public welfare service, or even sustain those we now have," Lindley told the social workers at one session.

"It is not the special duty of public welfare workers to think about economy problems, but they can't afford to overlook them. Some of them of my acquaintance seem to be so immersed in their own extremely interesting and helpful work that they pay almost no attention to the problems of making our economic system work.

"Somehow they manage to leave the impression that they regard their job as a burden the nation must carry forever. They should be trying to work themselves out of a job."

POSTPONE CALUMET DISTRICT MUSIC FETE TILL AUGUST 5 AND 6

George Calder.

The Calumet District Music Festival, which was to have been held in Whiting, Ind., July 1 and 2, has been advanced to Saturday, Aug. 5, and Sunday, Aug. 6. This was announced yesterday by George Calder, supervisor of music in the Whiting schools and director of the festival, which is a preliminary to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's Chicagoland event on Saturday, Aug. 19.

The festival in Whiting will be a part of the Golden Jubilee celebration of that city. The first portion of the summer jubilee activities will be held on July 4. Mayor James T. McNamara is chairman.

Assisting Mr. Calder in festival arrangements are Capt. Glenn Hull, John Sharp, manager of the Whiting Community service; James Griffith, editor and publisher of The Whiting Times; Adam P. Lesinsky, director of the Whiting High school band and orchestra and president of the National Orchestra association; Robert J. White, supervisor of music in the East Chicago, Ind., public schools, and Nilo Hovey, director of the George Rogers Clark High school band at Hammond, Ind.

POISONING OF 400 STUDENTS LAID TO WPA LUNCHES

New York, June 24.—[Special.]—Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, following a conference today with Dr. John L. Rice, commissioner of health, announced that official investigation indicated that the poisoning of 400 Staten Island school children on Friday was due to egg salad sandwiches provided in free lunches.

Only fifty-five of the stricken pupils remained in hospital tonight.

Twenty-eight WPA employés who prepared the lunches were questioned and examined during the day.

800 PARTICIPATE IN SO. MICHIGAN MUSIC FESTIVAL

Winners Will Compete in Tribune Contest Aug. 19.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL,

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

St. Joseph, Mich., June 24.—[Special.]—More than 800 musicians, drawn from twenty-five cities, took part in the first southwestern Michigan music festival here tonight. The crowd was estimated at 6,000. Much credit for the success of the festival was given to the Kiwanis club of St. Joseph, sponsors of the affair, which is a preliminary to the Chicago Tribune's Chicagoland Music Festival to be held on Aug. 19 in Soldiers' field in Chicago.

Heidelberg Singers Score.

A surprise appearance was made by Miss Kathryn Witwer, prima donna soprano of W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system. Miss Witwer was chief vocal judge during the afternoon and stayed over for the concert. She was accompanied by Mrs. Helen Butcher, organist of the First Congregational church in Benton Harbor.

The Heidelberg singers from Chicago won applause with songs from "Student Prince" and "Pinafore." Massed choral numbers were led by Dr. Nobel Cain of Chicago and George Calder of Whiting, Ind., and massed band groups by Prof. Glenn Cliff Bainum of Northwestern university and David Hughes of Elkhart, Ind.

Mitchell H. Willis, executive secretary of the festival, announced the following winners, all of whom are eligible to enter the Chicagoland finals:

The three choruses taking part in the massed choral groups tonight, all of which will come to Chicago for the festival chorus finals, were the Kalamazoo Women's Choral club, the St. Joseph Kiwanis Girls' chorus, and the Southwestern Michigan Male chorus.

Other judges were Capt. Howard Stube of Chicago, who is chairman of instrumental contests for the Chicagoland festival, and Edward Clark of Elkhart, Ind., who judged in the baton twirling competition.

CHORISTERS TO SING AGAIN TODAY IN 3 FOREST PRESERVES

The second series of 21 summer concerts in three Cook county forest preserves will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock. The choral groups, directors, and places follow: Saint Sebastion choir, the Rev. Joseph P. O'Donnell, Caldwell woods in the Emmet Whealan pool preserve, northwest; the Austin Methodist Episcopal choir, Frank Bennett, Thatcher woods, in River Forest, west; the Parker Women's chorus, Mrs. Grace Humphrey, Dan Ryan Woods, southwest.

Each service lasts an hour. The concerts are sponsored jointly by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and the Cook county forest preserve district. Improved facilities for the presentation of the concerts accounted for a splendid attendance at each preserve last Sunday. These included benches for the listeners, suitable platforms for the singing groups and fine amplification.

Especially popular is the community singing. Fifteen to 20 minutes of each concert is devoted to this feature. Complete details concerning the vespers, including instructions on how to reach the preserves, may be found in the Metropolitan section of today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

SYRIANS ATTACK FRENCH FOR GIVING LAND TO TURKEY

Press Says Confidence in Paris Shattered.

DAMASCUS, June 24.—(AP)—Syria, with no cabinet in office and her president threatening to resign, was whipped into a furore today by violent press attacks on France after the signing away yesterday of the Hatay republic by the French government in exchange for Turkey's pledge of mutual assistance.

The Syrian nationalist press almost unanimously declared the Syrians could have no more confidence in French promises and must continue to regard Turkey as a threat to hopes for Syrian independence. Hatay was a part of Syria, formerly called the Sanjak of Alexandretta.

[Syria was taken from Turkey in the world war and given to France under a league of nations' mandate. A French-Turkish treaty substituting Syrian autonomy for the mandate was signed Sept. 9, 1936, and ratified by the Syrian parliament the following Dec. 26, but the French parliament has yet to act.]

Several newspapers said Turkey's next demand would be for Aleppo and the Djeziarah region, bordering on the Hatay republic in northwestern Syria.

Serious Internal Situation.

Syria's internal situation continued serious. The interim cabinet of Nashouhi Alboukhari resigned May 15 because, it announced, it was unable "to adapt its policy to the French viewpoint."

Leaders of the majority, or national, bloc declined to form a government unless the French carried out the promise to give Syria independence. President Hashim el Atassi reiterated a threat to resign if the French could not reach an agreement with the bloc.

Strike at Nazi Propaganda.

PARIS, June 24.—(AP)—President Albert Lebrun today signed a decree striking at German propaganda in France's border provinces with a ban on the distribution of tracts from abroad. Police recently have made a number of arrests in connection with the distribution of French language pamphlets printed in Germany which were scattered throughout Alsace-Lorraine and the northern departments of France.

Queer Gents at Zoo

Oscar the woodcock returns from lunch.

Harry the Saki monkey, a new arrival.

Birds at the Chicago Zoölogical park in Brookfield don't have to do their own hunting. But Oscar, the woodcock, does his anyway. He scorns hard boiled egg and sliced banana. Nature first, last, and all the time is his motto. If you know the right time, you can see him out catching his worms any day.

Oscar was found several weeks ago by Frank Walker of 100 Harlem avenue, Oak Lawn. Mr. Walker gave him to the zoo. Woodcocks usually don't live more than a day in captivity, but Oscar thrives.

Now here's how you'll know the time to look for Oscar out on his hunting grounds: When an official hangs upon the door of Oscar's cage the sign reading "out to lunch."

Despite Harry's fearsome appearance, Harry has mildly taken up his abode in the primate house at the Brookfield zoo. And there Harry, according to Director Edward H. Bean, leads the quiet life he loves so well.

When he isn't gazing at the scenery, Harry is eating his favorite dish, a mess of locusts or cicadas, with which the zoo is now plentifully supplied.

CITE MONOPOLY ON LABOR BOARD HEARING RECORDS

Union Is Unable to Pay Cost of Transcript.

A transcript of testimony presented here Friday at a National Labor Relations board hearing into charges of unfair labor practices against the International Harvester company was delivered yesterday to E. S. Ballard, attorney for the company.

The charges were made by the Farm Equipment Workers' organizing committee, a C. I. O. affiliate, and named in addition the Harvester Employés' Industrial union of Milwaukee, Wis., an independent union. The C. I. O. charged that the Harvester company had entered into illegal contracts with company unions in six plants.

Pays $112.50 for Transcript.

The transcript cost Ballard $112.50, at the rate of 75 cents a page for 150 typewritten pages. David Beznar, attorney for the employés' union, was unable to obtain a transcript because the union could not afford to pay the charge. Both attorneys attended the hearing in the capacity of counsel for the defense. Attorney Robert R. Rissman, representing the NLRB, was cast in the rôle of prosecutor.

The NRLB and Rissman were able to obtain a transcript for a fraction of what Ballard paid for it. That is because the labor board in Washington entered into a contract giving the Daniel W. Ross agency a monopoly on all labor board business throughout the country. The C. I. O., as complainant and associate of the NLRB and Rissman in the prosecution, has access to the labor board's copy and doesn't need a transcript of its own.

Costs Called Prohibitive.

Beznar walked out of the hearing Friday, asserting that he did not see why one union should be compelled to defend itself in a consolidated hearing involving six plants. The Harvester company asked the labor board for a severance to permit a separate hearing on charges affecting each plant, but the request was denied. Beznar made a similar request, but an answer had not been received from Washington yesterday.

"There should be a separate record, separate findings, and a separate order for each union," said Beznar, "so that the cost of appeal will not be prohibitive to each."

He said attorneys were told they could not quote from any record except the official transcript. It was explained that the labor board does not permit any court reporter other than a representative of the Ross agency to report its proceedings.

Work Is Farmed Out.

Rissman said that the court reporting concern of Shipley & Zellner reports all labor board cases in Chicago. The manager of the agency explained that the work is farmed out to it by the Ross agency in Washington.

C. L. Ackerman, regional representative of the Ross agency, said that the charge of 75 cents a page to Attorney Ballard was not excessive. He said the charge to Beznar probably would be $1.10 a page, if overnight delivery was desired. The charge would be 45 cents a page if delivery was made within seven days, Ackerman said.

A spokesman for the association of local court reporters said its maximum charge is 50 cents a page for original transcripts and 25 cents a page for first copies, plus an attendance charge of $3 an hour. An hour of court proceedings usually produces 50 pages of transcript and a five hour court day produces 200 to 250 pages, he said.

Jefferson Urged Defeat of Any Usurper.

President Washington delivered his first inaugural speech on April 30, 1789, in New York before a congress whose members were most uncertain as to forms and procedure under the new government of the United States. Only the day before the senate had ignored fussy John Adams when he inquired what title he should bear as vice president. When Washington finished speaking, Adams thanked him on behalf of the congress for "his most gracious speech."

Next day Adams' phrase appeared when the minutes of the inauguration session were read to the senate. Up spoke William Maclay, senator from Pennsylvania. With Jefferson still absent in Europe, his opposition to the policies of the Federalists in that congress was to give him some claim to the title of founder of the Democratic party.

Phrase Struck from Minutes.

"Mr. President," said Maclay, "we have lately had a hard struggle for our liberty against kingly authority. The minds of men are still heated; everything related to that species of government is odious to the people. The words prefixed to the President's speech are the same usually placed before the speech of his Britannic majesty. I know they will give offense. I consider them improper."

Adams fumed that had he suspected affairs were coming to such a pass, he would never have drawn his sword in the revolution, but the offending phrase was struck from the minutes. Maclay's objection was in keeping with the spirit of the times.

Fear that the new office of the presidency, a governmental novelty, might be the basis for turning the republic into a monarchy, had been expressed frequently in the constitutional convention. In spite of the prestige of George Washington, the movement had already been started in the country to limit, through the constitution, the number of terms the President might serve. Although none of them has passed, some 200 such amendments have been submitted in congress since.

Disturbed by Rumors.

While the constitutional convention was in session, the nation was greatly disturbed by rumors that it was considering establishment of a monarchy. The most common form of the rumor was that the throne was to be offered to the bishop of Osnaburgh, second son of George III. The rumors became so persistent that the members of the convention, who had sworn themselves to secrecy in their deliberations, thought it necessary to deny them, first in private letters and later to the newspapers.

"Tho' we cannot, affirmatively, tell you what we are doing," some of them wrote, "we can, negatively, tell you what we are not doing—we never once thought of a king."

Fear of monarchy lay back of the proposal that instead of a single executive, there be a committee of magistrates. James Madison reports how Hugh Williamson of North Carolina argued despairingly:

"Another objection against a single magistrate is that he will be an elective king and will feel the spirit of one. He will spare no pains to keep himself in for life, and will then lay a train for the succession of his children. It was pretty certain he thought that we should at one time or other have a king; but he wished no precaution to be omitted that might postpone the event as long as possible."

Feared for Independence.

The constitutional convention debated extensively on whether the President should be eligible to reelection, but this was not from fear of executive power. At the time it was proposed that congress should elect the President for a term of seven years, and it was feared that, if he were eligible to a second term, his desire for it would destroy his independence of congress through his fear of antagonizing its members.

The convention was, in fact, more apprehensive that the congress would impair the independence of the President, and thereby destroy his intended function as a check upon the arbitrary action of the legislative branch. The delegates had reason to fear this because of their experience with the British parliament. The limitation on reëlection was dropped when the convention hit upon the scheme of choosing the President through electors.

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter to Washington from France, viewed this reëligibility of the President as most dangerous, however.

An Enemy of Monarchy.

"This, I fear, will make an office for life," he said. "I was much an enemy of monarchy before I came to Europe. I am ten thousand times more so since I have seen what they are."

While he approved of the constitution, Jefferson wanted it amended to include a bill of rights and to prescribe a seven year term for the President with reëlection prohibited George Mason, who had been a delegate to the convention but refused to sign the constitution, led the fight in the Virginia ratifying convention that caused that body to recommend an amendment prohibiting any one from serving as President more than eight in any sixteen years. North Carolina did the same, and New York asked a simple third term prohibition.

Washington, while he set the precedent of refusing a third term, failed to share Jefferson's apprehensions as to its danger. His refusal of reëlection in 1796 was largely on personal grounds. He wanted to return to his farm. And before he was elected, in 1778, he wrote to La Fayette:

"There cannot, in my judgment, be any danger that the President will by any practicable intrigue ever be able to continue himself one moment in office, much less perpetuate himself in it, but in the late state of corrupt morals and practical depravity, and even then there is as much danger that any species of domination would prevail. Though when a people have become incapable of governing themselves, and fit for a master, it is of little consequence from what quarter he comes."

It was Jefferson who consolidated the anti-third term tradition, and his influence that made it unwritten law before his death. He announced immediately after his second inauguration that he would not again be a candidate. In 1807, when the legislatures of five states had urged him to run again, he wrote to the legislators of Vermont:

"That I should lay down my charge at a proper period is as much a duty as to have borne it faithfully. If some termination to the services of the chief magistrate be not fixed by the constitution or supplied by practice, his office, nominally four years, will in fact become for life, and history shows how easily that degenerates into an inheritance."

Both Madison and Monroe retired voluntarily after serving eight years. In his autobiography, written shortly before he died in 1826, Jefferson said:

"The example of four Presidents voluntarily retiring at the end of their eighth year and the progress of public opinion that the principle is salutary have given it in practice the form of precedent and usage; insomuch that, should a President consent to be a candidate for a third election, I trust he would be rejected on this demonstration of ambitious views."

Jackson Wanted Six Years.

Andrew Jackson, the next President to serve two terms, recommended in his first message to congress a single term of six years, and continued the recommendation annually throughout his incumbency.

President Andrew Johnson was another who recommended to congress a single term amendment to the constitution. Grant, the first man after Jackson to serve two terms, was not unwilling to run for a third. Republican conventions in six states passed anti-third term resolutions, and when Grant indicated that he still was responsive, the house of representatives passed a similar resolution by a 234 to 18 vote.

That killed the third term movement. When Grant, after a four year lapse, sought renomination in 1880, the Republican national convention failed to name him. His strength in the early voting, however, indicated that sentiment against a third term was less strong than that against three consecutive terms.

Sought to Bar Reëlection.

Theodore Roosevelt, on the night of his election in 1904, announced that he would not seek another term in 1908. When he sought the nomination against President Taft in 1912, he explained that the basis of his refusal earlier had been objection to more than two consecutive terms. Both he and Taft, in writings after they left office, favored a longer term in the presidency with reëlection barred.

Woodrow Wilson, elected on a platform that pledged the candidate to a single term, disavowed the pledge a month before his first inauguration, and likewise opposed a single six year term. He had taken the same stand in his early writings. The state of his health barred him from being a candidate in 1920, whatever his sentiment on a third term might have been.

Mayor Kelly Moves

Building at 209 Lake Shore drive where the mayor has taken an apartment on the fifteenth floor.

Mayor Kelly yesterday moved to his new residence on the near north side. It is an apartment on the fifteenth floor at 209 Lake Shore drive, a short distance east of the Drake hotel.

In discussing the change, the mayor said that it was made to place his family in smaller and more easily managed quarters than the former family residence at 4821 Ellis avenue. That three story building is to be conveyed to the Catholic church and, it is understood, will be used to house Chicago missionaries and for office purposes. Cardinal Mundelein announced his acceptance of the gift last week.

ROBBED OF $25 BY TWO.

Charles Hills, attendant in a filling station at 7124 Stony Island avenue, was robbed of $25 yesterday by two colored men.

CADDY DROWNS WHILE SWIMMING; BODY RECOVERED

The body of Lloyd Baber Jr., 16 years old, a caddy at the Westward Ho Golf club, Wolf road and North avenue, was recovered yesterday from Salt creek, which runs through the club grounds. Baber disappeared Friday after telling companions that he was leaving for a new job and was going for a swim.

The body was found by Melrose Park firemen who dragged the creek at the request of the boy's father, a truck gardener near Fullerton avenue and Mannheim road.

A coroner's physician said Baber drowned after being seized with cramps. The creek is fifty feet wide and fourteen feet deep.

GEN. MALIN CRAIG RETIRES AS ARMY CHIEF THIS WEEK

Washington, D. C., June 24.—(AP)—Gen. Malin Craig is preparing to turn over his job as war department chief of staff to his successor next week. This will be weeks ahead of schedule.

Without referring directly to other officers who in retirement have done otherwise, he said crisply today: "I'm going out to California and practice keeping my mouth shut."

Gen. Craig, resourceful, even tempered Missourian, does not reach the active service age limit of 64 until Aug. 5. In the meantime, however, he is taking a voluntary leave of absence so that Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, his successor, can take over at the start of a new fiscal year, July 1, when President Roosevelt's $552,000,000 arms expansion program goes into full effect.

Chief of staff for almost four years, Craig has directed the army's greatest peace time transformation. There are 165,000 regulars now, compared with 118,500 in 1935. Already expanding, the air corps is on the eve of trebling its strength. Arms, supplies and housing are far more adequate.

THE STRATEGY OF THE REVOLUTION.

The New Deal, if viewed in the last half of its second term as a recovery program, is obviously and conspicuously insane. If it is observed as rounding out the last half of the second four year plan of revolution it is shrewd, calculating, and well planned.

The intelligence or stupidity of the New Dealers must be determined with reference to objectives. If the intention were to allow America to regain a general state of economic health then the federal governmental procedure would discredit an in-patient of Bedlam. If the intention is to destroy the old economic and political freedom and put in its place a planned society governed by the decisions of control boards, then the present day tactics are canny, subtle, and penetrating.

The inconsistencies and contradictions the planners can be accused of introducing into their program become explicable when tested by the formula of revolution—not of recovery. Mr. A. A. Berle of the state department, speaking for the third four year plan, said that 75 per cent of American production ought to be in the hands of the government. Such is the view of all of Mr. Roosevelt's new appointees.

Mr. Roosevelt's wordy war with Hitler and Mussolini may conceal his adoption of their theory of national economy. His sympathy with the régime of Stalin might reveal it. Take, for instance, the matter of price controls. The monetary policy and Mr. Wallace's agricultural policy are devoted to the kiting of the cost of necessities in food and apparel. This not only brings the pinch of need to the people least able to survive it, heavily taxing their means of subsistence, but, furthermore, the controls by which the prices are raised create subsidized groups of producers whose introduction to the totalitarian state is along the easy road of cash payments. They are blindfolded by treasury checks and led by the hand.

The apparent inconsistency is to raise the cost of living for the very people whose interests are supposed to be the chief concern of the planned society. They need food and clothes. The planners reduce the production of foodstuffs and fabrics. They seek to debase the currency and raise the prices.

In the revolutionary formula this is not crazy. It produces destitution and despair, the twin sisters who knit the Red flag. It also gives custom and usage to the control of production. The check getter learns to do what the government tells him to do. The lesson is learned under anesthetic. You create a population rebellious against free economy and private enterprise and a population accustomed to taking orders from commissars.

Nor is it crazy in the revolutionary tactic for the government, having boosted the price of necessities, to assail private enterprise on the score of luxury prices. Even in this age it is supposable that people who are greatly in want can live without automobiles, typewriters, gasoline, and radios, although without bread and cotton goods they will have difficulty. The government forms its price raising cartels in the necessities while to distract attention and to stop private investment it creates alarms throughout the business world.

As revolution this is good common sense. Only the person who thought the planners were planning recovery would be struck by the nonsense of it. The third termers must work fast in the next year to make good their thesis that private enterprise is a failure. If they are to make it a failure they have about a year to go. Within that time they must make millions of people feel that the old order is hopeless. They must take the profit out of investment and stop the taking of business risks. This will make the production plant unequal to the demands on it. Then in the general demoralization craftily planned the revolution can say that inevitability has struck the hour for it.

WHY DID WE DO IT?

Another debt default has been offered for the reflection and thought of the American people. Finland, as usual, made its instalment payment in full. Hungary paid a few thousand on account. The treasury department did not hear from the other eleven debtors. They, with the exception of France, left notes with the state department expressing regret. Some time in the future they will be willing to discuss a settlement.

Many Americans are still wondering, or wondering more than ever, why we did this. Once in the war, we had to deliver all the supplies we could and deliver them where they were needed. America took the obligations of its allies and sent them the goods. It was the great warehouse and factory for food, clothes, and munitions. The war, once entered upon, had to be won and America, having taken the step, had to take the consequences. But why did we keep up the squandering of money after the armistice? What made the United States the universal benefactor of every country which would hold out an empty hat? We added over two billion five hundred million dollars to what had been thrown into the pool and sent all of Europe into a money madness into which we soon descended ourselves.

Our government never recovered from the habits contracted in 1917. Even Coolidge couldn't bring it to have any respect for the revenues of the country. Government officials learned not only the pleasure of spending billions instead of millions but they had a taste of the sweets of autocratic power. Mr. Wilson's government found how easy it is to tap the wealth of the country and also how controls could be put on private enterprise by political authority. It took over the railroads. It created food regulations. Mr. Hoover was food administrator. Conscription taught government how to lay its hands on citizens.

Thrift, economy, respect for money, and respect for individual rights were lowered in the esteem of the politicians and adventurers who once thought there were limits beyond which they dare not go. The war wasn't a military disaster, but it was an economic, political, and social one in which the United States was a principal victim.

THE NEW PRIESTHOOD.

William Fulton, reporting on the national convention of professional social workers in Buffalo, finds them organizing to fight any governmental economies that will imperil the almoners' jobs they hold.

The professional social workers have arrogated to themselves the position and privileges of a new priesthood without religion. Theirs is the kingdom of misery, and they are jealous that the number of their parishioners shall not decrease, for if they do the perquisites of the priesthood are diminished. Their theology is formulated in the schools of social service at a handful of universities, and they are quick to damn as heretics any who dispute their gospel of extravagance.

Relief is not their only field. Scandals in the Juvenile court and at the St. Charles School for Boys have shown how organized crime hides behind the mantle of the social workers. But it is in the disbursement of public relief that the social workers have been most expensive to the taxpayers.

Professional social workers run the Chicago relief administration. One of their number is the head of it. The family service division, the policies of which dominate the whole relief setup, is headed and staffed by professional social workers.

Analysis of the CRA expenditures shows that frequent relief "crises" in the last two years have largely been manufactured by the social workers, who have spent in a few months the local tax levies that they were expected to make last for a year, and have then sought to force the voting of further appropriations, city or state, by closing relief stations.

If there were evidence that the quick dissipation of the local tax levies had been necessary to meet overwhelming need the action of the social worker administrators might be excused as a mere matter of bookkeeping. But this is not the case. Such evidence as exists is that relief expenditures have been unnecessarily high because the social workers were doing things they were not supposed to be doing and neglecting the tasks they should have been doing.

While most professional social workers are now on public pay rolls, most of their training has been for the activities of private social agencies. These agencies were set up to aid the most incompetent members of society. The social workers in that capacity ordered the lives of people incapable of ordering them themselves. While they were confined to this type of people they usually did a good job.

The majority of the people on relief are not incompetent, yet the professional social workers, carrying over into public relief the practices of the private agencies, have sought to treat them as if they were. They have lavished on them all manner of service, whereas the only thing that most relief clients required was a job, which the social workers were unable to provide.

Because they have spent so much time on service of the private agency type the social workers have neglected the essential task of administering public relief. That task is to provide the answers to two questions: First, is the applicant eligible for relief? Second, does he need relief? If the answer to both questions is yes the majority of relief clients can and should be trusted to regulate their own lives.

Thus the relief administrator needs not professional social workers using the case methods of private agencies, but investigators. He needs investigators to make quick and accurate determination of whether an applicant is eligible for and needs relief, and he needs them to make sure that relief clients continue to need relief, and to strike them off the rolls when they cease to need it.

Efforts to exercise more strict inspection of relief clients have been sabotaged by the social workers themselves. When the relief administration sought to require that the social worker visit each family on her list at least once every two months to determine the continued need for relief the order was violently opposed by a C. I. O. union of social workers.

A frequent excuse of the professional social workers for their own shortcomings is that whatever these may be it is better to have relief administered by social workers than by politicians. That is not a real dilemma. Relief administration can be kept out of politics without abandoning its policy making to professional social workers. So long as the new priesthood of misery makes its policies relief costs in Chicago may be expected to rise regardless of private employment levels, and the deserving will suffer because the undeserving profit.

CENSORSHIP BY A COMMISSION.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]

Is freedom of speech on the radio threatened?

The licensees of international broadcasting stations think it is. They say that the Federal Communications commission, by its order of May 23, established a censorship.

It did.

They are asking the commission to rescind that order.

It should.

The President of the United States has painstakingly explained that the government's direction over radio is restricted to the mechanics of the art: "to such controls of operation as are necessary to prevent complete confusion on the air."

The position is untenable. It is intolerable. The commission should correct it at once.

JAPAN POURS OUT MONEY

BY KIMPEI SHEBA.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO.—Japan is staking her future in Manchukuo. She has so much money tied up in industrial development there that the question of sinking what little capital she now can spare into ventures in North, Central, and South China must wait.

Each year since 1931, when the three eastern provinces of Manchuria were overrun by Japanese forces, Japan has invested more money in her new venture than in the preceding 12 months.

Her total investments from 1933 to 1938, excluding the gigantic military expenditures, are conservatively estimated at $500,000,000, which is a lot of money in Asia. This is more than Japan's total investments up to 1930, and comprises almost all of her overseas investments from 1931 to 1938.

In addition to the $500,000,000 invested through bonds and loans, private investments totaling $25,000,000 and expenditures for Manchukuan affairs amounting to $400,000,000 were made. Of the latter figure, $150,000,000 actually flowed into Manchukuo. This brings the total up to over a billion dollars. Adding the 500 million dollars invested prior to the occupation of Manchukuo, it will be seen that Japan has spent one billion 500 million dollars there to date.

It is believed she will have to sink another $500,000,000 before she can cash in on Manchukuo in a big way.

One thing which is decidedly in Japan's favor is that she is able to and does run things exactly as she wishes in Manchukuo. This is not the case in North, Central, and Southern China. Large areas in North and Central China still are unsafe for Japanese. In Shanghai Japan has not the free hand she has in Manchukuo.

Some of the money Japan has invested in Manchukuo already is coming back in the form of Manchukuan exports and interest and dividends on loans. Figures supplied by the Japanese owned South Manchuria railway show that payments made by Manchukuo to Japan since 1932 total $350,000,000.

In other words Japan, during this period, put in $150,000,000 more than she got out of Manchukuo, not including military expenditures. Before 1931 the South Manchuria railway earned an annual profit of several million dollars which, as far as Japan was concerned, was all clear profit.

An optimistic report published by the South Manchuria railway points out that "such huge returns are apt to entice further investments in Manchuria, giving a very bright outlook to the future of investments in the country."

Neutral observers doubt whether this inducement will attract foreign money into Manchukuo for two reasons:

FIRST—The law forbids foreigners to buy voting stock in Nissan, the Manchukuo heavy industries company, which controls the country's industries.

SECOND—The law forbids foreigners to take their profits out of Manchukuo.

The question which neutral observers are asking is whether Japan can push through her gigantic industrial and agricultural program without the help of foreign capital.

Most Japanese are asking no questions. They have plunged so far ahead that they know there is no turning back. But some of the most influential men in Manchukuo, including Aisuke Ayukawa, head of the Manchukuo Heavy Industries company, and Yosuke Matsuoka, until recently president of the South Manchuria railway, both of whom were educated in the United States, cling to the hope that American capital can be drawn into Manchukuo.

Every Japanese knows that Manchukuo is one of the treasure houses for natural resources of the earth: full of forests, coal, and soya beans, and a plentiful supply of iron, cattle, pigs, and sheep.

So every southbound train out of Tokio for Shimonoseki, the jumping off place for Manchukuo, is booked to capacity. To get a sleeper it is necessary to put in a reservation a week in advance. There is a daily plane service to Hsinking, but only army officers and directors of big business concerns are able to book passage. Those who are swarming to Manchuria include farmers, drummers, architects, engineers, industrialists, gamblers, innkeepers, and geisha girls. They all think Manchukuo is a gold mine.

One noticeable thing about this is that the quality of people going to Manchukuo has improved markedly in the last two years. Where once a good many of those going were ruffians and other irresponsible types, today one finds that few such people are heading for the continent and that those who do are turned back before they get there.

Japanese police have made themselves notorious for the strict examinations they conduct of foreigners entering Manchukuo, but this is nothing compared to what they do to people of their own nationality whom they consider undesirable.

Most people are skeptical about Japan's plans to solve the population problem through emigration. About 16,000 Japanese farming families have settled in various parts of Manchukuo since 1931. They are understood to be making out fairly well. An appeal has been made to enlist 100,000 youths as "fighters of the plow," and it is estimated that 10,000 will answer the call this year. But this is a drop in the bucket as far as Japan's annual population increase of a million is concerned.

The climate in Manchukuo is generally regarded as too extreme for Japanese, and the low living standard of the Chinese farmers gives the latter too much of a handicap, investigators declare.

While Japanese plans to colonize Manchukuo are making slow progress, Chinese coolies are swarming into the country from Shantung province, China. It is expected that 900,000 will enter the country this year. They will be employed for the execution of the Hsinking government's ambitious 5-year industrial development plan.

This has made satisfactory progress despite an all round shortage of materials, Japanese observers claim. The official report of the achievement during 1938, the second year of the 5-year plan, states that production of pig iron, steel ingot, steel slabs, and shale oil was nearly 100 per cent of schedule.

The output of coal was 87 per cent and that of gold 61 per cent. Plans for the installation of hydro-electric plants on the Yalu and Sungari rivers and on Lake Chingpo were pushed and were fulfilled according to schedule.

In the field of agriculture crops were normal in Central Manchuria, slightly off in the north and south, and conspicuously poor in the eastern areas. An increase, however, was brought about in total plantation acreage.

The estimated production of kaoliang, corn, and millet exceeded the schedule. Soya bean output was satisfactory.

A MERCY FOR PERCY.

[Washington Post.]

Names frequently make news. This week, however, a name made news in more than the conventional sense of the word. It came out accidentally that the head of the New York field office of the federal bureau of investigation, one of the most important G-men in the country, is the not-so-proud possessor of the name Percy. So entitled when he had little to say about the matter, he is now happy that his friends call him Sam.

Very likely part of Mr. Foxworth's early training for his present position was incurred defending his name against those of his companions who refused to call him Sam. Yet there is literally no reason why the historic name of Percy should have such effeminate associations.

The extent to which Mr. Foxworth has overcome this deplorable tradition encourages hope that he will go further and remove the stigma altogether. Future generations of Percys would then be spared getting and delivering innumerable black eyes. And future defenders of the law would be able to say my name is Sam—but my friends call me Percy.

YOUR CALCIUM NEEDS.

THERE is so much lime in the world it would seem that nature should not begrudge the modest share demanded by our systems. The volume of marble and limestone—calcium carbonate—deposited in our hills is enough to take care of unborn millions for eons to come.

The human frame has been equipped with smoothly operating machinery for the use of this element, and in this connection we should consider especially the parathyroid and the thymus glands. This balancing apparatus maintains the level of lime in the body fluids so accurately that on a diet which includes milk products we need have no fear that we are not receiving an ample ration.

From whence comes our supply? Grains, roots, and tubers furnish very little. But the green parts of all vegetables provide reasonable portions. Milk—our easiest source—is our richest. With this liquid heading the list we can follow with vegetables, eggs, fruit, and meat.

Why is this material essential? In the first place, we must recall that the skeleton is composed largely of calcium phosphate and calcium carbonate. Furthermore, it enables us to utilize phosphorus. Without one we cannot assimilate the other. Then, too, nature's whole scheme of coagulation of the blood is predicated upon an adequate allotment. Finally, the transmission of impulses from nerves to muscles requires the substance. When the percentage in the circulation is too low some delay in this respect is observed.

Let us assume that the menu has been deficient over a period of several weeks. Will the body suffer? Fortunately the bones constitute storage houses for both calcium and phosphorus. They are the bins in which these salts are hoarded, removed, and replaced continuously. Thus we have a busy workshop involving the bones, the glands, and the blood stream.

We must not forget the important rôle of vitamin D. Without this compound—even though enough mineral is present—good strong bones and teeth will not be formed. Rickets, as well as dental decay, typify not a lack of the chemical but a failure in the delivery system. It just does not reach all the vital areas. An irrigating ditch may contain plenty of water but unless the laterals are equally well provided crops will wilt. We need sunlight, then, which manufactures vitamin D in the skin, or its drug store substitute—cod liver oil—to promote the distribution of lime from the digestive tract. Curiously enough this is not so imperative with grownups. But every one should indulge in a fair degree of outdoor activity as accumulation in the depots is thus favored.

Under ordinary conditions of health every adult should have about 15 grains per day. With women during pregnancy and the nursing period, half again as much should be available. In maladies such as bleeding peptic ulcers, or hemorrhoids or tumors which are oozing, reinforcements should be on hand. In chronic arthritis many patients show a low level which must be replenished, the assumption being that reservoirs have been exhausted.

There is no danger of taking too much although one should not make a quarry of the alimentary tube. Only that which is usable will be retained and the excess will be excreted via the bowel. If one does not desire to gain weight, buttermilk [from which the fat has been taken out] will suffice. For those who cannot drink milk, cheese is an excellent way to obtain it and a half ounce of the ordinary yellow variety will contribute one's daily requirement. Should it become necessary to take it artificially we can resort to the lactate, the gluconate, or to glycerophosphate tablets.

Many a patient who complains of abnormal weakness will be a victim of a low mineral metabolism and marked improvement will follow the adoption of a high calcium-high vitamin diet. This includes milk, orange and tomato juice, and occasionally extra helpings of cheese.

PROBABLY HARMLESS.

Mrs. C. R. L. writes: I find two little lumps under my arm about the size of a small pea. They do not bother me. What is the cause?

REPLY.

Probably an enlarged lymph node. Have you had a recent infection in the vicinity? As a precaution the breast on that side should be examined. As a rule, incidents of this sort are harmless. They arise because of involvement of a sweat gland.

◆

LITERATURE ON TUBERCULOSIS.

F. T. writes: A friend has developed tuberculosis and I would like to know where to secure some literature on this disease.

REPLY.

The National Tuberculosis association, at 50 West 50th street, New York, and your state and city health departments may be able to supply you. We have a leaflet on the subject which you may obtain by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

◆

PERSONAL HYGIENE.

B. H. writes: My 18 year old daughter has not established a menstrual cycle. Could this be due to tuberculosis?

REPLY.

Yes, it may, but there are many other causes. Space will not permit a complete reply. The whole matter is explained in a booklet, "Personal Hygiene for Women," which may be obtained by sending a stamped addressed envelope.

◆

CAN'T LOCATE PULSE.

J. C. writes: What is the matter when a pulse cannot be found in the right arm?

REPLY.

The artery may be located in an abnormal position or some structure may be pressing on the main trunk. If the circulation to the fingers is normal there is no need to call in a detective.

◆

IT'S NOT ADVISED.

T. M. writes: Is sea bathing harmful to one with neuritis?

REPLY.

As a rule the temperature of the ocean water is not high enough to be comfortable or relaxing. Why not use your own bath? Heat externally, plus vitamin B, will be helpful.

◆

NOT ALWAYS.

O. K. writes: Does hardening of the arteries always accompany high blood pressure?

REPLY.

Not necessarily. Arteriosclerosis usually comes with advancing years. Its progress is more rapid if the pressure within the vessels is high.

THE FARLEYIZED MAILS.

Charlotte, N. C., June 20.—Let not your postal survey editor rend his garments at loss of 25 per cent of his shipment of mail to Dallas and Fort Worth. To one who receives from ten to thirty air mail letters and packages each week and who is in a different town from day to day, such Farleyized misservice is an old story.

Three air mail letters dispatched from my Chicago office last week have yet to show up. A fourth directed to Columbia, S. C., was sent to Cristobal, C. Z. The evidence herewith [an envelope enclosed].

Scribe Leavelle has only scratched the surface to the deterioration of the Tammanyized postal service. In McKinley's administration as a hick in a hick village I recall that we were able to secure mail at the postoffice every noon after church. Now one can't register a letter in cities as large as San Antonio after noon Saturday. Railroads, express lines, telegraph and telephone operate twenty-four hours a day. . . but THEY are privately operated.
NED ALVORD.

ARE OUR ATHLETES UNETHICAL?

Chicago, June 19.—Wilfrid Smith's article in defense of American sportsmanship as witnessed in the recent mile race at Princeton serves only to affirm more firmly the unethical tactics of our athletes. We Americans are a greedy people, more bent on winning than in learning to act the part of gentlemen.
FRANK SALAK.

ENGLISHMAN TRAINS HIS WIFE.

Chicago, June 20.—As an Englishman and a resident of this rather provincial city of Chicago for the last ten years, I am appalled at the multitude of divorces that are consummated every week in this country. Such conditions would never be tolerated in dear old England, and would not exist here if the men were not servile to women's every whim before marriage and allowed themselves to be metamorphosed into doormats afterwards.

To me this is puzzling in view of the fact that the male of the species is far superior in every way to the drug store bulbs called women. There would be fewer divorces in this country if the men used the same firm method that I used with my wife. Like the average American girl she could not even boil water without burning it. Gently but firmly I insisted on her making a study of the cook book. I marked out the dishes and pies that appealed to me and she became proficient in the culinary arts. I allowed her $6 a week to run the house; if she exceeded that amount I would not permit her to attend a movie for two months.

I induced her on the grounds of healthy exercise to do my sister's washing as well as our own. My wife has gone to live with her mother now, but she often writes me telling me what a wonderful woman I made her.

Wake up, American men, and assert yourselves.
PERCY SMYTH CARDEN.

ONE MAN DECISIONS.

Keokuk, Ia., June 20.—A step most dangerous to the life of a free government would be one-man decision. Just think of it! Many believe we should trust to the judgment of President Roosevelt to name the aggressors in neighbor-country rows and have our boys shoot it out with the alleged aggressors—"Theirs not to reason why; theirs but to do and die."

Does President Roosevelt usually render superior opinions? In the matter of our forty billion dollar debt the press quotes him freely as having handed down this gem of comfort: "We need not worry about our national debt—if the next generations have to pay it they will simply pay it to themselves, as they are the lenders as well as the borrowers." Hot dog! Well, that's what the President served to the king and queen last week.
BIRDWELL SUTLIVE.

TEACHERS' PAY AGAIN.

Chicago, June 20.—This is a great world; the police and firemen take a cut in pay and the teachers want a raise.

What difference does it make to us what other cities pay their teachers? This is Chicago and many of these cities do not employ married teachers. Let these teachers go to these cities and make their living; no one is holding them here.

Mr. Fewkes and his outfit should remember and be thankful for their fine salaries, for I think $3,400 and $2,200 for ten months' service is nothing to be sniffed at. So cut the sobs and poverty talk.
MRS. JOHN MARSHALL.

A THOUGHT ON TIPPING.

Chicago, June 21.—In today's TRIBUNE I note that cab driver, Gee Kay, says: "As usual, no tip."

By what sense of reasoning is he entitled to a tip? When one goes to the grocery store and orders a bill of goods does any one tip the clerk? When one gets on the street car, elevated train or railroad train does one tip the motorman or engineer? No.

If cab drivers want more money let them get it from their employers and not the public.
W. A. DELANEY.

CAN CLEAR UP A KIDNAPING.

Chicago, June 20.—Since Carl Weiss revealed that the Poles had grabbed Danzig and Crawford avenue, I'm ready to confess.

If you will communicate with me, Mr. "Wise," I'll tell you where the Poles are hiding Crawford avenue.
MRS. A. J. PIERZYNSKI.

TAXES AND ASSESSMENTS.

Chicago, June 15.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Thirteen years ago we purchased a lot outside of Chicago from a large subdividing corporation—no improvements in. There is a balance of about $70 due before we can receive the deed, etc. Since purchasing the county has put in sewers, sidewalks, and paving. We have not paid assessments since 1930, and now, including penalties, etc., we must pay up over $500 before receiving title. We feel this is too much, as we already have over $1,200 in the property.

1. What would you advise? Lots out there are now very cheap.
2. If and when the county offers it at auction what is the procedure?
3. Will we be notified if this occurs?
4. Can the possessor of title bid and acquire the clear title for a fraction of the assessment charges?
5. Must he have some outsider purchase it and turn it over to him?
6. If this auction comes up before the balance on deed is paid, then what shall we do?
F. K.

1. The office of the county clerk is the proper source of information as to the amount to be paid to clear off the tax defaults.

2. A tax sale can be held immediately upon the taxpayer's default. The bidder who offers to pay the taxes for the smallest penalty receives a certificate and if there is no redemption in two years, receives a tax deed. While in some other states, notably Wisconsin, a tax deed is a good title, in Illinois it is ordinarily merely a cloud on the title. The cloud is serious enough so that a real estate purchaser can be expected to insist that the title be cleared. A Torrens registration is often the simplest and cheapest procedure where court action proves necessary. Illinois Revised Statutes, chapter 120, section 411, says that where the grantee doesn't take possession, or fails to keep the taxes paid, he must accept a tender of his advances plus 7% plus penalties and costs, and must reconvey. Nevertheless the penalties mount rapidly and it is, in general, advisable to keep taxes paid. If there is no bidding at the tax sale the result is a "forfeiture." In either case the owner can obtain an estimate for redemption from the county clerk.

3. It is the ordinary procedure now to mail a registered letter in connection with tax sale. There would be publication notice in connection with foreclosure of tax forfeitures.

4. Yes, if there is a foreclosure of tax forfeitures. You might inquire at the office of the state's attorney in the County building as to whether he would be satisfied with the amount that you are prepared to bid.

5. No. See 4.

6. We see no reason why you should not bid what you are willing to bid. It is nearly always advisable for a purchaser of real estate to employ an attorney throughout, and we advise you to employ one now.

ZONING VIOLATION.

Chicago, June 14.—[Friend of the People.]—Our street is zoned for residential purposes only. At the rear of No. 2860 is an old dilapidated garage which is being operated as a grocery and delicatessen store, the refuse from which not only is an unsightly detriment to the neighborhood but it also attracts many rats. The presence of this store detracts from our neighborhood and depreciates the residential value of our property. Inasmuch as Madison street is zoned for business and is but one short block away there is no excuse for this nuisance to continue. Please advise me as to the proper officials to contact so that an end will be put to this violation of the laws.
A. T.

The owner of the above mentioned premises has been notified to discontinue use of premises for commercial purposes. Failure to comply within the time specified in our notice will result in prosecution according to law.
RICHARD E. SCHMIDT,
Commissioner of Buildings.

STARK TO WAR ON PENDERGAST'S SENATE BACKER

Will Enter Campaign for Truman's Seat.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 24.—(AP)—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, a Democrat, who helped smash the Kansas City political machine of Tom Pendergast, also a Democrat, today announced his candidacy for the United States senate.

Gov. L. C. Stark.

The announcement of the apple growing governor, a world war veteran, was a political bombshell. His candidacy presages a bitter primary battle in 1940 with Senator Harry S. Truman, the man whom Pendergast helped lift in 1934 from obscurity as a county judge.

Truman Stands By Boss.

Senator Truman, who said when he heard Pendergast had been sentenced to serve fifteen months at Leavenworth prison for income tax evasion that he would not desert the boss, has announced he will seek reëlection.

Stark was elected in 1936 with Pendergast backing but quickly broke with the boss. He refused to appoint Pendergast men and picked a Kansas City election board that uncovered thousands of frauds in registration. Last year he successfully backed James M. Douglas for renomination to the State Supreme court over James V. Billings, supported by Pendergast.

Pay Rolls Purged.

Pendergast's city manager and police director resigned under attack by Gov. Stark and about 1,000 Pendergast henchmen were dropped from Kansas City's pay rolls.

The federal government paralleled the governor's drive with one of its own. It wrecked a $12,000,000 a year narcotics ring and a $20,000,000 a year gambling racket in Kansas City, then put Pendergast behind the bars.

THOUSANDS LOLL ON SAND AS SWIM SEASON IS OPENED

Thousands of Chicagoans went to the beaches yesterday, the opening day of the swimming season, but few went in the water. The lake temperature was 59 degrees at noon, too cold for all except the bravest.

Twenty-three lake beaches and three swimming pools, operated by the city bureau of recreation, were manned by 150 lifeguards. Ten thousand sun bathers lolled on the shore at Rainbow beach, from 75th and 79th streets. At 79th street, where a new water filtration plant is being built, more than 3,000 people spent the day. More than 5,000 were at Rogers Park on the north side and as many dotted the sands at Clarendon beach.

The Chicago park district plans to open its beaches and pools next Saturday. The county board also has set Saturday as the opening day for three swimming pools in the forest preserves.

10,000 APPLAUD TOWNSEND, BOO INSURGENT MOVE

Indianapolis, Ind., June 24.—(AP)—"We're with Doc Townsend" and "Down with traitors," shouted 10,000 delegates to the national convention of Townsend Old Age Pension clubs today as they took notice of a threatened revolt against Dr. Francis E. Townsend's leadership.

After decrying, with boos and hisses, an insurgent movement which Harvey Smith of Covington, Ky., has said he would promote, the convention voted approval of plans for the future. One of the plans is a $1,000,000 radio fund.

One thousand unexpected hungry guests, all demanding food, upset the plans for the Townsendites' banquet. They and 4,300 delegates consumed 2,500 chickens and 2,500 pounds of potatoes.

New Ship—Old Name

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

New Cunard liner bearing proud old name of Mauretania as it entered New York harbor yesterday.

New York, June 24.—[U. P.]—The new Cunarder Mauretania, built for comfort rather than speed, docked today on her maiden trans-Atlantic voyage.

Namesake of a former speed queen of the Atlantic, the new Mauretania made the trans-Atlantic crossing in five days 21 hours and 40 minutes—an average speed of 20.6 knots. Capt. A. T. Brown and the 825 passengers and 574 crew members were enthusiastic about its performance.

The new 34,000 ton Mauretania is 722 feet long, draws 30 feet 9 inches of water, and has a beam of 89½ feet. She will sail for England on Friday.

The former record holding Mauretania was broken up for scrap in 1934.

SLIGHT QUAKES JAR CALIFORNIA FROM END TO END

San Francisco, Cal., June 24.—[U. P.]—Mild earthquakes jarred California today from the Oregon line to the Mexican border but no damage was reported.

The most severe shocks were at San Diego, where a tremor at 8:27 a. m. stopped clocks and caused tall buildings to sway. It was estimated the epicenter was 500 miles from San Diego, but the direction had not been calculated.

Central California cities felt a short, sharp shock at 5:02 a. m., recorded by seismographs both at San Diego and Berkeley. Northern California cities felt tremors yesterday. Reports of mild shocks were received from Scotia, near Eureka, and the mineral and Manzanita lake areas.

30,000 Will Celebrate German Day in City

The day is sponsored by an association combining some 200 German-American organizations. Capt. George H. Weideling is president and Michael Belden secretary. # R. O. T. C. LEAVES BOOKS FOR REAL FIRING PRACTICE

250 College Boys Train at Fort Sheridan.

BY DORIS LOCKERMAN.

An enemy "plane" flying swiftly over Lake Michigan was shot down with the first blast of a 3-inch anti-aircraft gun at Fort Sheridan.

This did not surprise the gun crew, who were R. O. T. C. boys from the University of Kansas. They have spent three years at their school studying the methods of modern warfare, and particularly coast artillery defense. When they fired, the enemy was expected to drop. But it surprised the seasoned officers who are their instructors at the fort.

Enemy Shot Down Daily.

The enemy, which is in reality a sleeve target, a red, conical bag attached to a high speed army plane, is shot down each day at Fort Sheridan. It is part of the practical training of 250 college juniors, members of the coast artillery units of the Reserve Officers Training corps from seven western colleges and universities. They have already spent one week of a six weeks' training period at the fort. When they are graduated from college next year, they will receive commissions as second lieutenants in the reserve corps.

Most of the college boys had never shot a pistol before they came to the fort. Now they are familiar with .30 and .50 calibre machine guns that shoot 500 bullets a minute, 3-inch guns and side arms.

Cadets Do All the Work.

All target work is done by the cadets. Behind them stand their officers, coaching them only when it is necessary. Col. G. A. Wildrick, senior instructor, directs the anti-aircraft practice. Col. John B. Johnson is executive officer of the encampment.

"We are developing leaders" said Col. Johnson, "We want them to use their own judgment."

And the boys like it. "I've learned plenty—more in a week than in all my drilling at school" said one, a tanned young engineer from Illinois. "This isn't exactly a vacation, and none of us has any trouble getting to sleep at night, but I don't know a guy who would skip it."

EX-AID OF EARLE GUILTY IN MISUSE OF STATE FUNDS

Harrisburg, Pa., June 25 [Sunday].—(AP)—Roy E. Brownmiller, former Pennsylvania highway secretary, was convicted early today of malfeasance and nonfeasance in office in the "misuse and waste" of more than $600,000 in highway funds in Luzerne county during last fall's election.

A jury of eleven Republicans and one Democrat announced its verdict at 1:25 a. m. Chicago time. They convicted Brownmiller on an indictment returned by a special grand jury of Dauphin county, which investigated campaign charges in 1938. The jury deliberated ten hours.

Brownmiller, a member of the cabinet of Democratic Gov. George H. Earle, was specifically accused of condoning the "padding" of highway department pay rolls in Luzerne county, home of Republican Gov. Arthur H. James, who led the successful Republican fight that brought defeat to Democratic candidates last fall.

Brownmiller was the first of a dozen prominent Democrats to be tried on charges of misconduct in office.

R. E. KENNICOTT, 70, DIES; FOREST PRESERVE CHIEF

Naturalist and Student of Indian Lore.

Ransom E. Kennicott, veteran chief forester of the Cook county forest preserve district and one of its founders, died of a heart attack yesterday at Torch lake, in upper Michigan, where he and his wife had gone for a short visit at the summer home of their daughter, Mrs. Virgil Leech of Detroit. He was 70 years old and lived at 1733 Van Buren avenue, Des Plaines.

Widely known as a naturalist, Mr. Kennicott was asked in 1914 to help plan the forest preserve system and was appointed its first chief forester upon the completion of the organization in 1915.

Student of Indian Lore.

Every development and improvement of the system has borne Mr. Kennicott's touch, it has been said. By many he was regarded as the real father of the forest preserves that provide outdoor havens for millions of city people annually. He was a student of Indian lore and encouraged the naming of tracts, boulevards and areas after Chicagoland Indians.

Mr. Kennicott served on the board of the National State Park convention and on the board of the state Audubon society. He also served as president of the Ohio Valley Conference of Park Executives, and as president of the Regional Park association. He was a fellow of the National Institute of Park Superintendents.

Born Near Glenview.

Mr. Kennicott was born in The Grove in Milwaukee avenue, near Glenview. He was the son of Amasa Kennicott and the grandson of Dr. John A. Kennicott, who settled in the Glenview area in 1834. His uncle was the late Robert Kennicott, famous naturalist.

At Northwestern university Mr. Kennicott was a star football player and captain of the team in 1891, 1892 and 1893. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Clementine Roland Kennicott; the daughter, Mrs. Leech, and three sons, Ransom, Roland, and Amasa. He was a member of the Des Plaines lodge No. 890, A. F. & A. M., and of Beta Theta Phi fraternity.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Tuesday in the chapel at Lee and Perry streets in Des Plaines.

MISSING PIECES HUNTED IN NEARY SLAYING PUZZLE

Weapon Sought as Clew to Killer's Personality.

Rose Neary.

More than three weeks have passed ce the radio cord murder of Miss ose Neary, a ell-to-do west le spinster, yet e crime still is solved. But po- e are not dis- uraged. One tective, who s worked on e case since e beginning, st night pre- cted an early lution.

"This killing one of the rangest we ave had in ars," he said. t's like a jig w puzzle. Our , however, is not only to fit the ces together, but first to find the pieces. Several are missing."

One of the missing pieces is the weapon the slayer used to crush Miss Neary's head. The killer trapped her June 2 in her apartment at 3248 Franklin boulevard, struck her down with a blunt weapon, and strangled her with a length of radio cord.

Search Continues for Weapon.

Police have the cord. They know that it was snipped with scissors from the kitchen radio. A wide and careful search has failed to uncover the other weapon. It would be helpful. police said, in determining what type of person would be likely to use it.

During the last few days detectives have concentrated their search on Miss Neary's financial affairs. She possessed an estate valued at more than $70,000, which she inherited from her mother, Mrs. Clara Neary O'Rourke, and her stepfather, Andrew O'Rourke, both dead.

Miss Neary was generous to church charities and to friends. She gave or lent substantial sums to two friends, Fred Hayward and Edward Donovan. Donovan and Hayward both have been questioned by detectives. Both admitted getting money from Miss Neary. Donovan said he borrowed nearly $3,000. Hayward said he received $1,000 from Miss Neary as a personal gift and $7,000 more from her as a gift in the name of her mother.

Long Friend of Family.

Hayward had known Miss Neary, her mother, and her stepfather for many years. Neighbors said he was regarded as "one of the family." He was to have met Miss Neary on the day of her murder, but had to cancel the engagement because of work.

In their investigation, Lieut. Otto Erlanson, head of the homicide squad, and Austin station detectives, have not overlooked the possibility that Miss Neary's slayer was a prowler.

Two or three wrist watches Miss Neary is known to have possessed are missing.

Against the theory that the slayer was a prowler, however, are various conflicting circumstances, all of which police are not yet ready to reveal. Their first belief is that Miss Neary knew the killer.

BOARD APPROVES C. H. M'CORMICK TAX SETTLEMENT

Washington, D. C., June 24.—(AP)—The tax appeals board approved today an agreement settling for $2,750,000 the government's claim for $4,435,409 against the estate of Cyrus H. McCormick for additional estate taxes.

Judson F. Stone and John P. Wilson of Chicago, executors of the estate, contended the internal revenue bureau overvalued McCormick's stock in International Harvester company by $7,809,795, and erred in rejecting deduction of $250,000 administrative expenses, debts exceeding $1,000,000, and charitable bequests of $3,464,873.

The executors had reported a net taxable estate of $22,412,002, and paid $11,737,490 federal estate tax. The bureau claimed the taxable estate amounted to $28,894,794, and the total tax due was $16,172,899.

SERVE MURDER WARANTS ON 2 BOY SUSPECTS

Toulon, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—Murder warants issued two days ago were served tonight on Edgar and Clifford Lodwick, brothers, 15 and 13 years old, respectively, in connection with the shooting of John W. Rude, 30, a farmer. The boys insist that the shooting was accidental.

Rude, who lived near Wyoming, in Stark county, was shot in the head with a rifle Wednesday. At the coroner's inquest this morning the Lodwick boys said they were hunting for birds near his home. While searching for a bird which they believed they had killed they found Rude dead.

They became frightened, they said, took Rude's car and started out for an uncle's home sixty miles away. The coroner's jury returned a verdict finding Rude was killed by "persons unknown," and recommending that the Lodwick boys be held for further investigation.

PHILS BEAT CUBS, 1-0; SOX ROUT BOSTON, 14-6

MARTY'S HOMER SNAPS SIX GAME WINNING STREAK

Mulcahy Turns In 2 Hit Masterpiece.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Joe Marty's second inning homer esterday was the only run in the econd match of the Cubs' and Phil-es' three game series. Thus the ubs' six game winning streak ended s it started last Sunday, in a 1 to 0 ame in which the only score was maximum smash. The Cubs made vo hits off Hugh Mulcahy, the same umber they made in the game which arted the streak.

Mulcahy has won four games this ear, while losing eight. Three of e victories have been at the ex-ense of the Cubs. It was the sixth me in nine games that the Cubs ave lost to the tail end Phillies, who ave whipped Cincinnati one out of ine, St. Louis three out of ten, New ork three out of seven, Pittsburgh ree out of nine, Brooklyn two t of five, and Boston one out of ve. Thus, if they win today, the hils will have thrashed the Cubs as any times as they have won from ree other first division teams com-ned. They already have won as any from the Cubs as from all the her second division teams combined.

Root Pitched, Too.

The Phillies made only five hits f Charley Root, of which Marty's omer was the first. Merrill May oubled right after Joe had circled e bases, then the visitors went tless until the sixth when Jack olling and Heinie Mueller hooked a couple of singles. The other t was May's second double at the art of the eighth, on which he was rown out while trying to reach ird.

The first of the Cubs' two hits was double by Carl Reynolds in the rst inning. Billy Herman previously d walked and stopped at third. erman, as it turned out, was the ly Cub to reach third and Reyn-ds was the only other runner who ached second.

The second and last hit off Mul-hy was a single by Herman with e out in the sixth. He forthwith nk in a double play. Mulcahy alked four, two of them leadoff en in innings in which the Cubs, ho can't bunt, foreswore even an fort to sacrifice. The way Mulcahy as going it wouldn't have done them y good, even if they knew how to nt.

Marty Takes Charge.

The Cubs did a mite of threatening the first inning and the Phillies d the scoring in the second inning. ter the first three Phillies had been tired and Hack had been thrown t at the start of the Cub half of e first inning, Herman walked, used while Galan flied to Scott and opped at third on Reynolds' double left center. The threat ended on artnett's tap to May.

Arnovich led off the Phillies' sec-d, and if he had made a hit he ould have been .400 even for the ason with eighty-four hits in 210 mes at bat. But he didn't hit; he ed to Galan. This failure did not press Marty, who has a much small-batting average about which to orry. He did something about it banging his game winning homer to the center field bleacher. May llowed with a double to right, but ung fouled to Hartnett and Millies unced to Herman.

From May's double in the first half the second inning, until Mulcahy as out in the Philly sixth, neither de made a hit. At this juncture, wever, Bolling singled to left and opped at second on Mueller's sin-e off Herman's glove. Scott flied to lan, but Arnovich walked, loading

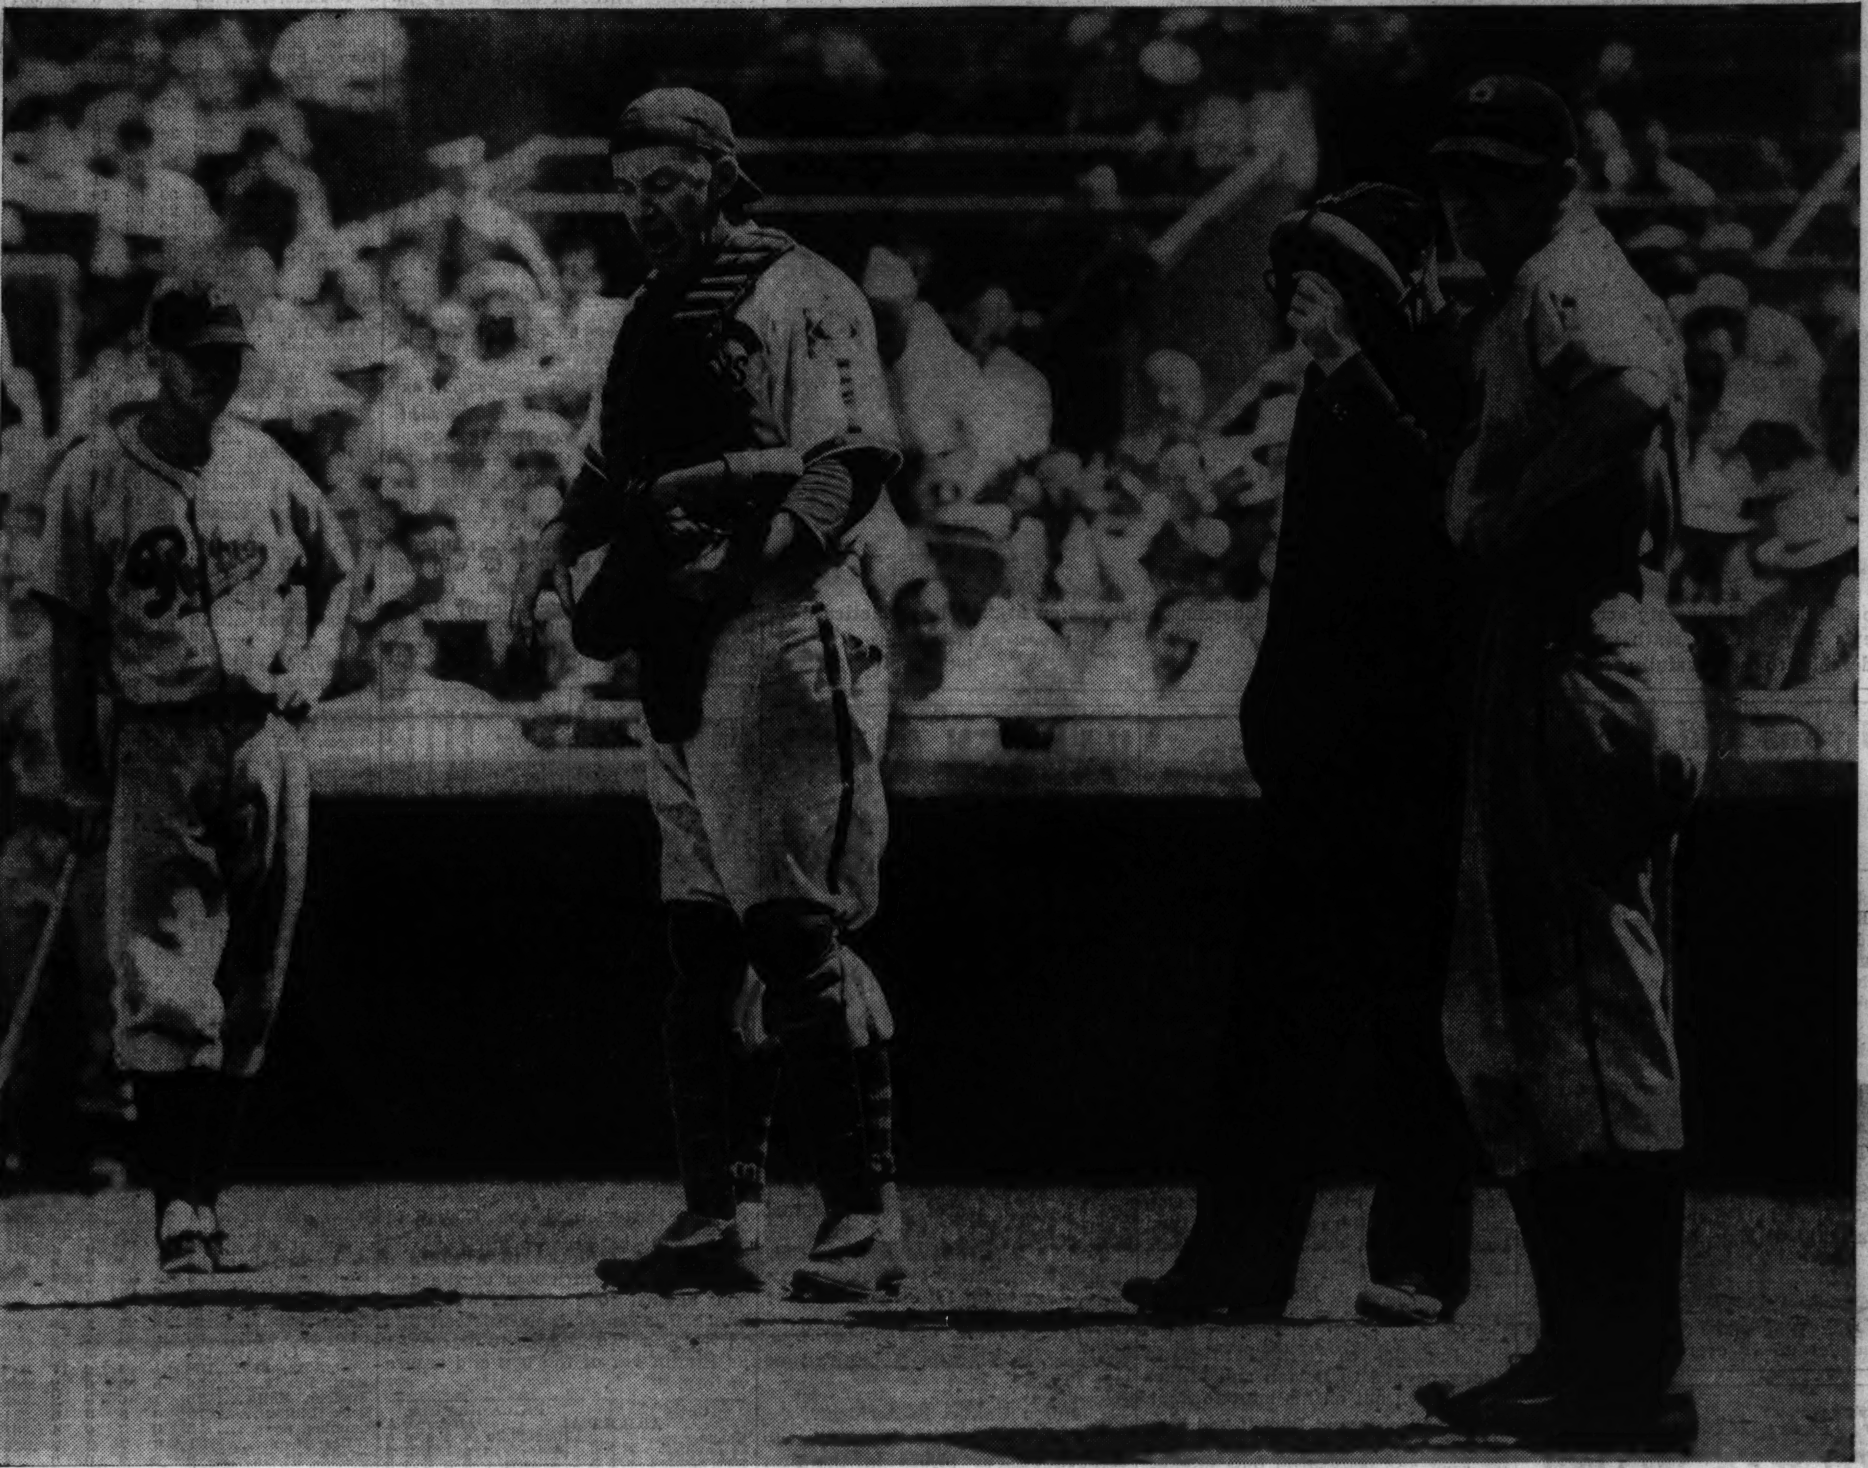
1,000 MORE POINTS FOR GABBY IN DRIZZLEPUSS DERBY



Gabby Hartnett speaks his piece about umpires, particularly George Barr (right), who has just permitted Joe Marty to walk on what Gabby thought was a strike in the fourth inning of yesterday's Cub-Phillie game in Wrigley field. It was a magnificent speech. Del Young, Phillie shortstop (left), and Third Baseman Merrill May listened patiently, but they weren't impressed very much. Neither was Barr. Marty was still on first when play was resumed. The Cubs lost, 1 to 0.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Summit, N. J., June 24.—Joe Louis defends his heavyweight championship Wednesday night in Yankee stadium for the seventh time since he whipped Jimmy Braddock in Chicago two years ago. He has knocked out five men who have held the title, a record surpassed only by his willingness to meet any opponent.

The Bomber's challenger, Tony Galento, risen to present importance because of the dearth of heavyweights, because of astute publicity directed by his manager, Joe Jacobs, and by a series of eight knockouts in the last eighteen months, is the question mark. Louis, the champion, is the measuring unit by means of which the outcome Wednesday should be determined.

Joe's Astoundingly Consistent.

Louis has been astoundingly consistent in his five years of professional boxing. Only in his first battle with Max Schmeling has he failed his public. That defeat, his only loss, has been forgotten since last June when he annihilated the German in two minutes.

It is important, then, as Galento comes within a step of his last day's drill, to review not only what Tony accomplished in five rounds this afternoon, but to consider that workout in comparison with the proved ability of Louis.

Another enthusiastic, neighborly crowd of more than 1,200 sunned on the grassy slopes above Madam Bey's camp. For these spectators Tony boxed five rounds, three with Abe

PICARD SHOOTS 134 TO LEAD IN ANTHRACITE OPEN

Scranton, Pa., June 24.—(AP)—Adding a one under par 69 to his record first round 65, Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., today posted a 36 hole total of 134 to retain the lead in the 72 hole $5,000 anthracite open golf tourney. Sammy Snead of White Surphur Springs, W. Va., got a 68 to take second with 138.

Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., national open champion, showed a reversal of form, scoring a 68 compared to his first round 78 for 146. Lewis Worsham of Chevy Chase, Md., also shot a 68 for 145, a stroke behind Ed Oliver of Hornell, N. Y., at 144.

CUNNINGHAM FAILS TO BREAK ¾ MILE MARK

Jersey City, N. J., June 24.—(AP)—Glenn Cunningham aimed at the world's three-quarter mile record today, but failed in winning a special event in the annual metropolitan A. A. U. track meet. The Kansan ran the distance in 3 minutes 1 second, as compared with 2:59.5 made by England's Sydney Wooderson June 6.

Barred from the championship mile run because he is no longer a resident of this area, Cunningham announced yesterday he would try for the three-quarter mile record. He not only missed the mark, but also had a hard time winning the race. Al Hillman of the Bayside A. C., Jersey City, with a 125 yard handicap, fought the Kansan right down to the tape before Glenn's closing drive opened a three yard deciding margin.

Mucho Gusto Wins Closing Lincoln Stake

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Mucho Gusto, an aged thoroughbred owned by Mrs. Kirby Ramsey and R. F. Coppage, strode sedately toward the starting gate while several comparative youngsters, such as Bala Ormont, Manie O'Hara, and Some Count, capered about him eager to be on their way in yesterday's $2,500 Lincoln handicap, which headed the final program of the Lincoln Fields meeting.

When Starter Bill Hamilton gave them the bell, the years seemed to drop away from Mucho Gusto. Like a juvenile he scampered to the front, forgetting his dignity. He hustled around the clubhouse turn, scurried down the backstretch, whirled around the last bend, and headed home.

Bala Ormont Challenges.

A mere 3 year old, Bala Ormont, challenged him in the stretch, and a shade of weariness seemed to show in Mucho Gusto's stride. But the old fellow came right on and crossed the finish line nearly a length ahead of his young rival, while another old timer, Chance Ray, was getting third place.

Mucho Gusto, a 7 year old gelding, was making his first start since Jan. 2, but his old time class and a few good workouts convinced the crowd of 12,000 that he was the best horse on the track. So they backed him down to less than 3 to 2 odds. The Friedberg and Axton entry of Manie O'Hara and Bala Ormont was second choice at 3 to 1.

After running the mile and a sixteenth in 1:45 4-5, Mucho Gusto paid off at $4.80, $3.20, and $2.60. Bala Ormont returned $3.20 and $2.40. Chance Ray, last year's winner, was worth $3.80 to show.

Second Victory in Lincoln.

This was Mucho Gusto's second victory in the Lincoln handicap, his previous successful effort having occurred in 1936. He ran second last season.

Jockey Al Robertson's masterful rating was a highly important factor in Mucho Gusto's victory. He rushed the old boy to the front in the first sixteenth, then took him firmly in hand and kept him just a length ahead of Chance Ray during the run down the backstretch. On the turn, he called for more speed and Mucho Gusto drew out to a two length advantage while Bala Ormont was passing Chance Ray and moving into second place. Mucho Gusto ran well in the early part of the stretch drive and

DAWSON WINS ILLINOIS AMATEUR GOLF TITLE

Beats Carlson, 4 and 3, After Trailing at 18th

Champaign, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—George Dawson of Glen Oak Country club, Chicago, won the Illinois amateur golf championship today by defeating Ralph Carlson of Lombard, captain of the University of Illinois golf team, 4 and 3 in a 36 hole match on the Champaign Country club course.

His victory gave the Dawson family its third state championship in the nine years the competition has been held. In 1931 and 1932, Warren Dawson, a brother of the new champion, won the title. The brothers are both University of Illinois graduates. In addition to winning the state title, Dawson will have the Louis L. Emerson championship trophy for one year.

Carlson Rallies to Lead.

Carlson caddied for the new champion five years ago at the Glen Oak club. Carlson also won the Chicago Tribune Golf school trophy at that time.

Dawson was 2 up at the end of nine holes this morning but a strong comeback by Carlson marked by excellent putting, carried him into a 1 up lead after 18 holes of play. In the afternoon, after being even on the 19th, 23d and 25th holes, Dawson's greater experience asserted itself and he held a two hole lead at the end of the 27th.

Dawson continued his brilliant play during the final six holes, shooting pars on all except the 29th, on which he had a bogey 6. Carlson's woods were erratic during the final six holes and he sliced into the rough on several occasions. Dawson played the 33 holes in 3 over par.

The cards:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Par—Out | 545 | 443 | 434—36 |
| Par—In | 354 | 444 | 345—36 |
| MORNING. | | | |
| Dawson—Out | 445 | 443 | 435—36 |
| Carlson—Out | 555 | 443 | 444—38 |
| Dawson—In | 354 | 454 | 445—38 |
| Carlson—In | 243 | 544 | 346—35 |
| AFTERNOON. | | | |
| Dawson—Out | 445 | 452 | 534—36 |
| Carlson—Out | 645 | 543 | 445—40 |
| Dawson—In | 364 | 444 | |
| Carlson—In | 344 | 565 | |

Dawson held a two stroke lead at the end of the first nine holes, shooting par 36, while Carlson had a 38. A birdie 4 on the first hole and a par 4 on the second sent Dawson off to a 2 up lead which lasted through the next five holes, all of which were halved with pars. Dawson had difficulty on the 150 yard eighth hole when his tee shot went over the green, but he dropped a four foot putt for a par 3 to take a 3 up edge as his opponent, who also missed the green and needed two putts. Dawson had a bogey 5 on the ninth, taking three shots to get on the green after putting his drive in the rough, and Carlson took advantage of the opening to roll in a seven foot putt for a par, which left him 2 down.

Three Straight Birdies.

Carlson then rallied brilliantly, running down birdies on the 10th, 11th, and 12th holes to overcome Dawson's advantage and take the lead. He dropped a twenty-five foot putt on the 140 yard 10th hole for a deuce, won the 11th with a thirty-five foot putt, and stuck his second shot within three feet of the pin on the 12th and sank the putt to go in front. He was leading, 2 up, after seventeen holes, but encountered trouble on the 18th when his drive went into the rough and lost to Dawson's par 5 to go to lunch leading, 1 up. Dawson had bogeys on the 14th and 16th holes on the return trip, shooting a 38, compared to Carlson's one under par 35.

Dawson evened the match on the 19th with a birdie 4, and the next two holes were halved in pars. Dawson then took the lead on the 22d hole with a par 4 as Carlson hooked his drive into the rough.

Carlson squared it up on the next hole with a par 4 against Dawson's bogey, but the Glen Oak veteran regained the lead on the 24th when Carlson missed a birdie by inches on an 18 foot putt. The match was even again when Carlson took the 25th, but Dawson went 1 up as Carlson drove into a trap and took a 4 against his opponent's par 3 on No. 26. Dawson made it 2 up on the 27th with a par 4, Carlson missing a 20 foot putt by two inches.

Dawson Clinches It.

The 28th was halved, both shooting par 3, but Carlson had a birdie on the 29th and was only 1 down then. The 30th was halved in par 4s, but Dawson shot the next three holes in pars, while Carlson, his driving erratic, bogeyed the 31st and 33d, and was two over on the 32d to drop entirely out of contention and leave Dawson a 4 and 3 winner on the 33d.

Dawson, on his way to the title, qualified with 117, defeated his brother, Warren, 2 and 1, in the first round, won over Gus Moreland of Peoria, the medalist, 4 and 3; dealt Robert Price, Waukegan, a 2 and 1 defeat in the quarter finals, and then beat James Frisina, Taylorville, 4 and 2, in the semi-finals.

Mike Stolarik of Waukegan defeated Bill Richart, Urbana, 5 and 4, to win the first flight title and Joe Doyle, Jacksonville, won over Clem Gerhart of Champaign, 1 up in 20 holes, to take the second flight championship.

HAND MARCUM 7 RUN LEAD IN SECOND INNING

Get 17 Hits Off Three Pitchers.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Boston, Mass., June 24.—The White Sox, who apparently thought a losing streak of four games waranted drastic treatment, today reared up in amazing fashion. They first served notice on Boston's second place Red Sox with a seven run second inning. They kept adding to this neat assortment of runs and finally accomplished a 14 to 6 triumph in behalf of Johnny Marcum, whose first start as a Chicagoan was timed so that he could face his former mates.

Marcum's display of pitching skill against the team which shipped him away last winter, wasn't as poor as indicated by the half dozen runs scored during his nine innings of service. Well in front after the second inning, there was no good reason for bearing down, but, even with this healthy margin, he was nicked for only three runs up to the eighth inning. The others were scored in the ninth when with two out Marcum didn't object to a few hits and his mates paid no attention to fellows running around the bases.

Jim Jr. Is a Flop.

The big second inning cut short a starting assignment for Jim Bagby Jr. Seven men faced Bagby in his disasterous inning and six of them hit safely. Another hit was recorded before Dennis Galehouse could halt the rush. After that Galehouse did fairly well, but eventually he was removed for a pinch hitter and that alteration brought forth Monte Weaver, former Senator, for the last two innings. The Chicagoans plastered him for a half dozen hits and as many runs.

Marcum didn't confine himself to the pitching chores. He also gave material assistance in the run production. His first effort was a single which hurried the removal of Bagby in the second. He drove in one run on this drive. He singled again in the eighth, shoving two mates across. He singled again in the ninth to drive in another run.

Rip Starts the Parade.

The item that touched off the seven run pleasantness in the second was Radcliff's single to right. Walker singled to left and both advanced on Appling's tap to Foxx. McNair scratched a single past Tabor and Radcliff scored. Tresh singled and Walker dashed home. Marcum singled, McNair scoring. Hayes doubled to right center, Tresh and Marcum going home. What remained of Bagby was carted away and Galehouse was brought forth but the storm didn't abate immediately. Kuhel tripled to send in Hayes with the sixth run. Kuhel sneaked home on Kreevich's infeld out, after which Radcliff fanned to end what he had started.

Foxx created a liitle excitement in the home second by leading off with his twelfth homer, a drive into the net atop the left field wall.

Denny Strikes Trouble.

The Chicago fellows jolted Galehouse with three singles and a pass in the fourth, but it happened after two were out, so only one scored. Hayes singled to center, Kuhel singled to right, and Kreevich singled to left, Hayes counting.

Marcum faced trouble in the third inning but got by without damage. A triple by Carey with only one out was followed by Cramer's liner to

GIANTS TROUNCE REDS AGAIN, THIS TIME BY 7 TO 2

Salvo, Another Rookie, Is Puzzle to Leaders.

Cincinnati, O., June 24.—(AP)—Springing another pitching novice on the National league leaders, the New York Giants today took their second straight game from the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 2, on Manuel Salvo's six hit pitching. The victory, twelfth in the Giant's last fourteen games, was the season's fourth for Salvo and followed the two hitter pitched by Bill Lohrman yesterday. Salvo's teammates gave him a three run lead in the first inning when Hank Danning homered with one on and Zeke Bonura duplicated the hit with the bases empty.

In an effort to shake his Reds out of their slump Manager Bill McKechnie returned Ernie Lombardi to the lineup, but he went hitless.

DOUBLE STEAL CATCHES INDIANS NAPPING

Bob Johnson, Athletics' slugging outfielder, slides safely across the plate ahead of Catcher Rollie Hemsley's lunge in the sixth inning of yesterday's Cleveland game at Philadelphia to successfully complete a double steal with Sam Chapman, who was on first. The Athletics won, 10 to 6.

Appling and Vosmik's foul to Kuhel. Marcum's subsequent tight spot was the fifth. The pressure was heavy in this instance but he got by again on one run. Peacock led off with a triple and Galehouse walked. Peacock went home unnoticed while McNair was throwing out Carey. Cramer peeled off a single but Galehouse stopped at third. Vosmik bounced to Kuhel, who threw to Appling and Luke fired the ball back to Joe for a double play.

The Red Sox broke out in a mild way in the sixth for their third run. After two were out Manager Cronin nicked his banished employé for a third hit, a double over third. Tabor's single to center moved Cronin to the plate.

As soon as Weaver reached the mound in the eighth he encountered grief. Appling welcomed him with a single. Luke lost no time stealing second, after which Weaver contributed to his own misery by walking McNair. The two runners moved along on Tresh's bunt and the infield closed in, in hopes of making a play at the plate, but Marcum whistled a single past Carey to score Appling and McNair.

Kreevich beat out a perfect bunt, to start the ninth and stole second and Radcliff walked. Walker popped out but Appling singled to left and Kreevich scored. Radcliff registered on McNair's single to center. Tresh's drive which caromed off Tabor's shin was called an error. It filled the bases. Marcum singled for the third time and Appling counted. McNair scored the final run on Hayes' force of Marcum.

Marcum set down the first two batters in the ninth. Finney then batted for Weaver and walked. He went to second and then to third unmolested. Carey's single scored him. Carey also took two bases without attracting attention and scored on Cramer's triple. A single by Vosmik sent Cramer home. Foxx pushed a single through short, Vosmik taking third. Williams was thrown out by Hayes to conclude the one sided struggle.

the bases. Marty tried to dodge a pitch, but the ball hit his bat and bounced to Herman, who threw him out.

Herman Gets That Single.

After Hack had lined to Mueller at the start of the home sixth Herman lined a single to right, the last Cub hit of the afternoon. Galan then bounced into a double play, started by Mueller.

May doubled to the wall in right center at the start of the seventh, but was out trying to make it a triple, Reynolds to Herman to Hack. Young popped to Bartell and Millies was thrown out on his bunt to Root.

After Gleeson and Bartell had been retired in the eighth, Leiber batted for Root and walked on four pitches. Bryant went to first to run for Leiber, but was forced by Hack, Young to Mueller.

Jack Russell went in to pitch the ninth for the Cubs. He retired the side in order. In the home ninth Mueller threw out Herman, Galan, and Reynolds.

Claude Passeau of the Cubs, and Walter Kirby Higbe of the Phillies, chattels in the Cubs' last player swap late in May, will oppose each other in the final game of the Chicago-Philadelphia series today.

Umpiring has been unusually good in Cub games the last few weeks, but in the second inning yesterday Umpire Ziggy Sears made one of those slips on a force play that utterly amazed everybody with two good eyes. Or one good eye, for that matter.

The Cubs yesterday recalled Shortstop Bobby Mattick from the Milwaukee Brewers and sent Shortstop Steve Mesner to the Brewers to replace him. Mattick will report to the Cubs this afternoon.

Heinie Mueller, whose ninth inning bobble gave the Cubs Friday's game with the Phillies, made amends by throwing out three Cub batsmen in the ninth inning of yesterday's game.

The Cubs will return to Chicago after an exhibition game in Milwaukee tomorrow, and will catch a midnight train for St. Louis.

Cuban Stars and Mills to Clash in Two Games

The Cuban Stars of Havana, Cuba, will play the Mills in a double-header in Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue, and the Black Spiders of Louisville, Ky., will oppose the Spencer Coals in two games in Spencer field, 4200 North Central avenue, this afternoon. Tomorrow night the Coals will play the St. Louis Stars of the Negro National league in Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets.

The Cubans, on a five month tour of the United States, have compiled a brilliant record thus far. Among the stars are Pedro Pague, first baseman, and Silvino Ruiz and Isidro Fabre, pitchers.

Three of the leading hitters in the Tri-State league will be in the Mills lineup. They are Second Baseman Joe Rezo, .488; Center Fielder Gene Rye, .400, and Third Baseman Nick Polly, .405.

The Spencer Coals will seek their twelfth consecutive triumph against the Black Spiders. One of the strongest teams touring the country, the Spiders will be making their first appearance in Chicago.

The Coals will start Bill [Lefty] Stevens in the first game. Tony Sims will work the second.

POLICE NINES TO OPEN TITLE SERIES SATURDAY

The annual series to decide the baseball championship of the Chicago police department will open Saturday in Comiskey park. Proceeds go to the Policemen's Benevolent Association of Chicago.

Police Captain Harry J. O'Connell of West North avenue station will lead the north side team. Capt. Eugene Barry, again will head the south side aggregation which won the title last year. The series will be concluded with games on Sunday in Comiskey park, and Sunday, July 9, in Wrigley field.

There is plenty of big league talent on the teams. Capt. O'Connell's north side squad boasts two topnotch pitchers. Mike Delaney, who once hurled for the Washington Senators, and McEwing Burrows, who a few years ago was tossing for the Mills team in Chicago. Tony Robinson, who was a second baseman for Pittsburgh, and Jack Walsh, who caught for Cleveland, are in shape for the north side.

Capt. Barry's south siders have three seasoned hurlers in Eddie Dennis, Roy Gutcher, and Teddy Budil, all former big league stars. In the infield George Brunner, Harry Shipanek, Tim O'Connor, and Joe Conlan are a quartet of heavy hitters. Each team has been strengthened by new players.

DODGERS' TRAINER KNOCKS DOWN A NEWSPAPER MAN

Pittsburgh, Pa., June 24.—[Special.]—Charles Wilson, 44 year old trainer of the Brooklyn Dodgers, late tonight created a diversion for dozens of onlookers, including most members of the Brooklyn club, when he knocked down Edward Zeltner, correspondent of a New York newspaper.

Wilson's grievance was that Zeltner had misquoted him in a story in which Wilson allegedly stated that Bill Klem, dean of National league umpires, had reached the end of his career. The trainer accosted the writer directly in front of the Schenley hotel, spoke a few words and then swung a right that flattened Zeltner. Coach Charley Dressen separated the combatants almost immediately.

CRAVAT EQUALS TRACK RECORD IN AQUEDUCT RACE

Wins $25,250 Brooklyn Handicap by Length.

New York, June 24.—[Special.]—Picking up more than half the field in the last quarter mile, Cravat today won the historic Brooklyn handicap in time that equaled the track record set by Discovery, only three time winner of Aqueduct's richest test, for the mile and an eighth. The gross was $25,250, of which $18,250 went to Townsend B. Martin, who purchased the son of Sickle in the fall of 1937 at the C. V. Whitney dispersal at Pimlico.

Until Cravat turned on his electrifying rush he seemed beaten, and it appeared that the outsider in the field, John B. Partridge's Our Ketcham, would be the winner under the light impost of 101, twenty-five pounds less than Cravat's top weight. Our Ketcham's impost represented Jockey Ronnie Nash, who was four pounds over the 97 assigned by Handicapper Jack Campbell.

Cravat Wins by Length.

That four pounds may have been the difference between the first money and the $4,000 which Partridge received, for the top weighted horse and the bottom weighted horse were even thirty yards from the finish, and at the end Cravat was winner by only a length.

Behind Our Ketcham and going nose and nose were The Chief and Can't Wait, which finished in that order. The former is last year's Brooklyn winner, which was timed on that occasion in 1:48 2-5. Cravat ran a fifth of a second faster today and his performance may be considered more meritorious than Discovery's, as his impost was 126 against 123 for Discovery when he set the mark.

Cravat was a 3 to 1 chance in the betting, as was Fighting Fox.

Heelfly Delays Start.

At the post there was the usual delay caused by Heelfly, who was immediately taken to the outside of the stall gate. Jockey Nash shot Our Ketcham to the front with such speed that even The Chief was outpaced. Fighting Fox was not far away. Cravat, however, was far off the pace from the beginning, and dropped farther and farther back as the field went to the turn. After the swing around the bend had been made and the horses were half way to the top of the stretch, Cravat was ten or twelve lengths off the lead and seemed to be thoroughly beaten.

The long shot headed into the home lane still in front. Can't Wait by this time had come forward fast enough to go around Thanksgiving and become a contender with The Chief and Fighting Fox. The last named was the first to falter. That left Our Ketcham in front, The Chief and Can't Wait going head and head, and Cravat far back but running swiftly.

Cravat Has Too Much Speed.

It was only a quarter of a mile to the line, but in that short space Cravat went past Thanksgiving, Fighting Fox, Can't Wait, The Chief, and set sail for Our Ketcham. Nash threw into the final drive all that one could, but Cravat was too much horse and caught Our Ketcham with only a few yards to go.

The victory brought the winner's total for the year to $53,375.

Stretch Drive Wins Handicap for Sun Lover

Stanton, Del., June 24.—(AP)—Jockey Charles Stevenson drove Sun Lover to victory by a nose and a new record in the $10,000 added Kent handicap, one mile and one-sixteenth feature for 3 year olds, today at Delaware Park.

The Millsdale stable entry, son of Sun Beau and Dark Love, came from last place to earn the decision over George D. Widener's Eight Thirty. The winner received $8,975. He paid $11.10 for $2. Two additional lengths away was the 2 to 1 favorite Challedon.

Sun Lover's time was 1:44 4-5, one second slower than the track record but a new mark for the handicap.

As the race was run, Sun Lover was lucky. In the early racing Belair stud's Thellusson set the pace and retained the lead, racing before Eight Thirty and J. A. Manuso's Affair until the turn into the final stretch was reached.

Sun Lover trailed the field of nine for a half mile, but then settled into stride. Stevenson was lucky to find racing room on the inside and move in on the leaders.

Thellusson gave up when challenged to drop into the discard, while Sun Lover moved up through the stretch to challenge Eight Thirty and Challedon. The fast track was no boon to Challedon, and he could not keep apace as Sun Lover and Eight Thirty drove to the finish line.

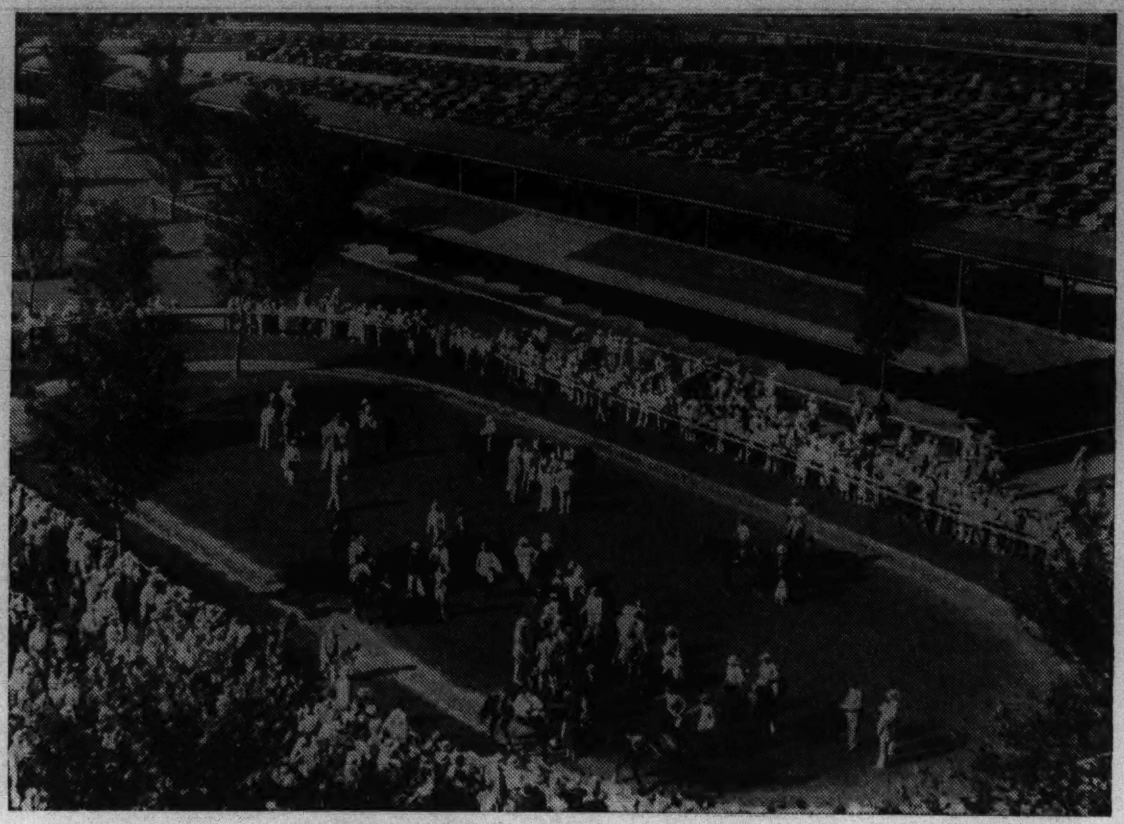
RACING SEASON REACHES PEAK AS ARLINGTON OPENS TOMORROW



Chicago's racing scene tomorrow shifts to Arlington Park, where a 30 day meeting will be held at which more than $300,000 in purses will be offered. Heading the stake program is the $30,000 added Classic stakes. This scene, taken last year, shows a bird's-eye view of the outdoor paddock.

Arlington Park has been repainted and beautified for its 1939 meeting. Here workmen cut grass in the spacious infield.

Bert Friend's Co-Sport is expected to figure prominently in the $3,500 Inaugural, seven furlong sprint, which heads tomorrow's card. The son of Cohort-Sportress is known as an upset horse.

Easy Mon will carry the silks of Warren Wright's Calumet Farm stable in tomorrow's Inaugural handicap. This son of Pharamond II. has been performing consistently.

Arlington Park's Rich Race Meeting to Open Tomorrow

The Arlington Park race track will open tomorrow with a speedy band of sprinters competing in the $3,500 Inaugural handicap. In the course of the thirty day meeting, many of the best horses in training will take part in the eight stake events. Johnstown, Challedon, and other famous campaigners being on the list of nominees. Their owners have indicated intentions of fulfilling the engagements.

Heading the list of stakes is the $30,000 Classic, most important midsummer event for 3 year olds. It will be run on July 22. In addition to Johnstown and Challedon the nominations include Heather Broom, Porter's Mite, Technician, T. M. Dorsett, Benefactor, Viscounty, Impound, Hash, Third Degree, and Ciencia.

Classic Draws Stars.

Since its first running in 1929 the Classic has always attracted horses of championship caliber. Blue Larkspur, Gallant Fox, Mate, Cavalcade, and Omaha have won it in other years. Last year Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Nedayr led the field home, with Warren Wright's Bull Lea in second place, and Townsend B. Martin's Cravat third.

The $20,000 Arlington Futurity, which will be run on July 29, the last day of the meeting, will bring out a representative field of high class 2 year olds. Joseph E. Widener's Roman, which showed so much class during the spring season, is among the nominees. Mrs. Payne Whitney, John Hay Whitney, Herbert M. Woolf, Warren Wright, W. E. Boeing, Willis Sharpe Kilmer, Mrs. John Hertz, and many other owners are represented in the list of eligibles.

First Run in 1932.

This race was first run in 1932, when it was won by Ladysman. Last year's winner was Thingumabob, the colt whose brief but brilliant career was ended by a fatal accident.

The other stakes consist of the $5,000 Matron handicap, the $10,000 Stars and Stripes handicap, the $2,500 Hyde Park stakes, the $10,000 Lassie stakes, and the $5,000 Arlington handicap.

Among the likely starters in tomorrow's Inaugural handicap are Friedberg and Axton's Manie O'Hara, Calumet Farm's Crossbow II., and W. F. Morgan's The Fighter, all at 116 pounds. In the allotment of weights Racing Secretary Robert S. Shelley gave the Millsdale stable's Isaroma the heaviest burden — 122 pounds—but this horse will not be among the starters.

Other good sprinters among the eligibles are Higher Cloud, Beau James, Diavolo Boy, Finance, Grey Gold, Talked About, Taxes, Smart Crack, Lightspur, and Joe Schenck.

Stakes Draw Large Fields.

All of the Arlington stakes drew large fields of nominees. Of the 247 named for the Lassie last September, seventy-five are still eligible. Seventy-seven are still in the field for the Classic and 121 of the original 337 remain in the Futurity.

Among the previous winners of the Inaugural were Silverdale in 1930 and 1931; Gold Step in 1932, Indian Runner in 1933 and 1934, Some Pomp in 1935, Whereaway in 1936, Fraidy Cat in 1937, and Mower in 1938.

The North Western railroad will operate special race trains directly to the track, leaving the station at Canal and Madison from 12:45 to 1:25 p. m. Extra service will be provided for the holiday crowd on the Fourth of July.

The condition book provides for a graduated scale of purses with a daily distribution of not less than $8,000. Every day there will be at least one $1,500 event or two at $1,200.

Arlington Plant Repainted.

The Arlington plant has been entirely repainted this spring and the landscaping has been freshened up. A special top dressing has been applied to the sandy loam track to improve the cushion. Track Superintendent Harold Lamb expressed the opinion that the running strip is faster now than it has been at any time in the last ten years. With some of the speediest horses in the country scheduled to go to the post, there is the prospect of a new record at some time during the meeting.

Mucho Gusto Wins Closing Lincoln Stake

continued gamely under strong hand riding while tiring in the last furlong.

Her Reigh Quits.

Manie O'Hara, which had won three previous stakes during the meeting, got off to a slow start and ran in last place for three-quarters of a mile. When roused in the stretch, she failed to respond and finished fifth behind Some Count. Her Reigh, another stake winner, galloped indifferently for half a mile and then quit, finishing last.

C. Bruce Head, general manager of Lincoln Fields, presented Ernest Hanke with a gold watch as a reward for leading all jockeys at the meeting, with a total of 34 winners. Hanke's nearest rival was Warren Yarberry, who brought in 28.

Buddie Treacy Wins.

The Woolford Farm stable, which sent out Beau Insco to win the first race on opening day at Lincoln Fields, yesterday put over Buddie Treacy in the first event of getaway day. During the intervening weeks Trainer Ben Jones saddled Sherron Ann, Chance Star, Finella, Unerring, and Ogallah for winning efforts in addition to enough seconds and thirds to make the best showing of any stable at the meeting.

Jockey Mike Caffarella took Buddie Treacy around Silver Braid and Chief Menteur on the turn, went after the pace setter, Royal Broom, in the stretch, and caught him a few strides from the finish to win by a head. Silver Braid took third place.

Buddie Treacy was the favorite paying $7.20, $4, and $3.

Ding Bin Wins Again.

Ding Bin, an 8 year old gelding which won at 17 to 1 odds in a previous start at Lincoln Fields, stretched his venerable legs for another successful effort in yesterday's second race.

Dr. Smith, a 3 year old gelding with nothing but a half mile workout in :48 2-5 to recommend him to the betters, went over at 10 to 1 odds in the 6 furlongs third race. He had started only four times in his career and had never been within 9 lengths of the winner in any of those efforts. Yesterday, however, he led all the way and won by 2 lengths, Boston Sound being second, and Moss Gal third.

Ottoman Surprises Betters.

Ottoman, a 6 year old mare, which had scored two first and two seconds in five previous starts during the meeting, got to the post at better than 7 to 1 odds in the fourth race while the public was buying enough tickets on Don Moss to make him the even money favorite. Ottoman, which had been running against $1,000 horses, was carrying 113 pounds and Don Moss, which had been trying to win in the $4,500 class, was in at 110.

Ottoman came from fourth place in the stretch to wear down the pace-setter, Cautivo, and win by nearly a length. Meanwhile Don Moss was out of it all the way. After getting into close quarters in the first sixteenth and dropping back, he tried again in the stretch but could get no better than fourth.

Despite the tradition that sleepers upset favorites on getaway day, the betters called the Goodnow purse one-two-three. Little Tramp, the two to one favorite, came home first in this mile and a sixteenth event. Labor Day, the three to one second choice, was second, and Sign Up, the six to one third choice, was third. Little Tramp led from start to finish and won by a length, paying $6, $4, and $3.20.

A GAY GALENTO LOOKS BETTER TO HIS PUBLIC

But Consider Records, and Louis Should Win.

Feldman and two with Mickey McAvoy. To most of these fans, who came with the definite purpose of encouraging Galento, the routine punching was an obligato to the humorous chatter of the challenger.

Tony's Work Improves.

The man is as changeable as the Jersey weather. Surly and petulant yesterday, he was in high good humor this afternoon. And his work definitly was improved.

During his first preliminary round of shadow boxing and later when he concluded his drill with four more rounds of exercise, bag punching, and rope skipping, Tony entertained the throng as no other fighter has in recent years, not excepting the voluble Max Baer.

The persiflage included a promise to one heckler that "I'll take care of Louis."

But the entire performance, for which Columnist Joe Williams remarked admission should be $27.50 and the fight only 55 cents, convinced us that Galento is not afraid of Louis.

There's That Left Hook.

Perhaps Tony hasn't the imagination to fear the champion. Yet it must be admitted that if Galento walks into Louis, unafraid, and flailing a left hook, disastrous if it lands, the Bomber may have more trouble than he imagines.

Louis and Galento talked to each other this afternoon in a radio broadcast from New York and the two camps.

Galento politely wished Louis luck and the champion tritely countered with "May the best man win." But Tony was boiling because a poll of newspaper men over the air gave the Bomber a 7 to 3 victory. Incidentally two of Tony's votes were cast by Trainer Frain and Manager Jacobs.

"You Bums Is Wrong."

"Dis time all you bums is wrong," Tony shouted.

For a more detailed study of the possibilities Wednesday night consider first the bouts both have had in the last two years. Louis' record, including the championship fight with Braddock, follows:

| Date. | Opponent. | Result. |
|---|---|---|
| June 22, 1937 | Jimmy Braddock | K. O. 8 |
| Aug. 30, 1937 | Tommy Farr | Won 15 |
| Feb. 23, 1938 | Nathan Mann | K.O. 3 |
| April 1, 1938 | Harry Thomas | K.O. 5 |
| June 22, 1938 | Max Schmeling | K.O. 1 |
| Jan. 25, 1939 | John Henry Lewis | K.O. 1 |
| April 17, 1939 | Jack Roper | K.O. 1 |

Galento's record since he lost a six round decision to Arturo Godoy in a preliminary match to the Louis-Braddock championship fight, follows:

| Date. | Opponent. | Result. |
|---|---|---|
| Jan. 5, 1938 | Charley Massera | K.O. 3 |
| May 14, 1938 | Nathan Mann | K.O. 2 |
| Nov. 14, 1938 | Harry Thomas | K.O. 3 |
| Dec. 16, 1938 | Dick Daniels | K.O. 3 |
| Dec. 18, 1938 | Otis Thomas | K.O. 9 |
| Jan. 19, 1939 | Jorge Brescia | K.O. 1 |
| Feb. 3, 1939 | Natie Brown | K.O. 4 |
| Feb. 23, 1939 | Abie Feldman | K.O. 3 |

Galento and Louis have each fought the same nine men. It is admittedly a record against second rate fighters. Natie Brown appears twice on Louis' list and three times against Galento. The comparison follows:

| Opponent. | Louis. | Galento. |
|---|---|---|
| Charley Massera | K.O. 3 ['34] | K.O. 3 ['38] |
| Red Barry | K.O. 3 ['35] | K.O. 1 ['33] |
| Roy Lazer | K.O. 3 ['35] | K.O. 6 ['36] |
| Patsy Perroni | Won 10 ['35] | Lost 10 ['34] |
| Natie Brown | Won 10 ['35] | Lost 10 ['32] |
| Natie Brown | K.O. 4 ['37] | K.O. 1 ['32] |
| Natie Brown |  | K.O. 4 ['39] |
| Al Ettore | K.O. 5 ['36] | K.O. 8 ['37] |
| Jorge Grescia | K.O. 3 ['36] | K.O. 1 ['39] |
| Nathan Mann | K.O. 3 ['38] | K.O. 2 ['38] |
| Harry Thomas | K.O. 5 ['38] | K.O. 3 ['38] |

Then There's Farr Bout.

Unless one concedes that the men Galento fought were easily discouraged—perhaps by arrangement—Tony's record, with the exception of Louis' victory in the second bout with Max Schmeling, compares favorably with that of the champion. Then, too, there is Louis' fight with Tommy Farr. Joe won in 15 rounds, a result still unexplained and disconcerting to those who think of Louis as a one punch killer.

Jack Johnson, one time heavyweight champion, who watched today's drill, gives Tony a fine chance to surprise Louis. Johnson, however, still picks Louis to win.

Gene Tunney also has warned the public that Galento may land a paralizing wallop. He also picks Louis principally because of Joe's ability to punch with either hand.

The result of the ballyhoo has stimulated sales. Mike Jacobs reported that yesterday $35,000 worth of tickets were sold at the Hippodrome office alone.

Chance for an Upset.

Galento does have a fine chance to provide pugilism with a greater upset than when Braddock defeated Baer for the championship. Tony can punch. He probably can take considerable punishment, and he is not afraid.

Louis has all the physical advantages, but Louis can be whipped if he comes to this test good natured, easy going, and without the determination he showed against Schmeling. The champion becomes confused easily. Schmeling's one hand attack three years ago is proof of that.

Conceivably the fight may go four or five rounds. Galento is a better opponent than weak hearted Baer or Levinsky. But unless one discredits all Louis has accomplished, he must be picked as the winner Wednesday.

Louis will receive 40 per cent of the gate and Galento 20 per cent, so if the worst happens to the challenger, he still will have something tangible for his defeat.

Lawn Bowlers to Seek President's Trophy Today

The President's trophy will be up for competition today in lawn bowling singles held by the Chicago Lawn Bowling club on its rinks in Washington park, 53d street and Cottage Grove avenue. Fifty players will compete under the miss-and-out rules. West Side and Lakeside clubs will hold practice games today.

Now There Are Three Bausones Looking for a Fight

When approximately 100 boxers now in training for the Catholic Youth Organization's international bouts with Ireland in Soldiers' field the night of July 19 go to the C. Y. O. outdoor camp for final preparations three brothers will be in the contingent. They are (left to right): Sam Bausone, flyweight; Tony, flyweight, and Frank, bantamweight.

Three Bausone Brothers Fight in C. Y. O. Ranks

There's an air of excitement in the modest Bausone household, 4345 Monroe street. There's a sparkle in the brown eyes of little Sam Bausone, 15 years old. Papa Rosario Bausone and sister Mary, 21, have a new respect for Sam. For Sam is preparing to join his brother, Frank, 18, and Tony, 17, in the Catholic Youth organization boxing wars.

What of Mama Bausone? She isn't much of a boxing fan. She has seen neither of her two boxing sons, Frank and Tony, in the ring. But Bausone Sr. and Mary have cheered on the youngsters as they climbed the amateur heights. Frank is bantamweight champion of the open division and Tony is the novice flyweight champion. Besides the three fighting Bausones and Mary there are four others—Joe, 22 [who wrestles]; Rosario Jr., 2; Joan, 5, and Rosalie, 3.

Training Camp Opens July 7.

The three Bausones will be among the 100 lads who will report on July 7 to the C. Y. O. outdoor camp at the Lewis Holy Name School of Aeronautics, Lockport, Ill. There the young boxers will make their bid for a place on the ten-man squad which meets Ireland's best on July 19 in Soldiers' Field.

The 15 year old Sam, like others just starting out, will not make the team. But he is looking ahead. Brothers Frank and Tony think it would be nice if the three won C. Y. O. titles next winter. They believe they can repeat and are hopeful that Sam will have developed enough skill to win the flyweight novice championship.

"Neither of the two older Bausones was very promising at first," said Coach Paddy Kane, who will be in charge of the Lockport training camp. "But they applied themselves to the task of learning how to box and kept improving. By their encouragement they should make it easier for Sam to develop rapidly."

Frank Defeats Cavalieri.

Frank was called upon to meet Walter Cavalieri in the C. Y. O. finals last winter, the same youngster who had beaten John Healey of Ireland in the 1938 bouts. The elder of the Bausone brothers won the decision over Cavalieri. Cavalieri may try to do something about that next month in training camp, so it appears the two will collide again, since only one bantamweight will be selected. Tony will be a contestant in the flyweight division. Sam's going along just to get his start and become used to the boxing atmosphere.

Coach Kane said the Lockport camp will compare favorably with the best training headquarters used by the professionals. In former years the rings and boxing equipment were pitched in the airplane hangars, but a new plan calls for placing a tent on the tennis courts, adjacent to the dormitory where the boys will live. The tent will house two rings. It will be 40 by 60 feet and 25 feet high.

Unknowns Come Through.

Each year an unknown comes through to make the C. Y. O. team and Kane credits this development to the ideal conditions under which the boys train at Lockport. They have a busy schedule from 6 a. m. until taps are sounded at 9:30 p. m. The day starts off with services at 6:30 a. m. Then the boxers take to the road for an hour. Breakfast is served at 8 a. m., after which the boys are excused until the 11:30 a. m. services. After eating a light lunch at noon another rest is prescribed and the boxing drills begin at 2:30 o'clock and last two hours. After services at 5:30 p. m. the youngsters have dinner. Movies are shown at 7 p. m. every night in the dormitory.

Fullerton Tennis Team Wins from La Grange, 6-3

The Fullerton B team defeated La Grange six matches to three at the Fullerton Tennis club yesterday in the Chicago Tennis association interclub match play. The No. 1 singles went to Frank Grossman of Fullerton, who defeated Ted Bartlett, 6-2, 6-2.

ARON AND BERG HEAD MARIGOLD CARD TOMORROW

Milt Aron, Illinois' leading welterweight contender, is all set for a ten round bout against Jackie [Kid] Berg, former junior welterweight champion, in Marigold outdoor arena tomorrow.

Aron ended training yesterday by going six rounds on the big and little bags. Milt did his last boxing Friday when he went five rounds with two sparmates. He weighed 149½ pounds at the conclusion of the grind, two pounds less than he carried when he defeated Bobby Britton June 5.

Weight for tomorrow's match is 150.

Approval Is Withheld.

Aron originally was scheduled to meet Berg on June 5, but the fact that the veteran English slugger had suffered defeats at the hands of Babe Breese and Pedro Montanez caused the Illinois boxing commission to withhold its approval. Consequently, Britton was substituted.

Subsequently, Berg upset Tippy Larkin, eastern star, a conquest which cleared the way for the Berg-Aron encounter.

Globe to Meet Ray.

Supporting matches will bring together Al Globe, El Paso, Tex., light heavyweight, and Bob Ray, Decatur heavyweight; Bob Fertig, Columbus, O., middleweight, and Rex Thomas, and Frankie Agnes, west side junior welterweight, and Eu Eulien.

Four contests will support a ten round event concerning Eddie Simms, Cleveland trial horse, and Henry Wacker of Taylorville in White City Wednesday. Frankie Genovese, Winnipeg, Man., 152 pound boxer, clashes with Tony Sopko in a six rounder. Matches of four rounds involve Orlando Trotter and Tiger Wright, Art Brewer and Pete Ferrand, Danny La Marr and Johnny Janis. . . . Al Wardlow, former Chicago Golden Gloves champion, encounters Marty Simmons, Saginaw, Mich., light heavyweight, in Youngstown, O., tomorrow. . . . An amateur boxing show will be presented on Summit-Argo field, 57th street and 73d avenue, tomorrow. Paul Hodelka, bantamweight of Summit, will meet George O'Brien of Chicago in a five round feature bout. Mitchell Christy, Summit lightweight, opposes Thorson Albeck in a five round secondary attraction. F. M.

LEWIS CAPTURES SINGLES TITLE IN CANADIAN MEET

WINDSOR, Ont., June 24.—(AP)—Paced by Morey Lewis of Texarkana, Tex., American players swept the major titles in the Canadian tennis tournament today.

Lewis, who withdrew from the national clay court meet to attend his college graduation at Kenyon college, Gambier, O., didn't reach here until last Monday, when the tourney already was in the third round. Other players threatened a strike when he and Frank Froehling of Chicago were permitted to play.

Today the Texan won the men's singles title with a 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 victory over Bob Madden of Detroit and then paired with Froehling to defeat Phil Pearson and Bill Pedlar of Toronto, 6-4, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, in the men's doubles title.

Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit won the women's singles crown by dethroning the 1938 winner, Mrs. Rene Bolte of Montreal, 7-5, 7-5. Another title went to the United States when William Beyer and Charles Wagner of Detroit defeated O. R. Smith of Detroit and Bruce Unger of Windsor, 6-0, 6-1, in the veterans' doubles final.

Peggy Welsh, 16, Wins Middle States Net Title

Philadelphia, Pa., June 24.—[U. P.]—Peggy Welsh, 16, of Westtown school, won the Middle States girls' lawn tennis singles championship here today by defeating Judy Atterbury of Sea Bright, N. J., 6-2, 8-6.

KRIEGER STILL TOO HEAVY FOR HOSTAK FIGHT

Seattle, Wash., June 24.—(AP)—Solly Krieger is having a hard time getting down to 160 pounds for his fifteen round outdoor middleweight title defense next Tuesday night against Al Hostak of Seattle. Solly reported eight pounds overweight and, after two weeks' training he's still about four pounds over the mark.

Hostak fast is reaching peak condition. Al weighs about 162 now, and will climb through the ropes next Tuesday night at 158½.

Football Giants Count on Veterans in All-Star Game

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 24.—High above Broadway in a seventeenth floor apartment overlooking Columbia university, Coach Steve Owen, the personable Kansan, sits near a jug of lemonade these hot days and weighs the chances of the New York Giants against the College All-Stars in Chicago on the night of Aug. 30. And he finds the outlook not at all terrifying.

The spacious suite is the Owen office as well as residence. Owen has a desk in the Giants office downtown, but other than to call for mail occasionally, he does not frequent the 42d street headquarters in the off season. That is where President John V. Mara signs players and Owen shies clear of negotiations between club and employés.

Doesn't Want to Know Salaries.

"I don't want to know what a fellow is getting," he says. "That is a matter between the business office and the player. I am just the coach and am interested only in seeing that the boys tackle, block, and get an occasional touchdown, if possible. A touchdown by a hundred dollar a game half back looks just as big to me as one by a $15,000 a year man.

"After a man makes our squad," Owen continued, pouring himself another beaker of lemonade, "he is a regular. We have no second team and no substitutes. We consider every man in uniform a first stringer. We'll take about forty-five men to Superior, Wis., for training and will have at least forty in Chicago for the All-Star game. We always have used more men than other professional clubs and I don't expect the All-Star game to be an exception."

Owen's hopes for victory will rest, however, with the twenty-eight members of last year's championship team who have signed contracts. Only two of the thirty men who whipped Washington in the last regularly scheduled game and then repeated an earlier victory over Green Bay in the championship game will be missing. They are Jack Haden, a tackle, and Hugh Wolfe, a full back, who was a member of the All-Star squad last year. Both were sent away in trades for draft rights to college players.

The 28 returning veterans, led by Capt. Mel Hein, perennially the all-league center, and Ed Danowski, the league's forward passing champion last year, will be supported by four men brought up from the Giants' American association farm in Jersey City and a dozen newcomers, most of whom were selected in the draft.

The farm hands recalled are Jiggs Kline, end; Jim Moffitt, tackle; Harry Mattos, back, and Enio Conti, guard. Mattos formerly played with Green Bay.

Not Underestimating Assignment.

Although undefeated in All-Star competition in New York against three groups of eastern collegians and on the west coast where they played the pick of the National league, the Giants apparently are not underestimating their assignment on the night of Aug. 30.

Owen plans ten days of double drills starting Aug. 12 with single sessions, including a number under lights, thereafter until the night of the game. This will give the Giants 27 practice sessions.

GOLFER WAGERS $300 HE'LL MAKE 2 HOLES-IN-ONE

Ex-Pro Will Shoot as Long as He Is Able.

Cyril Wagner, 32 year old former golf professional, tonight will attempt to score two holes in one on the 146 yard 17th hole of the Elmgate Golf club in Glen View. Wagner, now the owner of a driving range near Ilgair Park, will use the floodlights of his range to illuminate the short hole. He will tee off at 8 o'clock.

Wagner's decision to make the attempt grew out of a discussion with a friend, K. K. Kenderdine, following the failure of Harry Gonder, Michigan City, Ind., professional, to score an ace after 1,800 attempts last week. Wagner is wagering $300 against a new automobile that he will score.

Wagner, professional at the Tam o' Shanter Country club for ten years until last Nov. 1, does not lack experience in marathons. Last year he followed J. Smith Ferebee by playing on eight Chicago district courses in one day.

"It may take a few nights and a few days, but I'll make them," Wagner said.

Wagner, unmarried, lives in Niles Center. He also served as professional at a Florida course for five winters.

Armstrong to Receive Lord Lonsdale Trophy

New York, June 24.—(AP)—Henry Armstrong, world welter and lightweight champion, will receive the Lord Lonsdale trophy presented by the British board of boxing control to any champion who risks his title in England.

A Message from a Senator of Cuba

SENADOR
Enrique Recio
LEADER OF THE LIBERAL PARTY
REPUBLIC OF CUBA says:

"You ask me if your new WHITE OWL cigars taste like the Havanas that I smoke regularly? The answer is yes and no. The Havana tobaccos which you have blended into your cigar give it a real Havana taste—yes. But my Cuban cigars are much heavier, a stronger smoke. But then it may be that Americans do not want a heavy cigar—in which case your WHITE OWL gives them the real Havana taste in milder form."

A brand new Blended-with-Havana cigar —approved by Havana itself

DOWN IN HAVANA they really know the taste of Havana tobacco—you can bet on that. So we took the new Blended-with-Havana White Owl down there to test it. We selected prominent Cubans—real connoisseurs of cigars . . . gave them some of the new White Owls to smoke. Without exception, they all praised the rich Havana flavor of this new cigar.

We feel awfully proud of this new cigar. We're proud of the Havana tobacco we use in it . . . it's a really good grade. Does that sound unbelievable for a 5¢ cigar? Well, we are America's largest buyers of Havana tobacco and we know what we are talking about. Fact is, it's the same type of Havana tobacco that is used in popular cigars costing 10¢ and more. And there's a generous helping of this tobacco in each White Owl, too.

We could go on and on telling you about the new White Owl, but the only way for you to find out how good it really tastes is to smoke one. If you enjoy a good cigar, try one of the new White Owls today. Your taste will tell you why it wins the honors—even in Havana.

New INVINCIBLE

Your choice of 2 shapes

Another "10¢" feature—now yours for 5¢ . . . a choice of shapes to suit your smoking taste. A long, trim, new Invincible. And a rich, full-bodied, new Club House shape. You get the same amount of tobacco—the same mild blend in either size—only the shape varies.

New London, Conn., June 24.—[U. P.]—Harvard's varsity crew, victorious over Yale for a fourth successive year, took a light workout today in preparation for its appearance next month in the Royal Henley regatta on the Thames river in London.

The Crimson crew, beaten only by Cornell this season, won over Yale last night and rounded out its second successive sweep in the seventy-seventh rowing regatta between those schools.

Forty men will seek the title "Mr. America of 1939." The contest will be held in three height classes. Winners will be decided in class A, up to 5 feet 6 inches; class B, up to 5 feet 9 inches; class C, over 5 feet 9 inches. Mr. America will be chosen from the finalists in each of these groups.

THERE'S A KICK IN TAKING BASS WITH FLY ROD

BY BOB BECKER.

Thousands of fresh water fishermen again are demonstrating that for real fun and an extra number of angling thrills there is nothing like a fly rod for black bass fishing. All through Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, and on innumerable Canadian lakes the boys are trying to get the maximum amount of sport out of fooling either large or small mouthed black bass. They pick up an 8½ or 9 foot fly rod, put either a single action or automatic reel on it, tie on a six foot leader [testing around 5 to 7 pounds] with some kind of a feathered or hair lure and then proceed to fool the fish in no uncertain manner.

Although one might not be able to use a fly rod outfit successfully in getting bass from every lake, and there are times when windy weather may make it almost impossible to control your fly rod lure with any degree of efficiency or accuracy, the wise fisherman who wants both fish and a lot of fun, learns how to use a fly rod and always has it handy on any trip.

Uses Bait and Fly Rods.

On most of our bass trips we have both a bait casting rod and a fly rod fully rigged, and often we switch from one to another depending on the kind of shore line cover, where the bass are feeding, whether they are striking deep or on the surface, and other factors affecting the fishing. We have seen evenings in lakes when a bait caster could average no more than three bass while a fly caster could hook fifteen or eighteen. We recall many a hot summer evening on a northern lake when the small mouthed bass were rising to flies in this manner. Any kind of a dry fly or a floating bug brought a savage strike. This happy situation [for the fly caster] might be completely reversed in the bait caster's favor the next night.

A serviceable fly rod outfit doesn't cost any more than a good bait casting rod and reel and line. One of our favorite bass fly rod units consists of a nine foot rod, weighing around six ounces, a single action reel and a medium priced air flow line. This is a balanced unit with the line and reel picked to match the weight and action of the bamboo rod. The whole outfit is strictly in the medium priced class. But we expect years of service from this outfit.

Casting Easier with Short Leader.

We use both 4½ foot and six foot leaders, the shorter ones for days when there's wind, or it's easier to cast a fly with a shorter leader. For lures we use a variety of patterns that float dry, including imitation bugs, hair and feather flies, bucktail floaters, and similar types, all Wisconsin made. Streamers and wet hair flies also are in the fly box. If the bass are rising we much prefer surface lures. It's more fun to see just one old lunker smash at a lure on top of the water, than to hook five below the surface.

MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

Inviting the Undertaker

Pass a slow poke on the right. You may both get the surprise of your lives.

WACKER DRIVE FITS IN PLAN FOR SUPERHIGHWAY

Studies for a west side superhighway are emphasizing the present and future importance of Wacker drive as a trafic arterial. Its width and its two levels are the only present facilities that can carry a large volume of east and west motor travel through the central business district.

This exclusive feature recommends the employment of Wacker drive as the eastern terminal of a west side superhighway. This is recognized as an influential factor in determining the location for an arterial west from the loop.

The lower level, now cluttered with parkers, can be developed into a mass trafic facility with few conflicts with cross-trafic. This lower level now extends from the east end of the Randolph street bridge to the south end of the two level Michigan avenue bridge.

Costs Would Be Excessive.

The broad upper level continues south from Randolph street to Madison street. Studies of proposals to continue Wacker on south have found that the costs would be excessive. On the eastern end, however, federal engineers have approved plans for the extension of Wacker from Michigan avenue on the south bank of the river to the outer drive.

This geography favors a location of a west side superhighway no farther south than Madison street, the axis of the city's numbering system. The Chicago and North Western railroad embankment west from the central business district is considered as the most northerly likely location.

The railroad site is adaptable to an economic design consisting of slabs of an earth fill that would widen the existing embankment. The site has a further point in its favor, since there could be no objection to the noise and fumes of automobile travel from property now abutting railroad trafic. However, its eastern terminal would involve engineering problems that, while not insurmountable, would be difficult.

Trestle Type Superhighway.

Less difficult would be the eastern terminal for a trestle type superhighway in Madison, Washington, or Randolph street. Ramps extending to both levels of Wacker drive could feed and distribute the trafic. The present elevated railway stub is to be removed, and this would make additional room for these ramps.

Madison street has a peculiar advantage in that farther west it is wide enough so that, with parking regulated, it could accommodate a large volume of trafic at grade after the first section of an upper level superhighway might be completed from Wacker drive west.

Washington street has an existing subway under the river that might be adapted for vehicular trafic, giving this street a peculiar advantage in bidding for the improvement. Randolph's special characteristic is its width in the market district between Union park and Des Plaines street.

Third Type Considered.

A third type of design being considered for the west side superhighway would consist of a broad parkway. The express pavements would be at normal grade for much of the distance. Minor north and south streets would be stub ended. Grade separations would be built at the main intersections.

This type is costly and requires a broad right of way. Congress street, now narrow, with jogs, and lacking in continuity, has been suggested as a site for this design. As it has been advocated no provision is made for trafic to continue east through the downtown area.

The main objection that has been cited to the Congress street plan, however, is that the acquisition of right of way doubtless would require years. The widening of Michigan avenue from Randolph street to Oak street, not involving nearly as many parcels of realty, took from 1904 to 1920.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

TROUBLES IN CANADA.

Chicago, June 20.—With no warning about what frightful roads to expect in Quebec province in Canada, I recently drove up there, frequenting only the main highways. These highways, however, are roads so bad that I think in fairness to your members and the public you ought to warn them. My car will never again be as good as it was before I drove over what they call roads in Canada. So far I have spent $15 in repairs since I got back last week and in addition have to buy new tires.

In the first place, nobody up there will tell you what the roads are like. Even the official information bureau of the government would only say, when we asked how the road was from Quebec to Montreal, that it was a broad paved highway. Now that is a direct lie. It is not decently paved more than twenty miles of the way and not paved at all for long stretches. The unpaved parts are gravel, full of holes and the washboard type that makes you hang onto the wheel for dear life. They are almost preferable to the so-called paved parts, however, since those are composed of craters all over the road so that it is impossible to avoid them. There are upheavals of asphalt sometimes as high as a foot and a half.

The road from Maine to Quebec city is even worse, in fact, infinitly worse, if such a thing were possible.

Not a hand is being raised to improve things. On the road from Maine to Quebec city there was not a man working. On the other road we saw a total of nine men, in groups of two or even one. They were digging holes in the shoulders, but they call that construction up there. Nobody was at work fixing the road. Don't let any natives tell you differently. Those roads won't be legitimately open for trafic for years. They wouldn't be open for trafic now in this country, not even as byways, much less arterial highways.

Incidentally gas is 28 and 29 cents a gallon—their imperial gallon is one-fifth more than ours, but that's still expensive—and outside of the cities the service stations I stopped at were not prepared to check the water or tires or give any of the necessary services.

Please make a point of warning people not to travel in Quebec province if they value their tempers or their cars.

CHICAGOAN.

LAKE SHORE DRIVE ACCIDENTS.

Chicago, June 19.—Each morning and evening there are from one to half a dozen more or less serious accidents on Lake Shore drive between Ohio street and the north bend, caused invariably both by excess speed and nonattention.

It seems to me, however, that since we cannot expect the majority of drivers to change their habits materially, it would at least serve to reduce the number of rear end collisions as well as the attendant jamming and confusion if one of the stop light intersections could be eliminated. After all we must remember that cars coming from the north encounter no stop signals from Foster avenue to the Drake and are accustomed to hit-er-up.

Careful study on my part indicates the solution as follows:

In the morning eliminate the lights at Erie street. Any one wishing to turn west on Erie can turn to the inside drive at Chicago avenue.

At night eliminate the lights at Chicago avenue. Any one wishing to go north at Chicago avenue can take the inside drive two blocks north.

I recommend a serious study of this problem by the proper authorities without delay, for it won't be long before a death actually occurs due to an accident in this section. THE FURNITURE MART.

ASKS LICENSE REFORM.

Chicago, June 3.—Your illustration daily of the Auto Massacre is the very best object lesson. I write you on this subject, for I believe that one principal cause of accidents from bad driving and poorly equipped cars is the fact that the licensing of cars and of drivers is done by municipalities under political appointees.

These would naturally be more interested in obtaining a volume of license fees, and, therefore, the inspection of cars and drivers would be less vigorous than the danger to the public in the immense list of casualties warrants.

The number of mental deficits among those causing accidents is startling. Aside from such mental deficits there are those wholly incompetent as drivers, and there are many cars which should not be allowed on the highways.

I would believe that the licensing of cars and drivers is a state matter rather than that of municipalities, for the cars are not limited to operation in them. The state police who guard the highways, who in some states seem to be furthest removed from political influences, possibly would be the proper body to issue licenses.

At any rate, some reform is badly needed in this particular.

MOVE TO RESCUE SUPERHIGHWAY BILLS TOMORROW

BY HAL FOUST.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—In addition to Chicago's superhighway bills much proposed legislation of special concern to motorists remains on the calendars of the house and the senate as only five more working days remain in the life of this 61st general assembly. A move to rescue the superhighway legislation from a grave in a committee will be made on the floor of the house Monday night.

A bill to make wholesale changes in the Illinois trafic laws, passed by the senate, is on second reading in the house with a committee recommendation for approval. Representative Arnold L. Lund [R., Chicago] said he will introduce an amendment on Monday night to remove a provision that would extend the maximum legal length of tractor and semitrailer combinations from 35 to 40 feet.

Would Remove 35 M. P. H. Limit.

Other provisions of this trafic bill would require pedestrians to obey stop-and-go lights, the same as vehicles; would remove the 35 mile an hour suburban speed limit; would direct the highway department to post No Passing Zones where to pass an overtaken vehicle is dangerous; would increase the speed limits of heavy trucks, and would establish safety regulations for bicycles.

Another bill pertinent to motoring is a measure sponsored by the National Safety council to qualify drunk-o-meter tests as court evidence. These tests, simple chemical analyses of urine or breath, would be used by police to determine the guilt or innocence of a drunken driving suspect. The method is indorsed by the American Medical association. The bill has passed the house and is awaiting senate action.

Trucking Bill Killed.

A bill to revolutionize regulation of intrastate trucking in Illinois, drafted by a joint legislative commission which studied the subject for two years, was killed in the house this week. The commission, headed by Senator Louis E. Menges [D., East St. Louis], exposed the present regulations of for-hire freighters as unenforced and unenforcible. A duplicate bill was introduced in the senate this week and advanced to the passage stage.

A similar procedure duplication in the senate after death in the house was followed in a proposal to increase the Illinois highway police force from 350 to 500 men. To accompany the proposed increase the state administration announced early in this six months session that a companion bill would be introduced to provide for a civil service, taking the uniforms and stars from patrolmen who now keep their jobs solely due to political sponsorship. The companion bill was never introduced.

A bill to bar heavy trucks from state highways on week-ends has passed the senate. The house is to vote on amendments on Monday night. Exemptions have been made for perishable products.

A bill to appropriate $250,000 to advertise the attractions of Illinois has passed the senate and was advanced to the passage stage in the house this week.

NEWS AND VIEWS

M. J. Lanahan, newly elected chairman of the show committee of the Chicago Automobile Trade association, announced yesterday that the official dates for Chicago's fortieth annual auto show will be Nov. 4 to Nov. 12, inclusive. The show, which will be held in the International amphitheater, Halsted and 43d streets, will run nine days instead of eight as in other years. Two Sundays will be included. Serving with Lanahan on the committee are: Lynn S. Snow, president of the association; V. C. P. Dreslke, H. T. Hollingshead, and K. K. Kenderdine.

A group of about 150 Hudson dealers and their friends will sail on a two day trip to Detroit tomorrow morning on the Georgian Bay Line steamer, Alabama, as guests of Butler Motors, Inc., Hudson distributor for the Chicago district. The party will stop off for two hours at Mackinac Island. The members will go to the Hudson factory in Detroit, Wednesday morning, and in the afternoon will drive back to Chicago by automobile.

R. A. Johnson of Johnson Motors, Inc., has been elected president of Pontiac Dealers, Inc., composed of Chicago area Pontiac dealers. Joe Bartell of the Bartell-José company was elected secretary and V. A. Beckman, treasurer.

Gordon Saunders of the Chrysler corporation says the automobile designer's dream of a car molded or pressed out in one piece may some day be realized. Saunders declares that high strength, toughness, resistance to shock, color finish, and smooth, durable surface are among the advantages which the idealistic all-plastic car of the future will have.

The Graham-Paige Motors corporation reports that Ralph L. Palmer took delivery of a Graham at the factory on Jan. 18, 1938 and on May 24, 1939—491 days later—when he drove through the factory gates his speedometer showed 103,976 miles. This was an average of 211 miles a day. Palmer, who is sales manager for a polish company, drove from San Diego to Detroit, 2,436 miles at a gasoline and oil cost of $21.14. Palmer recommends for high gasoline mileage never driving faster than 60 miles an hour and change of spark plugs every 10,000 miles.

SENATE TO VOTE ON DOUBLING OF PRICE OF SILVER

Democrats Yield to Filibusterers.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—Administration leaders in the senate today surrendered to the silver bloc by agreeing to call up for vote on Monday a resolution which would raise the price of domestic silver to $1.27 an ounce, nearly double the price that the treasury is now paying.

Senator Pittman, leader of silver bloc.

In return for this concession the silver senators agreed to end their filibuster on the administration monetary bill which would extend the life of the two billion dollar stabilization fund and renew the President's power to effect a further devaluation of the dollar to 50 per cent of its old parity.

Pittman Leads Fight.

The proposal for raising the price of silver was contained in an amendment to the monetary bill offered by Senator Key Pittman [D., Nev.], a leader of the silver bloc.

Majority Leader Barkley obtained the agreement for a vote on the amendment after the senate sergeant at arms had rounded up enough members to conduct business during the unusually quiet Saturday session.

The amendment would require the secretary of the treasury to pay $1.27 an ounce for silver to domestic producers only. The treasury is now paying 64.64 cents an ounce, having lowered the price last year. At one time it had paid 77 cents for domestic silver. Silver is now quoted in the world market at approximately 0 cents an ounce.

The fight over the monetary legislation had threatened to hold up other important legislation which the administration hopes to have enacted before the end of this session of congress. Among the must bills is the billion 700 million relief measure.

The authority creating the stabilization fund and the President's devaluation powers lapses unless the monetary bill is passed before June 30.

Barkley assured the members of the silver bloc late yesterday that the price of silver probably would be continued at the present level if the various bills offered by the silver bloc were dropped. This did not satisfy the speech making silver senators.

Denies Bloc Weakening.

Senator Pat McCarran [D., Nev.] told reporters that the agreement to vote on the Pittman amendment should not be interpreted as a sign of weakening by the silver bloc.

"We merely want to clear the atmosphere," he said. "As a matter of fact, we think that our position will be stronger after the Pittman amendment is disposed of."

McCarran reiterated his intention of attempting to block all legislation, including the relief bill, which must be signed by the President before June 30, until the monetary question is settled.

The vote on the silver amendment will be called at 12:30 p. m. Monday.

Goal $1.29 an Ounce.

Should the amendment be adopted it would raise the price to nearly the statutory level of $1.29 an ounce for which the silver bloc has fought for years.

Many administration leaders have been lukewarm to the silver purchase program. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau has definitly indicated his belief that the purchase act has been a failure.

The purpose of the act was to raise the world price of silver to the statutory price or to bring up the government's silver holdings to the point where they constituted 25 per cent of the total metallic currency reserve. Both objectives today are more remote than when the purchases were begun. The world price has fallen steadily in recent years. The influx of gold has further dwarfed the position of silver.

HOME BUILDING PERMIT VALUE FAR ABOVE 1938

New residential building construction during May, as measured by permit valuations, increased 38 per cent over the April level and 92.8 per cent over May, 1938, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced yesterday.

All types of construction increased 3.7 per cent over April, and rose 67.8 per cent over May, 1938. In the first five months of the year the total rose 8 per cent over 1938. All parts of the country shared in the upturn, Miss Perkins said.

Permits issued during May indicated a valuation of $16,306,853 for new residential building, and for the first five months, $458,181,000. The permit valuation of all types of construction in May was $192,916,362, and for the first five months, $834,03,000.

Air Express Gives Big Aid to Industry

Air express, offspring of the 100 year old Railway Express agency, ranks today as one of the chief aids to industries in serving their customers. Overnight delivery service from coast to coast, made possible by this form of service, has brought drastic changes in buying and selling methods.

The nation's 35,000 miles of commercial air lines comprise the domestic route over which steadily increasing shipments ranging from pianos to gardenias travel through the skies. Air service is coördinated with railroads through agents at about 23,000 points from Maine to California, Minnesota to Mississippi.

World-Wide Connections.

Round the world connections are available through Pan-American Airways, Imperial Airways, Air France, Royal Dutch Airlines, and other international carriers.

Air express is approaching its twelfth anniversary. It was formally started Sept. 1, 1927. In its first full year it carried 17,006 shipments weighing about thirty-two tons. Like other businesses, it was hit hard by the depression. Since 1932, when the company stepped up its selling activities, shipments have been on the upgrade, however. Here's the record for the last seven years:

| | Shipments. | Tons. |
|---|---|---|
| 1932 | 25,902 | 72 |
| 1933 | 69,009 | 202 |
| 1934 | 139,386 | 435 |
| 1935 | 200,926 | 770 |
| 1936 | 465,727 | 1,866 |
| 1937 | 658,917 | 2,146 |
| 1938 | 716,889 | 2,347 |

Gains running between 10 and 30 per cent have been shown in shipments during the early months of this year.

All the Earth Is Next Door.

Speed is the chief reason for air express. Through this service, for example, a Chicago department store can arrange to deliver merchandise by air express in Mexico City as quickly as it can through its regular deliveries to some suburbs. Oysters obtained from Chesapeake bay on Tuesday can be shipped air express from Baltimore and served in Honolulu for Thursday luncheon.

In comparison with the time required between the point of origin and destination for first class mail, regular express, parcel post or even air mail, air express outdistances the field.

Suppose you want to ship a five pound package from Chicago to New York. By first class mail it would reach the addressee in not less than twenty hours. Regular express would take about the same amount of time. Parcel post needs from thirty-six to forty-eight hours. By air mail special delivery the best you could expect would be nine hours. Air express, however, would do the job in not more than six and one-half hours.

They Take Everything.

Just as speed is the essence of air express, variety marks the articles hauled over the skyways. A grand piano was carried recently between Chicago and New York to a music industries convention. It weighed 300 pounds. Gardenias were the west coast flowers most in demand in the middle west and east last Easter. During the week preceding that holiday nearly 400 shipments of gardenias weighing a total of 2,555 pounds were sent from San Francisco alone to adorn promenaders throughout the nation.

An engine crank shaft cracked wide open one recent Monday night in a plant at St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands in the Caribbean sea. A new shaft was ordered by telephone from an engine plant at Mattoon, Ill. Completed at midnight on Tuesday, the shipment, weighing 110 pounds, was rushed to Indianapolis where it was placed aboard a plane bound for Miami. There it was transferred to Pan American Airways, flown to Porto Rico, where it stayed overnight, and the next morning—Thursday—flown across the water to St. Thomas.

Fly 200,000 Miles a Day.

Show costumes, serum, false teeth, yeast, baby chicks, motion picture films, newspaper stereotypes and photographs are also shipped frequently through this service.

Air express trafic is handled on the regular planes of the air line companies which operate a fleet of more than 500 planes flying a total of more than 200,000 miles a day. In the original setup in 1927 air express was carried over only four air lines with a total mileage of 4,450.

At the Chicago airport, the hub of the aviation transport industry, air express crews meet every incoming and outgoing plane daily, according to P. H. Cummings, superintendent of organization. These crews, numbering about ten employés in all, are on hand twenty-four hours a day to meet the 118 flights in and out of the city, Cummings said. Besides, twenty-one scheduled trips are made daily between the airport and the loop for pickup and delivery by other crews.

Cummings explained that this direct, on the ground service is one of the chief reasons for the speed with which the air express agency handles shipments. Delays after arrival of a shipment in the city of destination are reduced to a minimum. Similar crews work at each of the commercial airports in the country.

R. R. YOUNG URGES OPEN BIDDING ON TERMINAL LOAN

New York, June 24.—(AP)—Robert R. Young, chairman of Alleghany corporation, today said he had sent letters to officers and directors of the Terminal Railroad association of St. Louis protesting an alleged plan to place new terminal financing with Morgan Stanley & Co., instead of opening it to competitive bidding.

Young pointed out that his similar intervention in the case of Cincinnati Union Terminal financing had saved that company money compared with previously projected private placing with Morgan Stanley.

Nation Faced by Crisis, Says Bank Veteran

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

A. W. Harris, dean of Chicago bankers, yesterday gave his views on the political and economic condition of the country. In one of his rare public statements he set forth his belief that the country is in the midst of a crisis and told how he believed that crisis should be met.

A. W. Harris.

It is a delusion, he said, to believe that the country is making progress, either economically or socially. Failure to face that fact, he said, can only prolong the troubles.

As chairman and formerly as president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, an institution that his father founded, Harris has had a career unmatched by any of Chicago's living bankers.

Entered Business in 1888.

He began business in 1888. He has been the directing head of the Harris organization for the last quarter of a century. The success of his bank throughout a period marked by many financial failures has established a reputation for Harris of being one of the most foresighted men of his time in the banking field.

"If in the face of continued unemployment, inefficiency in administration, mounting debt, inflation of currency, with politics and patronage taking the place of statesmanship and patriotism, we still believe we are on the way up, morally, financially, and socially, we are deluded," he said.

"If we will stop and consider, we cannot remain deluded much longer. We know that fundamentals are still fundamentals. We are asked to forget this, and to believe that because of wars or rumors of wars, because of this, or because of that, fundamentals have changed. If we believe this it would indicate we have learned nothing from history. However, we know human nature has not changed. Neither have the fundamentals. Experiment as much as we may, we shall not succeed in changing either.

Rights Are Surrendered.

"This experiment [referring to government's economic program] will go down in history as just another abortive attempt to change the immutable laws. In this attempt we are being cajoled into surrendering some of our rights as well as our responsibilities, which together have made us what we are, a people with self-determination, whose resources and right thinking have carved out a standard of living attained nowhere else in the world.

"We have men of courage and vision among us capable of producing a program based on fundamentals which will lead us back to safety. If we will make it our business to select such men and see that they are given authority our years of wandering in the wilderness will soon be over. But if we continue to follow after false gods, if we permit ourselves to be longer deluded, our sojourn in the desert will be prolonged and we shall have no one to blame but ourselves.

"How will our people meet this crisis in our country's history? Are we to wander thirty-three years longer in the wilderness? Not if we have the will to pick for leaders those who will put statesmanship before politics and patronage.

Good Judgment Needed.

"It is the duty of every man and woman who value their citizenship to give thought to the responsibility it entails and face it without shrinking. Good judgment is needed now. We have the right to use it and the power that goes with its use. If we do not use good judgment now, the right to use it later may be taken away from us, if those we send to congress to represent us and to preserve the rights as a nation we struggled so hard to secure fail to do so."

Harris will observe his seventy-third birthday next November. Seldom in his long banking career has he expressed views publicly on questions over which political controversy was raging.

MINIMUM COAL PRICES PROPOSED FOR THREE AREAS

Washington, D. C., June 24.—(AP)—Minimum prices ranging from $1.15 to $4.80 a ton were proposed by the bituminous coal commission today for sale of coal at the mines in central, southwestern, and southern states. The prices are subject to final hearings to be called within thirty days of formal publication of the proposed prices, expected next week.

The commission said prices for most coals produced in Arkansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Alabama "generally reflect present market levels." In Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, western Kentucky, Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, and parts of Tennessee and Georgia, the commission said, general increases were shown for industrial coals, but domestic coal prices "show little change." Among proposed prices were:

For Chicago market — Southern Illinois industrial slack, $1.70 a ton; southern Illinois six inch lump, $2.65; central Illinois industrial slack, $1.25; central Illinois lump, $2.15; Indiana fifth vein industrial slack, $1.45; Indiana fifth vein lump, $2.15. St. Louis market—Southern Illinois industrial slack, $1.70; southern Illinois six inch lump, $2.65; Belleville industrial slack, $1.20; Belleville lump, $2.25.

JOBS IN ILLINOIS MOUNT AGAINST SEASONAL TREND

Although employment usually decreases in May, the number of workers on pay rolls in Illinois increased 0.4 per cent, Martin P. Durkin, state labor director, announced yesterday. Wage payments rose 0.7 per cent, a gain larger than usual.

Employment at the end of last month was 2 per cent higher than in January and 4.4 per cent higher than in May, 1938, he said. Wages were up 2½ and 8½ per cent from those periods.

Twelve of the sixteen Illinois cities for which separate data was obtained showed increases both in employment and wages. Durkin's summary was based on reports from 6,889 manufacturing and nonmanufacturing establishments.

In Chicago, 4,188 establishments, employing 366,800 workers, showed increases of 0.2 per cent in employment and 1.1 per cent in pay rolls. In the metropolitan section outside of Chicago employment declined 0.1 per cent and pay rolls rose 0.5 per cent.

$566,298 PAVING AND VIADUCT WORK APPROVED

Springfield, Ill., June 24.—(AP)—The state highway division today notified the Cook county board of commissioners of approval of two contracts aggregating $566,298 for paving and a viaduct to be financed out of county refunds.

The Thomas McQueen company of Chicago, with a bid of $472,388, was awarded the contract for a thirteen span concrete and steel viaduct over the Chicago, Rock Island, and Pacific railroad at 127th street on Burr Oak avenue.

The Pronger Construction company was awarded the contract on a bid of $93,909 for one mile of 40 foot pavement on Sibley boulevard from Clinton street to Indiana avenue.

Illinois Title Men Ask Slum Clearing Laws

Kankakee, Ill., June 24.—[Special.]—The Illinois Title association today went on record as urging the adoption of the slum clearance bills pending before the state legislature.

Members recommended passage of the bills after R. K. Shelledy, Paris, president of the association, told the convention that the proposed legislation provides the first practical method that has been developed for attacking the slum problem in Illinois cities.

The association membership is made up of title men and abstractors of title representing nearly all the counties of Illinois. Nearly every county in the state was represented at today's meeting.

Action Is Significant.

The action of the title association was regarded as a significant endorsement for the bills because of the character of its membership. The title experts are intimately acquainted with the difficulty which confronts persons who seek to assemble land sites for slum clearance projects. It has always been a practical impossibility to obtain title to sufficient land to make the projects economically feasible because of the holdout tactics of a minority of the land owners.

The proposed bills provide that publicly regulated building corporations could acquire land from such holdouts through condemnation proceedings, provided they had obtained first at least 51 per cent of the land needed for the developments.

Immediate Action Needed.

President Shelledy told the convention that the cancerous growth of the slum areas in the cities constituted a problem requiring immediate treatment.

"In past," he asserted, "three or four unsocial land owners could block any real slum clearance plan. They refuse to surrender ownership of lands the use of which they may have abandoned themselves. It is this problem we must meet."

Answering some of the criticisms that have been made of the measures, he said: "Naturally it is not possible for any group of men to anticipate and provide for all the problems that may arise in connection with such a procedure over the next twenty-five years. It is, however, imperative, that we make a start now.

Can Make Changes if Needed.

"We can meet the other problems as they arise. The first thing to do is pass these bills. If later amendments or changes in procedure appear advisable they can be made."

The enabling bills for the use of the power of eminent domain by privately financed building corporations was approved overwhelmingly this week by the state senate. Only three members voted against the measures. The bills are expected to be advanced to third reading in the house of representatives next week and will probably come to a final vote. They have the support of a number of civic and business organizations in Chicago and the endorsement of O. W. Rosenthal, chairman of the state housing board.

JUNIOR BUSINESS GROUP ASSAILS FEDERAL POLICY

Tulsa, Okla., June 24.—[U. P.]—The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce's twentieth annual convention adopted resolutions today condemning government competition with business, government spending, and political meddling in relief.

Approved with little dissent was a resolution suggesting the abandonment of the government's reserve type of social security and the substitution of a "pay-as-you-go" plan. Too expensive security, the resolution said, could breed "insecurity." It said that a true social security program must be one providing the greatest benefit for all but within the limit of funds available.

The delegates elected Perry Pipkin, Memphis insurance man, as their 1940 president and selected Washington, D. C., as their 1940 convention city.

TAX REVISION IS INADEQUATE, SAYS INDUSTRY

Declared Only a Step in Right Direction.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., June 24.—The tax legislation just passed and sent to the President for his signature is a "much needed step," but does not go far enough in encouraging business recovery, the committee on government finance of the National Association of Manufacturers announced today.

The committee listed additional changes which are essential if a substantial measure of recovery is to be achieved. It commended the treasury and congress for supporting measures to ease the tax burden on business, but pointed out that additional legislation is needed to produce genuine "tax equity and justice."

Not a Major Remedy.

"While what has been done is a much needed step in the right direction, we nevertheless believe that it cannot logically be considered in itself as a major measure in the drive to promote national recovery," said the committee. "Desirable as are some of the changes, it is our belief that only to a minor extent will they assist what Secretary Morgenthau has described as 'the promotion of free enterprise and private investment.'"

The committee listed the following primary requisites for renewed private investment in private industry:

1. Reduction of the tax load on business so that a fair amount of earnings can be turned over to investors.
2. Reduction in the surtaxes on individual incomes so that enough income is left to make the investment of venture capital attractive.
3. Substantial changes in the capital gains taxes affecting individuals, for the purpose of stimulating investment of private funds.

Does Not Go Far Enough.

Pointing out that sound tax revision ought to promote the flow of capital into industry and also promote tax equity, the committee declared that the measure did not go far enough, particularly in achieving the former.

The committee commended the killing of the undistributed profits tax, adoption of the loss carry-over principle, repeal of the $2,000 limitation on net capital losses, and provision of redeclaration of capital stock valuation. The statement emphasized, however, that the pending measure gives "no consideration" to the following inequalities:

1. There is no provision for exempting corporate dividends paid to individuals from normal income tax.
2. There is no provision for elimination of the taxation of intercorporate dividends which result in double taxation.
3. There is no provision for elimination of the ban on consolidated returns by industrial corporations.
4. Sound tax principles are violated by the provision regarding taxation of corporations with normal-tax net incomes of not more than $25,000.

CHICAGO STEEL PRODUCTION TO RISE THIS WEEK

Chicago steel operations are scheduled to expand this week, but other districts will remain about unchanged or will decline. A downturn in operations as the July 4 holiday approaches is a seasonal expectation.

Steel output in Chicago is estimated to start tomorrow at 50.2 per cent of capacity, or 2.5 points higher than a week earlier, but 2.4 points lower than four weeks ago. A year ago production was at 26.7 per cent of capacity.

A slight upturn is expected in operations at Pittsburgh. The rate is scheduled to start at 46.0 per cent of capacity, up 0.5 per cent from last Monday. The rate a month ago was 40.0 per cent, and a year ago 26.0 per cent.

Youngstown district operations are expected to decline 6 points from 57.0 to 51.0 per cent of capacity. Operations in the Shenango valley, which were down slightly last week, are expected to be unchanged during the coming week.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS SAG, BUT EXCEED 1938

A decline in Chicago bank clearings last week to $277,800,000 from $337,200,000 in the preceding week was reported yesterday by the Chicago Clearing House association. In the corresponding 1938 week the volume was $259,900,000. The association's report follows:

| | Clearings. | Balances. |
|---|---|---|
| Monday | $ 44,100,000 | $ 2,000,000 |
| Tuesday | 45,500,000 | 2,800,000 |

| Saturday | 48,400,000 | 4,500,000 |
| Total for week | $277,800,000 | $20,500,000 |

Horner Fights Federal Tax on State Bonds

Washington, D. C., June 24.—[Special.]—Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois has telegraphed all members of the Illinois delegation in congress protesting against any attempt to impose federal taxation on the income from state and municipal bonds, the conference on state defense announced today.

Gov. Horner.

The conference is an organization of state attorneys general and other officials which has been fighting administration attempts to tax state and municipal bonds. Opponents of the plan, advocated by President Roosevelt, assert that the proposed tax is economically unsound and beyond the constitutional power of congress.

Foresee Increased Costs.

The announcement said that financial experts have estimated that a tax on state and municipal bonds will result in additional financing costs of at least 133 million dollars because of the necessary rise in local interest rates to compensate for the tax.

These experts also figure that Illinois and its political subdivisions would be faced with additional annual interest charges of more than 7 million dollars if this tax were imposed, according to the conference announcement.

The house ways and means committee is scheduled to begin hearings on June 28 on the treasury proposal for such a levy, a request which President Roosevelt reiterated this week.

Mayor to Oppose Measure.

Indications are that the conference on state defense and the United States conference of mayors have organized opposition to the plan and will be well represented at the committee hearings.

The conference announcement said that Attorney General John E. Cassidy of Illinois was expected to appear before the ways and means committee. Also, Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York, and Mayor Richard W. Reading of Detroit will appear to testify to the disastrous effect that a federal tax would have on municipal finances and insist that the tax proposal be rejected, according to an announcement by Paul V. Betters, executive secretary of the conference of mayors.

Warns of Tax Increase.

In support of its opposition to the plan the conference on state defense said that Dr. Harley L. Lutz, professor of public finance at Princeton university, has estimated that the tax rate in Chicago would rise if its bonds were taxed. According to this estimate, the city would be forced to pay additional financing costs of more than 4 million dollars annually.

The American Municipal association, the Institute of Municipal Law Officers, and the Municipal Finance Officers' association will add their protests at the hearings, according to the announcement.

Dr. Lutz, Dr. E. R. Logan, professor of public finance at the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. Albert Buehler, professor of economics at the University of Vermont, also are slated to appear in opposition to the federal tax plan.

CHICAGO GROUPS PLAN TO BOOST BUILDING WORK

The Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday announced that it will seek to unite the efforts of real estate men, builders, tradesmen, financiers, investors, and workers in a move to increase construction work in Chicago.

The drive will be made in connection with the Greater Chicago plan, which was described by Oscar G. Mayer, president of the association, as a program for "toning up the entire city." He declared Chicago is far behind the pace it should be setting in building construction.

"In 1938," Mayer said, "thirty-seven other metropolitan centers, all except one smaller than Chicago, surpassed our city in volume of construction expenditures. This year the situation is not much better."

Members of the Greater Chicago plan executive council will meet at the Union League club tomorrow.

TRADE MARCHES FORWARD; ONLY FEW LINES LAG

Gains Most Uniform in Many Weeks.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

American trade and industry improved last week in one of the most uniform forward movements recorded in many weeks.

Increases were reported in steel production, automobile assemblies, railroad freight loadings, electric power output, department store sales, wholesale buying, new financing and bank clearings in the latest weekly periods for which figures were available. Cotton textile manufacturing operations held steady.

Among the principal indices of activity, engineering construction awards, home building and the volume of bank loans to business, as indicated by figures for Chicago and New York banks, slipped below the levels of the preceding week.

Steel Production Rises.

Steel mills worked at 55 per cent of capacity, compared with 53.1 per cent in the preceding week and 28 per cent in the corresponding 1938 period. The 55 per cent rate was the highest since April.

Production of automobiles and trucks rose to 81,070 units. The totals in the preceding and 1938 weeks, respectively, were 78,305 and 42,918 units. Parts and accessory companies reported sales were active.

Feeling the effects of increased grain movements as the harvest season moved northward, railroad freight volume rose to a new high mark for the year at 637,873 cars in the week ended June 17. This was 3,276 cars, or 0.5 per cent, more than the volume of the June 10 week and 82,354 cars, or 14.8 per cent, more than the loadings of the 1938 week.

Shippers Need More Cars.

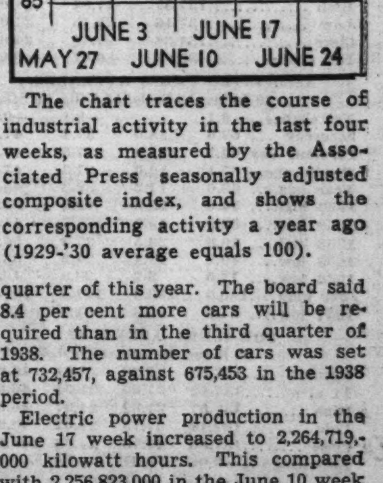
The Midwest Shippers Advisory board issued its forecast on the number of freight cars which shippers in Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, western Indiana and northern Michigan will need to move goods in the third quarter of this year. The board said 8.4 per cent more cars will be required than in the third quarter of 1938. The number of cars was set at 732,457, against 675,453 in the 1938 period.



The chart traces the course of industrial activity in the last four weeks, as measured by the Associated Press seasonally adjusted composite index, and shows the corresponding activity a year ago (1929-'30 average equals 100).

Electric power production in the June 17 week increased to 2,264,719,000 kilowatt hours. This compared with 2,256,823,000 in the June 10 week and 1,991,115,000 in the corresponding 1938 week. All sections of the nation shared in the rise.

Department Store Sales Rise.

Department store sales in the week ended June 17 showed a gain of 6 per cent as compared with a year earlier. In the seventh [Chicago] federal reserve district the increase was 7 per cent.

STOCK MARKET LITTLE CHANGED IN QUIET TRADE

Some Specialties Rise; Loft Is Active.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, June 24.—Little change was made in the price structure of the stock market today. The undertone was firm, but losses and gains were fairly evenly distributed. Attendance in the street was at a low level and the sales total was only 187,820 shares.

Tickers remained idle for minutes at a time and leading industrial shares made relatively few appearances on the tape. Only 462 issues were traded in the two hours. What price changes occurred were regarded as of little significance.

Observers saw little in the news calculated to sway traders one way or the other. However, the reports that the firming of the British stand in the Far East had at last brought about some concessions from the Japanese were believed to have increased the possibility for an end to the tension in that area.

Although most of the general list of stocks were neglected by traders, special issues met demand. Loft again found good inquiry and rose a major fraction to a new high mark for the year.

The belated disclosure of the suit against directors of Climax Molybdenum failed to have any material effect on the stock, which eased a half point. Coty, Inc., was active and a bit higher. Utilities and rails were little changed.

COTTON

Cotton futures developed an irregular trend yesterday, with closing prices in American markets .09 cent a pound lower to .05 cent higher. New York futures showed the greatest strength, deferred deliveries there finishing with gains.

Lack of a definite trend in foreign markets contributed to the irregularity on this side. Liverpool traders, cables said, were perplexed as to Wallace's intentions, particularly regarding the rates which would be paid on the proposed export subsidy.

Selling by Bombay interests was in evidence in the New York market, brokers said. The same interests purchased March and May contracts.

Spot cotton closed unchanged to .06 cent a pound lower, with New York at 9.91 cents, New Orleans 9.45 cents, Houston 9.40 cents, and Galveston 9.42 cents. Prices follow:

WHEAT CLOSES IRREGULAR IN DULL TRADING

Wheat futures on the Chicago Board of Trade showed some firmness in early trading yesterday as hedges were lifted against flour business, presumably some of the 500,000 barrels reported sold on Friday.

A light volume of hedging sales from the southwest later in the session proved sufficient to depress prices slightly, and the close was ½ cent a bushel lower to ⅛ cent higher. The market in general displayed its usual Saturday dullness.

Nearby corn futures equaled their previous seasonal lows and the December contract reached a new low when liquidation and commission house selling found buyers scarce.

Closing corn prices were down 1 to 1¼ cents in a light trade. The lows reëstablished by the July and September deliveries were the lowest in five years.

Liquidating sales depressed oats prices, with the market showing a general tendency to work lower. At the close quotations were ⅜ to ⅝ cent lower. Soy beans closed ¾ to 1 cent lower in a quiet trade.

CORN OF HYBRID TYPE DISJOINTS CROP FORECASTS

xperts Worry Over Effect of Higher Yield.

The nation's billion dollar corn crop giving Chicago's crop forecasters a ew headache, grain men said yester ay. The experts, part of whose busi ess is predicting the probable size of rvests, are having trouble with the w type of high yielding hybrid corn, hich has become increasingly popu r with farmers.

With the hybrid corn yielding 10 to per cent more than the open polli ted variety, the experts are at mpting to determine the percentage acreage which is seeded to the brid variety.

This year's harvested acreage is ex cted to be the smallest in 40 years. e government report on March 1 nditions showed intentions to plant ,000,000 acres, compared with 93,257,- 0 acres planted in 1938 and a ten ar average of 101,714,000 acres.

More Corn on Fewer Acres.

But the effect of hybrid corn was flected in a 1938 harvest about 6 per nt larger than that of 1933, although e acreage harvested was 13 per cent aller.

Iowa farmers reported to state offi als that 81 per cent of this year's reage was planted to hybrid corn, mpared with only 58 per cent a ar earlier. Experts said similar con tions probably exist in other corn oducing states.

An indication of the increased yields at farmers obtain from hybrid corn found in the yields per acre in the ree leading corn states, Illinois, wa, and Indiana. An average of 36 shels per acre was harvested in ose states from 1922 to 1931. In 1932 e yield was 42 bushels per acre; in 37, 46 bushels; in 1938, 43 bushels.

Experts' Forecasts Upset.

Thus, the crop forecasters are mak g a careful study of this new wrench rown into their carefully adjusted lculating machinery. They find it ghly disconcerting to predict that an re of corn will yield 12 bushels, only discover later that the acre pro ced 16 bushels.

Although it is too early to predict is year's corn harvest, the experts y the crop is starting in excellent ndition. Plenty of rainfall has ad nced growth rapidly, except where ol weather has prevailed. The rains ve hampered cultivation of the plant some extent, but indications at esent are that warm, dry weather ll permit the necessary field work be done before the plant is damaged.

With continued favorable weather, e forecasters say, hybrid corn's high elding qualities may offset the gov nment's program for reduced acre e, and a fairly large crop may be own.

EASTERN ILLINOIS OIL BASIN ACTIVE; FIND 2 GAS WELLS

May Mean Discovery of New Field.

Centralia, Ill., June 24.—(AP)—Extensive exploration and the completion of several big wells gave prominence to the eastern part of the Illinois oil basin this week. Two new gas wells and an oil well stole the spotlight.

Each of the two wells produced gas for more than 24 hours before being brought under control. One was the Ohio Oil company's No. 1 R. A. Chapman, five miles north of Olney, Richland county, which tapped a deposit of "sour" gas without commercial value in the McClosky formation, but the gas may be used to repressure oil formations where gas pressure has been depleted.

A second gas well, the Angle & Eason Oil company's No. 1 Storms, five miles south of Carmi in White county, blew in. W. N. Angle, co-operator, said it produced commercial gas and contacted Carmi city officials in an attempt to get a gas franchise in that city.

These may indicate the discovery of a new gas field. The largest gas well in Illinois at present is in the Russellville field near Lawrenceville with a potential daily output of slightly more than 30,000,000 cubic feet.

The oil well was Menhall-Benoist's No. 1 Benoist, a deep test a mile north of Sandoval, Marion county. J. W. Menhall, a co-operator, said the well flowed 120 barrels in six minutes from the Niagaran formation before exhausting storage facilities. Further tests were postponed a week.

BANKS AND INTEREST.

Since the establishment of the first bank in America the thrifty person has always been envied. He was able to square his shoulders and face the future with a confidence not felt by others less thrifty. His neighbors respected him. Merchants dealt with him more willingly. He was able to get credit when he wanted it. And banks paid him "rent" in the form of interest on his savings.

Money placed at the disposal of banks by the thrifty was used to make loans and investments. The interest on money loaned by the bank and the return on its investments together made up the earnings of the bank after its expenses of operation were covered. These expenses included interest on deposits. From the bank's earnings its stockholders were paid dividends.

Up to a few years ago loans normally exceeded the investments of a bank. It was the practice of banks to use for investment purposes funds which were not in demand for loans. A slackened demand for loans in recent years, however, forced banks to place their funds in other channels. Now the banks' investments are much larger than their loans.

Because banks were forced to shift the investment of their funds from loans yielding a rather high rate of return to bonds on which the interest yield was considerably lower, their problem of making money became harder. The bond market, reflecting the administration's "easy money" policy, worked downward as the interest rate on high grade government securities became successively lower. As interest on government issues lowered the rates on corporate issues suitable for bank investment followed the trend.

The result is that banks are put in a peculiar position. They are hemmed in on one side because business isn't willing to speculate on the future by making loans. On the other side, the banks are stopped by the lack of opportunity for profitable investment in approved securities.

The banks' position, however, is no less peculiar than the circumstances in which the bank depositor now finds himself. His savings are guaranteed up to $5,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, for example, but at the same time government policy gives that savings little or no earning power. Because they were unable to find other means through which to put their funds to work at a profit, the thrifty have piled more and more money into banks' vaults. Their return, however, has become smaller and smaller.

◆

Several banks throughout the nation have now announced that interest on savings will be suspended entirely. Others are lowering their rate of interest again. In effect, these banks have been forced to take a drastic step to protect their depositors and stockholders. Bankers don't like profitless banking any more than depositors do. They are forced to cut interest to balance their books and keep their doors open. If they were to shut down, the depositor-investor would then be faced with the even harder problem of getting any return on his funds. He would be turned out in the investment field where even bankers were unable to make money on money.

SHADOW OF NAZI SWASTIKA FALLS ON DUTCH DEALS

Prevents Barter Trades with United States.

Washington, D. C., June 24.—(AP)—The shadow of the swastika has fallen on the negotiations between the United States and the Netherlands for an exchange of American surplus cotton and wheat for Dutch tin and rubber. Although negotiations for the exchange of potential raw materials to be held as reserves for war emergency have succeeded with Great Britain, and continue with Belgium, they have been broken off with Holland.

George A. Gordon.

The Netherlands was approached by the United States through George A. Gordon, American minister at the Hague, at about the same time Britain and Belgium were approached. But they had scarcely begun when the Netherlands government perceived storm clouds coming from Nazi Germany.

Holland Closely Linked.

Holland, it happens, has close commercial relations with Germany, her next door neighbor. A large part of Holland's exports go to Germany and a large part of her imports come from Germany.

Germany has sought insistently to increase these trade connections, with the particular plan of getting more of the raw materials Holland brings in from the Dutch East Indies—rubber and tin—in exchange for German products. Holland, however, has refused to permit tin to be exported to Germany in exchange for "blocked marks" [money for limited use].

When soundings began with the United States for the exchange of tin and rubber for cotton and wheat, indications came from Germany that if Holland signed such a deal, Germany would insist on a similar deal. The Dutch government passed this hint on to the American government, and said that under such circumstances it could not go through with the deal with the United States.

Answers American Objection.

The American negotiators objected that Germany had no raw materials, such as cotton and wheat, to exchange for Dutch rubber and tin. But the Dutch authorities replied that Germany could get hold of cotton and wheat through barter arrangements with other countries, and would still insist on swapping them for Dutch tin or rubber. Holland preferred to be able to sell tin and rubber to Germany outright in exchange for foreign currency or gold.

TRACTION BONDS ADVANCE; OTHER ISSUES VARIABLE

New York, June 24.—(AP)—New York traction issues assumed leadership in the bond market today as possibility of unification of the city's subways bulked large in traders' eyes. Interest in tractions colored an otherwise drab market, where fractional gains and losses were established in slow dealings.

Manhattan Railway 4s of '90 closed 2¾ points higher and the second 4s added 2½, both near the day's tops. I. R. T. loans failed to maintain peak gains, but the 7s of '32, the 6s of '32, and the refunding 5s of '66 were still up fractions to more than a point.

United States government issues advanced as much as 6-32 point in quiet trading. Foreign dollar loans also swung in a narrow orbit.

Transactions of $2,502,000, face value, compared with $2,093,000 a week ago.

SALES BOOSTED, PRICES REDUCED BY ADVERTISING

Benefits Revealed by Intensive Survey.

Advertising has played a dominant rôle in reducing the selling prices of merchandise, thus bringing a wide variety of products within the price range of the masses, it was concluded in a survey made public yesterday. The Twentieth Century Fund, research institution, credited advertising for the growth of America's vast mass production facilities.

In making public the results of an intensive survey, the organization's research experts cited automobiles as an outstanding example of the value of advertising. Without advertising, and the increased demand created by it, automobiles would cost much more than they do, it was found.

Cites Price Reduction.

The organization's announcement said advertising enabled the manufacturer of a popular dessert to cut the price of its product to one-half the figure of a few years ago. The report added:

"It is not safe to conclude that even substitute brands, now able to take advantage of the 'price umbrella' raised by national advertisers, could be sold more cheaply if the national advertising were to stop."

The cost of publicity on a popular soft drink was placed at 16-1000ths of a cent for each 5 cent glass; on a leading package of 10 cent soda crackers, less than one-tenth of a cent; on a 15 cent breakfast food, three-tenths of a cent; on a popular $1.95 shirt, six-tenths of a cent; on a nationally advertised bed sheet selling at $1.75, one cent.

Advertising Cost Small.

Citing the low cost per unit of even the most extensive advertising, the announcement said the expense of newspaper, magazine, radio, and billboard publicity amounts to less than half a cent on a package of cigarets.

"Advertising as a technique of selling is clearly necessary in the marketing of many kinds of goods," the survey found. "It is a useful selling method which, like other selling methods, can be used for bad as well as good ends. It may, and often does, make large scale low cost distribution possible. It may and usually must result in maintaining standards of quality."

If advertising were to stop, the fund research experts concluded that "perhaps the general demand created by advertising would also stop."

The research report was prepared by Paul W. Stewart and J. Frederic Dewhurst, economists.

CONSUMERS BUY MORE MEAT; LIVE STOCK RALLIES

Quick consumer response to lowered meat prices last week stimulated buying of live stock and enabled farmers to get higher quotations from packers.

Wholesale and retail meat prices averaged the lowest for any corresponding period in five years. Chicago housewives, taking advantage of the reductions, increased their purchases. The stockyards quickly felt the effects of the buying, and the prices of live stock made the second sharpest rally in either months, after several weeks in the doldrums.

Packers paid an average of $8.55 a hundred pounds for the three principal classes of meat animals, steers, hogs, and lambs, 25 cents more than a week earlier. The six day average price of hogs climbed 35 cents to $6.45. Despite the recovery, however, live stock costs, except for lambs, remained below 1938 levels.

Railroads' Loss Is Smaller.

Figures were made public showing that the class one railroads in the nation had a net loss of $71,487,000, after fixed charges, in the first four months of this year. In the first four months of 1938 they had a net loss of $139,004,000.

The Illinois Central railroad announced a new freight handling plan affecting a large area in southern Illinois, which will be put into operation June 27. Trucks will handle less than carload freight in the area, picking up small shipments from local freight stations and delivering them to a central station at Carbondale. Similarly, freight sent to the area will be distributed from Carbondale by truck. The purpose is to speed up shipments and attract new business.

Additional statistics covering activity in various lines of business during May were issued.

Retail sales of automobiles and trucks last month increased 3 per cent as compared with April and 44 per cent as compared with May, 1938.

Air Trafic Up 21 Per Cent.

Sixteen major air lines reported combined May passenger trafic was 21 per cent larger in terms of passenger revenue mileage than in April and 36.3 per cent larger than in May, 1938.

Building construction of all kinds in Illinois cities exceeded year ago levels in terms of the number of projects and also in cost. The increase in number of permits was 82 per cent and the rise in value was 94.8 per cent.

Banks belonging to the New York City Clearing House association decided to close on Saturdays during July and August. They acted under a New York law, signed last week, which permits a bank to close on Saturdays during the two months if the board of directors wishes to do so. The question of a similar closing by the New York Stock exchange will be decided later.

FHA Gives Final Approval to $3,443,000 South Side Apartments

ENDS 8 MONTHS' DELIBERATION OVER PROJECT

Cottage Grove and 83d Site of Development.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Chicago's largest privately financed apartment project in many years, the $3,443,000 Chatham Park development planned for 80 acres at the southwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 83d street, is to go forward. After eight months of delays, negotiations, deliberations, and red tape unwinding, the Washington Federal Housing administration officials have finally decided that the project is satisfactory. They approved a $2,460,000 mortgage which will be insured by the FHA.

George H. Dovenmuehle.

John R. O'Connor, state director of the FHA, yesterday notified George H. Dovenmuehle, vice president of Dovenmuehle, Inc., and Preston Boyden of the law firm of Taylor, Miller, Busch & Boyden, officers and chief sponsors of Chatham Park, Inc., that Washington FHA officials at last had approved the project.

Designed by Chicagoans.

Designed by the Chicago architectural firm of Shaw, Naess & Murphy, the big apartment project will comprise 72 buildings containing 554 suites, duplex homes, and garden apartments.

As a start only 22 acres of the entire 80 acre tract will be improved. Eventually, according to Dovenmuehle, the whole property will be covered with residential units. Future plans will include a major shopping center, a community house, gymnasium, swimming pool, and many other residential buildings.

"The buildings will be arranged in six large general groups," said O'Connor. "Depressed garage compounds in each section will provide ample shelter for the automobiles of families living in each general grouping.

Also Open Parking Areas.

"At strategic points in each section areas will be set aside to provide convenient daytime parking for families in that section, thus keeping the drives clear of parked cars."

According to Dovenmuehle, whose firm has arranged the mortgage financing for three of the first five large scale apartment projects to be built under the FHA plan in this area, the present development will be at the north end of the eighty acre tract bounded by 83d street, Cottage Grove avenue, 87th street, and St. Lawrence avenue.

Alfred Shaw, architect, gave details yesterday of the project.

"For families that prefer homes," he said, "we are erecting 164 duplex houses of five rooms each. Of the apartment units 195 will have four rooms each, 105 will have three rooms, and twelve will have five rooms.

Other Suites Described.

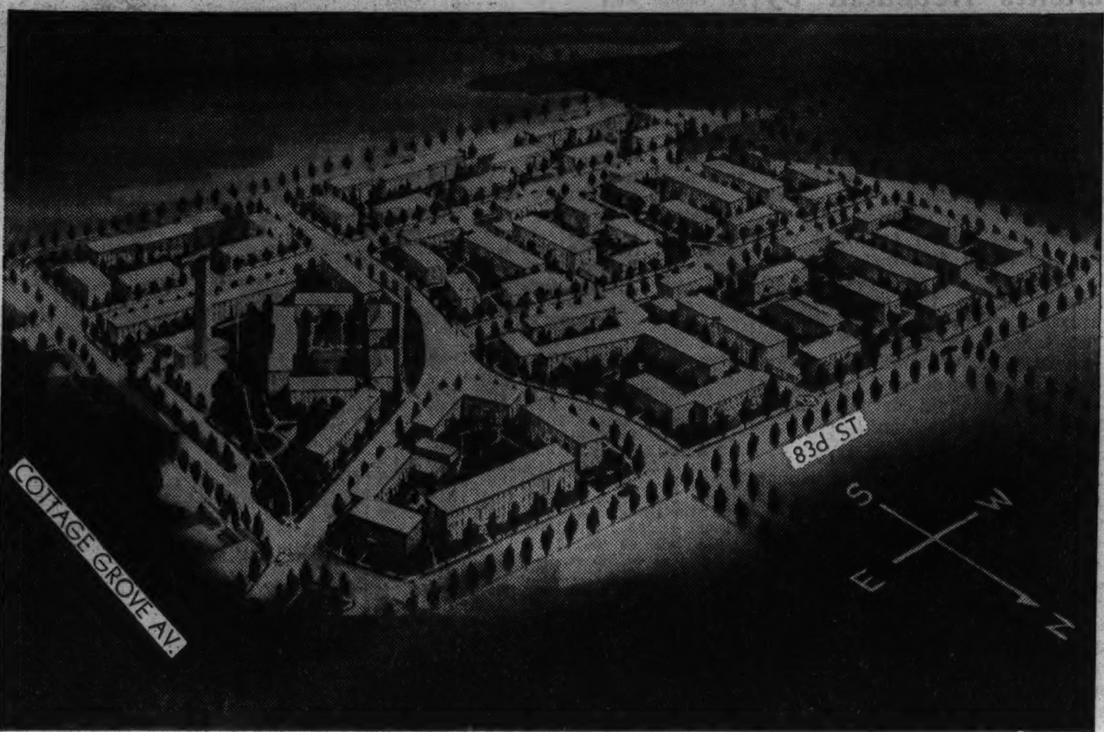
"The majority of four room suites will have two bedrooms each. In addition, there will be seventy-eight garden apartments fronting on sunken gardens. These will contain 3½ rooms each. The 72 buildings will contain 2,248 rooms and will accommodate 554 families."

The general contract already has been let to the Robert G. Regan company. Ground will be broken within thirty days, it was said. Completion is expected about May 1, 1940. The project was first announced in THE TRIBUNE on Oct. 15, 1938.

Chicago's Biggest Residential Development in Years



This is a view of the biggest privately owned apartment project planned for Chicago in many years. Shaw, Naess & Murphy are the architects. It is the $3,443,000 Chatham Park development, to be built at the southwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and 83d street, by a syndicate headed by George H. Dovenmuehle and Preston Boyden.

Only 35 Negro Families in 3 Home Projects

Only thirty-five of the 2,414 dwelling units in the three big government built housing projects in Chicago are occupied by colored families. Miss Elizabeth Wood, executive secretary of the Chicago housing authority, which operates under lease the Jane Addams houses, on the west side, the Julia Lathrop homes on the north side, and the Trumbull park homes in South Chicago, made this disclosure yesterday.

All of the thirty-five colored families are housed in the Jane Addams houses. There are no colored residents in the north side or South Chicago projects, Miss Wood said.

No Color Line Drawn.

There is no color line, however, in any of the three federal housing projects, she said. It just happens that there have been no applications of these families in the list of tenants accepted for the Julia Lathrop homes or the Trumbull park homes, she asserted. The Jane Addams houses project is just north of one of Chicago's most densely populated colored areas—the territory south of Roosevelt road.

There are 1,027 dwelling units in the Jane Addams houses; 925 units in the Julia Lathrop homes, and 462 in the Trumbull park homes. The three projects are 100 per cent occupied, it is said, and house 9,257 persons.

Plan Another Project.

Architects are busy on plans for the South Park gardens at Cottage Grove avenue and East 37th street, which will cost $9,500,000, according to Miss Wood. They will have 1,662 living units and house 6,500 persons, it is estimated.

Theoretically, these will be occupied by colored families. It was pointed out, however, that there will be no distinction as to color. White families may live there if they care to and can qualify as to income and other points required by the CHA.

WARDWAY PAINT BUILDS $250,000 PLANT ADDITION

Montgomery Ward & Co. have started work on a $250,000 addition to the Wardway Paint works, at 10th and Washington streets, Chicago Heights. The B-W Construction company of Chicago has the general contract. The addition comprises two units; one is a two story laboratory and office building, 104 by 160 feet, and the other is a four story paint storage building, 62 by 80 feet. Both are of fireproof construction, and are connected by a steel bridge.

Uhlemann Optical Rents Pittsfield Building Store

The Uhlemann Optical company has leased the thirty foot store at 65 East Washington street, in the Pittsfield building, for a term of years. ## ARCHITECT'S PLACE IN RECONSTRUCTION OF CITY TO BE TOLD

The architect's place in the reconstruction of Chicago will be discussed at the forty-second annual meeting and election of the Illinois Society of Architects next Tuesday evening, June 27. The meeting will be held in the rooms of the Chicago Real Estate board, 32 West Randolph street. Elmer C. Jensen of the architectural firm of Mundie, Jensen, Bourke, and Havens, who is rounding out his fifth term as president of the architects' society, will preside. Jensen also is president of the Chicago Building Congress, Inc., sponsor of the public service building corporation bills now under consideration at Springfield.

Elmer C. Jensen.

Speakers on Tuesday evening will be C. Herrick Hammond, Illinois state architect; Paul Schweikher, Paul D. Angell, secretary of the Chicago Building Congress, Inc., and Frederick V. Murphy, founder and dean of the architectural department of the Catholic university, Washington, D. C. Representatives from various civic and business organizations have been invited.

There are two tickets in the field for the election. Paul Gehardt Jr. heads the administration ticket, and Eugene Fuhrer the membership ticket. The polls will be closed Tuesday afternoon and the election returns will be announced during the evening.

Luggage Firm Makes Branch Its Main Store

Charles T. Wilt & Co., pioneer luggage manufacturer, who has been a tenant in the Railway Exchange building for the last twenty-six years, yesterday leased more than six times the space now occupied. The concern has 800 square feet at 226 South Michigan avenue. The space rented is at 230-34 and comprises 5,000 square feet on the first and second floors. It is completely air conditioned. A private elevator connects the two floors.

Wilt & Co. will take possession about Aug. 1, according to Aldis J. Browne of Ross, Browne & Fleming, agent for the Railway Exchange, who represented all parties. Several concerns have applied for the space to be vacated by Wilt, he said.

Wilt's main store has been at 226 West Madison street for many years. The Michigan avenue shop is a branch. When the enlarged Railway Exchange store is opened it will be operated as the main store and the Madison street shop will become a branch.

WEST ROOSEVELT ROAD LEASE.

Jacob Bloom, president of the Bloom Lamp Shade company, leased the entire fourth floor at 828 West Roosevelt road. Arthur Rubloff & Co. report the building fully rented.

NEW INDUSTRY COMES TO CITY FROM TOLEDO

Conklin Pen Leases Space on North Side.

Chicago has a new industry. The general offices and manufacturing facilities of the Conklin Pen company, pioneer manufacturers of fountain pens, have been moved from Toledo, O., to 18 East Erie street. This forty-eight year old firm, which in Ohio employed 400 persons, formally will open for business on the near north side tomorrow. Space in the building owned by the Carpenter's District council has been leased for a term of years.

Albert J. Tarrson.
[Harry Johnson Photo.]

The Conklin Pen company was taken over a year ago by a group of Chicago business men headed by Albert J. Tarrson, M. H. Jacobs, and M. Horwitz.

Also Heads Apartment Project.

Tarrson is president of the Marine Drive Apartments, Inc., owner of the $1,500,000 flats now under construction on the north side. The inventor and founder of the firm, Roy Conklin, died recently in Miami, Fla.

"When Conklin invented and introduced the first successful self-filling fountain pen in 1891, all other makes required the use of droppers for filling," Tarrson said yesterday.

"Against the virtual monopoly of dropper types on the market, the early advance of the self-filler pen was considered an encroachment on an established industry and its acceptance was therefore gradual.

Marketing New Type.

"However, when it eventually became popular the company reached a $2,000,000 business in a single year. Its exports were received by eighty-six countries. Today the entire fountain pen industry does a business of more than $25,000,000."

The company is now marketing a new type of pen which fills by means of a knob which winds like a clock and stops when the pen is filled.

LEIGHLY MADE PRESIDENT OF APPRAISAL BODY

William Lewis Leighly was elected president of the Illinois Association of Certified Real Estate Appraisers for the year 1939-'40 at the annual meeting held at the Great Northern hotel recently. Other officers elected were: Vice president, Albin K. Hornof; secretary, J. W. Kroehnke; treasurer, Max Fuhrer. Directors elected were John J. Falvey, Ernest H. Lyons, and M. E. Gueroult, retiring president. Tentative plans for the year call for publication of a limited edition of a book containing complete specimen appraisals of typical buildings as made by various members.

William L. Leighly.

LAWRENCE AVENUE LEASE.

The division of employment compensation and employment service in the Illinois department of labor has leased space on the second floor at 5306 Lawrence avenue. Elmer E. Stults, Inc., represented all parties.

Pan American Airways Rent Field Building Space

Pan American Airways, Inc., will move on July 8 from 103 South La Salle street to new quarters in the Field building, at 144 South Clark street, according to Robert Carpenter, manager of the building.

EXPECT 40,000 AT AMATEUR AIR CIRCUS TODAY

Flyers of 8 States to Seek Prizes.

Amateur flying enthusiasts, who operate their light stock model planes of seventy-five horsepower or less purely for sport, will converge on Curtiss-Reynolds airport at Glenview from eight middle western states today for Chicago's second annual amateur air show.

More than 40,000 spectators are expected to be on hand to witness a program of precision flying, spot landing trials, bomb dropping tests and closed course racing, starting at 1 o'clock. Special stunts and demonstrations by expert pilots from leading airplane factories and parachute jumps by Lieut. E. Verne Stewart of Elgin, member of the Illinois Aeronautics commission, will be features.

Girls to Take Part.

Entries received by Pat Sweeney and Robert Morrow, the co-directors of the show, come from Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Michigan and Ohio. Several members of the Chicago Girl's Flying club and the Ninety-niner organization, who performed for 35,000 spectators at the first show held at Harlem airport last year, will take part.

The principal trophy, standing more than three feet high and surmounted by the figure of a woman holding an airplane aloft, has been donated by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Other major trophies are being given by the Walgreen company, the Brower Paper company, and Aviation post of the American Legion. Thomas J. White Jr. of the Legion post is the donor of fourteen medallions for the flyers. No cash prizes will be offered to attract professional exhibition flyers. Col. Roscoe Turner, world famed speed pilot, who is to act as chief starter, will attempt a record making nonstop flight, however, from Birmingham, Ala., en route to the show.

Among the Chicago entrants are Mrs. Mae Wilson, proprietor of the Wilson airport, who has a record of 600 hours at the controls, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard De Witt, instructors at Ashburn airport, and Maj. Arthur LaPointe, flying instructor at Calumet High school. Maj. LaPointe, who conducts classes at Harlem airport, will lead a flight in formation exhibitions.

Nebraskans in Mass Flight.

Other Chicagoland entrants include Charles R. Johnson, John Dieler, Dale L. White, E. E. Edelmann, William C. Hager, Alfred Giffey, Stan Ranney, R. Rosen, Albert Casky, and John McCormick, all residents of the city, and W. E. Thatcher, Aurora; William Vogel, La Salle; Leonard Schrader, Nauvoo; Hallie O'Brien, Peoria, and Leonard Drydyk of Milwaukee. Nebraska entrants will make a mass flight from Omaha.

Solo pilots will compete in the precision flying contest, which consists of a smooth take-off, steady bank around the field and a landing on the runway in front of the judges. Each pilot will be permitted only one landing.

In the bomb dropping contest, flyers will drop bombs on a house model in the center of a circle, from a minimum altitude of 500 feet. Clouds of smoke issuing from the structure will indicate a direct hit. Holders of private, limited commercial and commercial ratings may compete.

Among the closed course races, around a two-mile triangular course, will be one for planes of seventy-five horsepower or less, another for fifty horsepower or less, and one for women piloting ships of fifty horsepower or less. These events are for commercial or limited commercial license holders.

Spot Landing Contest.

Private pilots will compete in the spot landing contest to a forty-foot circle with a throttled motor from 1,500 feet. The winner will be the pilot whose ship touches on three points closest to the center of the circle.

Honorary judges will be Maj. Reed Landis, Thomas F. White Jr., Maurice L. Horner Jr., and Conger Reynolds. The judges will be Lew Churbuck, J. Rosecrans, Bernard Keegan, chairman of American Legion committee on aeronautics for Cook county and Illinois, and L. A. Vilas. E. M. Brower is chairman of the reception committee which includes Edward Younkers, Seymour Klaf, Mary Linn, Melvin Schneider, Marguerite Greene and Shirlee Pollak.

INDUCT OFFICERS OF SOUTH SHORE LIONS TONIGHT

The South Shore Lions club will install its new officers at a banquet and dance at 6 o'clock this evening in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. The new officials are J. Leslie Rosenblum, president; Dr. Martin Merbitz, first vice president; Edward Tabor, second vice president; William Blackwell, third vice president; Marshall Anderson, secretary; Lee R. Johns, treasurer; A. Straith Scott, lion tamer; William Lyke, tail twister, and E. O. Berquist, Wilfred Contois, George Schael, David Saper, Leland Johnson, and Walter Gustafson, directors. Tribute will be given to Max Schmidl, retiring president, and Mr. Scott, who assisted him.

Their Golden Day Is Requiem of Old Danger

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

A picture of massive tranquility, 265 pound Theodore Breternitz sat smoking one of his three daily cigars and reading the baseball scores last week in his home at 6039 Peoria street. His wife, a gentle little white-haired woman sat opposite him, her hands folded quietly in her lap.

In the kitchen, a pretty daughter was clearing away the supper dishes. The domestic peace of the scene was disturbed only by a young grandson who whooped through the parlor on his way to the neighborhood movie, attracting a tolerant smile from Mrs. Breternitz.

Somewhere on the street, a car suddenly backfired and Mrs. Breternitz lifted her head sharply. With the quick gesture, her glance fell upon her husband and once more she relaxed in the chair. That little incident tells the story.

He Knew Excitement.

Recently Mr. and Mrs. Breternitz celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. Golden weddings are not rare public events, although deservedly, they are considered great occasions in family circles. This anniversary, however, marks a victory over bullets which have whizzed by Mr. Breternitz's head, gangsters who have evaded his pursuit and murderers who have struggled in his grasp. At the age of 75 years Mr. Breternitz is still a policeman.

Now a well known character on La Salle street, he is a private policeman for a brokerage firm. Nineteen years ago he retired, after thirty-one years' service, as sergeant on the Chicago police force. Active in a day when murderers were really desperate characters, and not casually hired hoodlums, Mr. Breternitz was probably in the midst of as much excitement as any man who ever wore the uniform.

A year after his marriage to Annie Richart, who had charge of a loop candy store, Mr. Breternitz joined the Chicago police force.

"I was never frightened for him in those days," says his wife. "He was a tall, handsome man with a big handlebar mustache and the high helmet gave him an impressive look."

Captured Jekyll-Hyde.

For eleven years he walked a beat as patrolman. In 1901 he was promoted to senior detectice sergeant and took an active part in most of the big cases handled by the bureau.

He captured the notorious "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," George H. Jacks, who was chief of police at Muskegon, Mich., by day and a robber and murderer by night. Jacks was hanged. In 1916, Sergt. Breternitz tracked down in Detroit and arrested J. Maurice Pettit who had murdered his bride of a month.

"He was a queer bird," Breternitz recounts. "He killed his wife because he wanted her to remain beautiful. The bride's mother stated to the judge who tried the case that she didn't believe in capital punishment, so Pettit was sentenced to life imprisonment. He is still in prison.

A line of tough men became indebted to Sergt. Breternitz for the realization that crime does not pay, and then he was appointed head of the city's first "flying squadron" to raid gambling dens.

Stuck in Skylight.

"We used to raid ten or twelve joints a day. I remember once when we called a raid on famous old Patsy King's place at 189 West Madison street, headquarters of the policy racket then. The only way we could get into the building was by a skylight. I was beginning to get fat at the time and I got stuck in the skylight. My men had to push me through. It nearly upset the raid."

Throughout his nineteen years as a sergeant, Mr. Breternitz never had even one of the 100 policemen he supervised brought before the trial board, and he, himself, in thirty-one years on the force never once received a reprimand.

"When I was offered the position with the brokerage firm, I didn't want to resign until my thirty-one years were up on the following April," he said. "But poor Charlie Conlin, who was killed by bandits, had been going to quit the first of that year. When my wife read that in the paper she said, 'Ted, don't wait till April, it may then be too late!'"

Recipe for Happiness.

So this month found Mr. and Mrs. Breternitz quietly enjoying their start on another half century of married life.

"Here's a hint to young wives," states Mrs. Breternitz. "You can have a man content to stay at home if you cook him good meals on time, be neat and tidy and save his money."

The recipe must have been a good one, for her well fed husband only leaves his home without her to go to his poker club which he has attended every other Saturday for the last forty years and to spend some time each year in Hot Springs.

"I like the ball games but I don't go often because Mrs. Breternitz has not been very well for some time."

Zephyr Twins Will Fete Former Officers July 11

Past officers' night will be observed by the Zephyr Twin club of Chicago Tuesday evening, July 11, at a meeting in the Morrison hotel. All past officers will be special guests. Any twins in Chicago are invited to attend. Dancing will follow the meeting. Chester Doonan, 3020 Broad street, and Warren Doonan, 3354 Union avenue, twin brothers, are presidents.

Art Invades Outdoors in Sketch Club Exhibit

Beauty goes outdoors in the summertime. Proving this contention doubly, the annual outdoor exhibit of the Beverly Sketch club, which opened yesterday at 95th street and Longwood drive to continue until Sunday, July 9, attracted the lovely members of the community as amateur art critics and connoisseurs. The exhibit is made up of the work of local artists and club members and is the only outdoor show in the city to run successfully for the last seven years. Stopping to chat with Miss Jean Ann Murray, 1727 West 104th place, yesterday as she touched up a painting for the outdoor light were Miss Letty Rae Huber, 10445 Hale avenue (center), and Miss Rosemary Meridith, 10213 Wood street.

Today, besides the Parker group, the Austin Methodist choir will be heard in Thatcher woods, River Forest, and St. Sebastian's choir will sing in Caldwell woods, Milwaukee and Devon avenues.

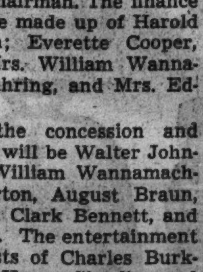
THIRD ANNUAL PICNIC IS SCHEDULED FOR THREE SCHOOL BANDS



H. J. Lambrecht.

The third annual band picnic by the Tinley Park, Frankfort and Mokena school bands will be held next Sunday at Frankfort Grove on route 45, one-fourth mile north of the village of Frankfort. The picnic will open with a massed concert of all the bands, composed of 100 pieces, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Several selections will also be played by each band alone.

RURAL DANCES GET PLACE AT MUSIC FESTIVAL

Will Be Joyous Part of Chicagoland Fete.

One of the biggest country dances ever held is to have the city for its setting. Instead of a barn, these dancers will do their quadrilles, their Virginia reels and chorus jigs in the vast arena that is Soldiers' field and thousands of feet will tap time to "Turkey in the Straw" played by a symphony orchestra.

Today's bumper crop of jitterbugs will stand by while hundreds of Chicagoans, old and young, do the old square dances as a feature of the tenth annual Chicagoland Music festival on Saturday, Aug. 19, sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

Everyone can take part in the dance. Entrants need only leave their names at any of the Chicago Park district fieldhouses and then come to rehersals held at these same parks.

Needn't Be Experts.

Nobody need be an expert at the little filligree steps or knee-toe brandishings in order to enter. "Graceful walking, the merest suggestion of raising the elbows at each step and 'scuffling' the feet along goes over big," explain authorities on the barn dance.

As to costume, the more rural the more comfortable and acceptable. And on the night of the dance the participants will ride to Soldiers' field in a buckboard wagon, a tassle fringed surrey or a battered buggy.

V. K. Brown, director of recreation, says: "What has been fun for 150 years and what brought smiles to our grandfathers when the United States was in its teens, will be fun again this summer. The barn dance will add to any music festival."

Old Fashioned Tunes.

There is a strange, old fashioned flavor to the tunes that will be played by the festival symphony orchestra directed by Henry Weber. There will be "Soldier's Joy," "Devil's Dream," "The Arkansas Traveler," and the "Buffalo Yell."

And when they allemande to the right and swing partners to the left it will be funny and new to the swing band generation and cause a nostalgic lump to come to the throats of the oldtimers of the gay fiddlers' era.

General co-chairmen of the dance spectacle are Walter Roy, assistant director of recreation for the Chicago parks; Jack Higgins, music and drama technician, and R. V. Pierce, general supervisor of park district special activities.

R. U. Nelson is general chairman of dance. B. A. Todd is in charge of mobilization; Stuart Richter, music arrangements, and M. R. McLean, staging. Fred Miller is supervisor of field events for the music festival.

CECIL B. WILLIAMS, 1645 West 105th street, head of the department of English in the De Paul university college of commerce, has just edited "Nick of the Woods," a tale of Kentucky by Robert Montgomery Bird. The book is the sixth in the edited series of historically important but now inaccessible novels under the general editorship of Harry Hayden Clark, professor of English at the University of Wisconsin. These volumes have been assigned for editing to twenty American scholars throughout the country. Dr. Williams' research took him into the heart of Kentucky, the locale of the story, and to the University of Pennsylvania to examine Mr. Bird's manuscripts.

LEAVING no question as to her rank as leader of the graduating class at Visitation school, Mary Alice Sullivan, 5545 South Aberdeen street, not only earned the highest average, but she also was awarded three scholarships. Two are for four years at Mercy High school and St. Casimir's academy, and the other is a one year progressive scholarship to Loretto [Woodlawn] academy. She also received honorable mention in the nation-wide contest conducted by the Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Our Towners Emma Roth and Marion L. Bragdon, 6450 Kenwood avenue, don't have any doubt about escaping the summer heat. They will leave Seattle, Wash., Saturday with a group of the Chicago Geographic society for a tour of Alaska, which will take them as far north as the Yukon and the arctic circle. The Canadian Rockies also will be on their trail, and they will visit the San Francisco Fair before returning to the city in August.

PAUL KREUGER, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kreuger, 776 Maryland street, Gary, will really run student activities at Tulane university, New Orleans, next year. ## BOARD WILL BUY MORE LAND FOR NEW SCHOOLS

Two sites will be obtained on the southwest side by the board of education for additions and new school buildings, according to an announcement made last week by James B. McCahey, president.

The law department has been authorized to obtain the block bounded by 57th street on the north, Lafayette avenue on the east, 57th place on the south and Perry avenue on the west in order to construct an elementary school building which will relieve the overload at the Carter, Burke, and Sherwood schools. The 1939 budget carries an appropriation of $350,000 which can be used to build the school.

Also on the budget is an appropriation for $275,000 which will construct an addition to the Douglas elementary school, 33d street and Giles avenue. The law department was recently authorized to obtain the site. The school is the third largest in the city.

4500 TO PARADE OVER NEW ROUTE ON WEDNESDAY

Highway to Relieve Trafic Congestion.

Joining in the celebration marking the formal opening of 100th street between Commercial and Torrence avenues, more than 200,000 persons are expected to line decorated streets at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening to watch the parade, sponsored by the south area council of the Chicago Motor club.

Clarence J. Bohling.

Consisting of motor vehicle and foot sections with 4,500 persons participating, the parade will form at 7 o'clock on Exchange avenue between 87th and 91st streets. It will move east on 91st street to Commercial avenue and south to 100th street where the delegation from northern Indiana communities will join. Then the procession will proceed west on 100th street past the reviewing stand at Exchange avenue.

Groups in Costume.

Nationalistic groups in native costume and many floats will add color to the parade, which will be one of the most elaborate spectacles on the south side in recent years, Clarence J. Bohling, chairman of the celebration committee, said.

The new paving is an important short cut for motor trafic between Indiana and the south side, according to Ald. William A. Rowan [10th], who will be the special guest with Thomas F. Wall. It will take trafic off South Shore drive and other congested streets, distributing it over to the newly widened Jeffery avenue, Stony Island avenue, and Western avenue.

The pavement is 48 feet wide in most parts, although it narrows to 28 feet at the Calumet river bridge. Previously 100th street was impassable and used for the tracks of the surface lines and for hauling slag.

Most of the $250,000 for the project was furnished by the county with some participation by the city.

Three Cities Join.

Business, civic, and fraternal organizations, Mayor Frank Migas of East Chicago, Mayor Frank Martin of Hammond, and Mayor James McNamara of Whiting are all coöperating in the celebration. Business men of the area will decorate the streets.

A tableau depicting a Polish wedding will be one of the unusual units of the parade. A drum and bugle corps of Chinese boys will attract attention not only by the music but by the large dragon preceding it. Children from various community centers will carry grotesque heads which they make themselves. An Irish jaunting car and a Miss America on horseback will be other features.

Miss Margie Maher, 9801 Exchange avenue, selected as queen of southeastern Chicago during the popularity contest held in connection with Friday night dances by the entertainment society of St. Patrick's church, will ride in an open automobile with her court of honor. These ladies in waiting are Miss Albina Ross, Miss Loretta Hoffman, Miss Dorothy Guba, Miss Alice Boyle, Miss S[illegible] and Miss Josephine Franko.

National Groups in Parade.

Nationalistic groups which will participate include the Croatians, Mexicans, Slovenians, Greeks, Italians, Irish, and Slovaks. Among those which will be in the vehicle section of the parade are the Jugoslav American Citizens Club of South Chicago, Grace Darling Woman's club, Irish American Club of South Deering, the East Side Women's Civic club, and the East Side Chamber of Commerce. The foot parade will include the Indiana Girls' drill team; Walter Stelmaszek American Legion post, the junior drum corps of Fort Dearborn Legion post, Whiting Legion post, Liberty lodge, No. 36, Western Slavonic association; Gallistel school playground groups; Calumet park groups, and the Woodrow Wilson drill team veterans.

In addition to civic and industrial groups from the far south side and northern Indiana, city officials from Hammond, Whiting, East Chicago, Indiana Harbor, and Gary will take part. Other veterans' organizations will be represented.

Leaders in Plans.

JOBS AND THE WPA.

Yesterday at my neighbor's across the street I noticed a lot of men overturning the dirt in his curbing. I wondered what he was going to do, whether he was going to landscape or plant something or what. There were so many men and so few actually working that my curiosity was excited and finally my conclusion was WPA, and rightly.

Last year a gang of men completely ruined our corner curbings. They are rough and so deep that a car or truck in turning is likely to have an accident. On a street with no outlet the men dug up a perfectly good street and then resurfaced it, leaving it in a worse condition than originally.

All that was done across the street was the overturning of dirt in the curbing. Who owns that same curbing? The city or the property owner? Hasn't the owner some say as to what shall be done?

This morning I note the same gang of men returning. I counted twenty-two or more. They have gone to the next corner and are digging up beautiful surface turf and throwing it in a pile, leaving a dirt surface where before there was lawn. You can count seven or eight leaning on their spades all the time.

I'll say these men are simply going around creating ruin and havoc as last year and not really earning a good half day's pay.

I just wish the city jobholders who control this would just stand and watch for just one hour and see what sins are committed in the name of WPA and jobs.

I wish they'd get out of my neighborhood.

How long, O, how much longer, can a suffering public stand for this? How long will an overburdened taxpayer sweat at his own job to pay for this? Is there absolutely no redress? Can't something be done?

MABEL B.

REWARD FOR A GOOD TURN.

On a recent night the wife [a school teacher] of the director of one of our south side parks, solicited the help of three boys, claiming her purse had been snatched. The boys are of excellent character and were born and raised in the neighborhood of the park.

With the help of our married teacher, they looked around trying to locate the culprits. When they reached the entrance to the park a Ford coupe was pulling out in a great rush of speed. The boys, assuming the purse snatchers were making a getaway in this car, jumped into their car in pursuit. At 53d and Princeton they were stopped by a Stockyards police squad car. There they were searched and one of the boys was slapped in the face by a police officer three times. From there they were taken to the Stockyards station after an hour's wait for the patrol.

Our married teacher was notified, came to the station, and allowed the questioning to go on and on before admitting that these were the boys who tried to help her.

I am sure there would be fewer purses snatched if all married women who work and have husbands holding jobs with good salaries were laid off. Too, when our police officers learn to beat and slap the real offenders we will get some place.

Fascism! Communism! It is on the way because of just such conditions as these.

I. S.

EASY GOING POLICEMEN.

Our Jackson park police are just a bunch of easy going, well meaning Irishmen who evidently can't read plain, simple English. The other evening I saw one of them pass a man and a woman with a setter on a leash on the Wooded Island without a word of reproof or caution, in spite of the fact that expensive enameled metal signs at the entrance strictly forbid dogs and bicycles on the island. A little later, a youth on a bicycle whizzed by him so fast he stood in a daze, forgetting all about his whistle or being too feeble to lift it and blow it. And the squad cars—well, the cushions are pretty easy, and the fellows have just got to know how the Cubs or Sox are doing.

HOLES IN THE STREETS.

A few weeks ago the city water department was out here on State street and tore up a big hole in a perfectly good street. For what reason I do not know, neither do I care. But it certainly is a shame that you have to sit in the house and listen to all the cars and trucks hit this hole. Besides, our sleep is disturbed most nights, and I expect some car or truck to fall apart some night. Why these holes are not patched up again is beyond me. I certainly would appreciate having something done about this as it is too near our home and very annoying.

MRS. ERIC WENNERBERG.

MASQUER PLAY GROUP TO START SUMMER ACTIVITY

Although the Masquer Players plan to close the doors of their Studio theater, 7042 Wentworth avenue, this month, activities will continue throughout the summer, with the home of the director, Howard Rooney, 430 West 66th street, as headquarters. Southwest residents wishing to take part in either stage or radio shows may communicate with Mr. Rooney at that address.

In August Mr. Rooney's children's group, the Hop-o'-Thumb Players, will accompany their director to a resort in Michigan for special theater classes. Registrations for the session will be taken until the end of this month and will be open to children between the ages of 7 and 14.

RESIDENTS HAIL QUIZ ON BALLOT IN 12TH CIRCUIT

Grand Jury Will Inquire Into Fraud Charges.

Residents of Joliet and other Will county towns expressed gratification last week over the news that a grand jury will investigate charges of widespread vote frauds in the 12th circuit judicial election of June 5.

Opponents of former Judge Edwin L. Wilson, including both Democrats and Republicans [Wilson is a Democrat], charged that floaters and repeaters were imported from the Chicago area to cast illegal ballots for Wilson and his ticket. Wilson ran a poor fourth in a field of eleven, carrying Will county but losing Kankakee and Iroquois counties to the three successful Republicans.

At the request of State's Attorney James E. Burke of Will county, Judge James M. Bartley, the Will county member of the victorious trio, ordered that a grand jury meet July 3 to look into the vote fraud charges. Burke promised a full inquiry into the charges, with vigorous prosecution of any one whom the grand jury might indict.

Business Men Approve.

Warmest approbation of the grand jury call came from Joliet business men, who have long held that any alliance between the judiciary and the underworld, however indirect, is injurious to them and their city.

These business men are urging that the grand jury be instructed to inquire into a possible connection between the alleged gambling frauds and the injunction issued by Judge Wilson in 1936 that permitted slot machines to run unchecked in Will county for a year. This injunction led to a demand in the state legislature that Judge Wilson be impeached.

A. F. Schupp, chairman of the Will county Republican central committee, has announced his party workers reported that gamblers operating in Joliet, some of whom profited by the slot machine injunction, had imported many of the floaters in the June 5 election.

Twelve Were Arrested.

Although twelve men were arrested at the polls on election day, ten of them giving Chicago as their address, Schupp declared that only the surface of the election fraud matter has been scratched.

"Of course gambling hurts our business by diverting to racketeers money that might otherwise be spent with us," one merchant said. "But most of us feel that even a worse result is the contempt for law that protected gambling engenders. Many of us, moreover, are parents of growing sons and daughters who may fall prey to the gambling habit if it is not curbed."

GIRLS OF SOUTH AREA READY FOR SUMMER CAMPS

Season of Outdoor Life Opens Tomorrow.

The American girl will never run out of ways to be a pioneer. During the winter she may dress in a furry robe and prop herself up on a fluffy bed to study her history, but when summer comes she is eager for sackcloth slacks and the simple comforts of a camp cottage.

Hundreds of south and southwest side girls will take to old trails with a new enthusiasm this summer at Camp Nawakwa, the middle western Camp Fire Girls' summer home at South Haven, Mich. The first contingent of campers will begin their stay tomorrow.

Other local girls, affiliated with the Girl Scouts, will camp this season either at Juniper Knoll near Elkhorn, Wis., or Timber Trail, located in the heart of the legendary Hiawatha national forest on Michigan's upper peninsula. Timber Trail is open to high school, college, and working girls.

Theme for Activities.

Returning to a pattern of life now preserved in historical museums, the Camp Fire Girls will adopt the theme "Americana" for their summer activities. The feeling of the early days in our country will be created by work done in the handicraft department, where craft projects will follow early American weaving, pottery, leather work, and knitting and other homey arts.

The use of natural materials will be stressed and the nature program at the camp will again deal with the conservation of natural resources by the individual.

Old fashioned dances, folk songs, and study are a few of the activities for evening programs. In addition there will be dramatics, journalism, archery, horseback riding, swimming, and canoeing. Mrs. William T. Gable, executive and secretary for the Chicago Council of Camp Fire Girls, has announced that the camp will continue until Sept. 3.

At Camp Nawakwa.

Learning Handicraft Early

Some day the wife of young Walter Hartwig won't have to fix things around her house with a hairpin and little Beverly Zwart's husband won't have to spend his Sunday afternoon painting the woodwork. Girls and boys of the Englewood Y. M. C. A. are learning to handle tools and brushes early in the game. At the Tinker Ted school, which will open for the summer tomorrow, they will don overalls and aprons and learn about sewing, carving, painting, and making useful articles in wood for the home and garden. Instructions are conducted under a vocational education plan and the students hold important positions as shop foreman, tool clerk, supply custodian, paint foreman, and sales manager. Earl Hildebrand is the instructor.

THERE'S PLENTY OF WORK BEHIND FOREST BEAUTY

Maintenance Crew Has Multitude of Tasks.

BY PAUL HEALY.

Cook county's forest preserves—paradise for hikers, cyclists, horseback riders and picnickers and scene of free twilight choral concerts during summer Sunday afternoons—do not just happen to be that way. The answer to how 34,000 acres are maintained with the care that a small home owner gives his front lawn lies in a huddle of brick and frame warehouses on First street south of Roosevelt road in Maywood.

In and about the warehouses are 250 tractors, trucks and machines especially designed for cutting grass, plowing ground for reseeding, mixing concrete and asphalt, spraying, crushing rock, hauling materials, moving logs and feeding sick trees. To operate all this Roberts Mann, superintendent of maintainance for the forest preserve district, has 180 enthusiastic workers.

A Resourceful Crew.

Most of the machines and other materials and devices were not purchased, nor were they received as gifts. They were made by the men themselves in the blacksmith shop and the carpenter shop, invented by men who have developed interest and pride in their work. Without this resourceful spirit evident throughout the ranks of his staff, according to Mr. Mann, the preserves would include many more hazards and less comforts than are found in them today.

The cardinal sin in the maintenance brigade is waste. Practically nothing is ever thrown away and left-overs discarded by others are often found workable. As long as there are junk yards and men who like to use their ingenuity, a lack of ready money will not prevent them from improving the country's streams and woodlands for lovers of the outdoors year after year.

For example, take the vehicle made by them to nurse sick trees. The chassis was the rear end of a wartime government truck; the 300 gallon tank was taken from a fire truck torn down and rebuilt for other purposes; the gasoline motor was the power plant for a well in Palos Hills; the housing was made from sheets of galvanized metal salvaged from dumps; and the gun for shooting fertilizer into the ground was made from a discarded army rifle barrel.

Has Aid of CCC.

Mr. Mann's staff consists of 30 men hired by the forest preserves and 150 employed by the WPA. Their work also has been immeasurably complemented by the CCC camp in the Skokie valley, the largest in the United States.

"The enthusiasm of these men—whether they be WPA workers, CCC boys, or ordinary laborers—has been inspirational," he says. "We love our jobs because we're doing something with our hands, something constructive, something that has a purpose. To me my job's a hobby, a livelihood and a year around vacation. As George Sauers, our general superintendent, says, a good forest preserve man must be a fanatic who is fanatical in his love of the land unspoiled."

Mr. Mann himself is responsible for much of the spirit and self-sufficiency evident in his men. A tanned, moustached figure in boots and whipcord breeches, he attributes his frugal nature and love of the land to his French Huguenot and Bavarian ancestors. He was graduated from Cornell university in 1913 with a degree in civil engineering and during the war commanded the 307th engineer train. After the war he enriched his background by farming for three years and surveying and building roads for the state of Illinois for five years before he came to the forest preserve district.

Luncheon Hostess

Mrs. Arthur F. Ochtman, 10156 Oakley avenue, will be hostess to the young women's auxiliary of the Arche club at a dessert bridge luncheon Wednesday afternoon in her home. The auxiliary is a newly organized junior unit in the 2d district of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs.

CHURCHVACATION SCHOOLS DUE TO ATTRACT 50,000

Leaders Study Up for Teaching Tasks.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

At least 50,000 Chicago youngsters are going back to school this week. But they will attend classes at nearby churches. The daily vacation religious schools, conducted by 250 churches under church federation auspices, have been growing year by year since their beginning more than a decade ago.

The Rev. Emerson O. Bradshaw.

Responsible for this year's growth is the Rev. Emerson O. Bradshaw, executive of the federation's religious education department, which functions under the education commission led by the Rev. Dr. Albert Buckner Coe of the First Congregational church, Oak Park.

Scope of Lessons.

This training of the vacation school teachers has included lessons in program planning, resource materials, arts and crafts, worship, story telling and dramatics, recreational activities; in short, every possible activity that could attract youngsters off the streets and away from mischief.

The Rev. Mr. Bradshaw, whose leadership in Chicago is attracting the attention of church education experts, explained that vacation schools furnish one of the best chances of the year for churches to influence the culture of youth.

"The vacation period is free of competition and the church may claim the time of the children without intruding on other youthful interests or overtaxing the children," said the Rev. Mr. Bradshaw. "And then, it is playtime, when the recreational atmosphere is most favorable for learning wholesome things. The vacation school also maintains what is termed the play attitude throughout; it has in fact practically revived the art of story telling in the church."

Aids Card Party

Miss Mary Ellen O'Malley, 2668 East 74th street, is president of the auxiliary of Burke-O'Malley post of the American Legion, which will sponsor a card party tomorrow night in St. Kevin's hall, 10501 Torrence avenue. # EXPECT RECORD ATTENDANCE FOR SUMMER STUDY

Prospects of a record summer school attendance in Chicago this year were seen last week as plans were completed for the opening of five high and six elementary schools on the south and southwest sides tomorrow.

Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of schools, said plans have been made for a 10 per cent increase over last year's enrollment. This estimate is based on a rise in employment that makes new private funds available for educational purposes and a growing realization of the benefits of summer school even for superior pupils, the superintendent said.

High school tuition fees are $12 for the first major subjects, such as history, mathematics, or language; $8 for the second major, and $6 for each minor subject. The elementary tuition rate is $10 per pupil.

The eleven south and southwest side schools offering summer work, their addresses, and their principals for the short term are:

Englewood High, 6201 Stewart avenue, John L. O'Brien, principal.

Hirsch High, 7740 Ingleside avenue, Moses Maier, principal.

Lindblom High, 6130 South Wolcott avenue, Joseph Connelly, principal.

Morgan Park High, 1744 Pryor avenue, Louis Brook, principal.

Tilden High, 4747 Union avenue, Harry McKinsie, principal.

Burke elementary, 5356 South Park avenue, M. Bousfield, principal.

Douglas elementary, 3200 Calumet avenue, Adelaide Lynch, principal.

Kozminski elementary, 936 East 54th street, Mary Hanlon, principal.

Lewis-Champlin elementary, 3200 West Englewood avenue, Anna Jordan, principal.

Phil Sheridan elementary, 9035 Escanaba avenue, Howard Smith, principal.

Van Vlissingen elementary, 137 West 108th place, Isabel Annan, principal.

NEW METHODIST CHURCH RISING IN MT. GREENWOOD

In keeping with the growth of Mount Greenwood, the "Little Brown church" of the Methodist congregation in the community will be replaced by a modern $25,000 building. Work has been started on the church at 110th street and St. Louis avenue and will be completed in the fall.

According to the Rev. Harold L. Brett, pastor, the new church will be of brick and stone with a corner tower. Gothic windows will face St. Louis avenue in the front and the building will have a large sanctuary for public worship. In the basement will be an assembly room suitable for recreational activities such as dramas, concerts, and organization meetings. Classrooms for religious education will be built off the assembly hall. R. W. Stott of Evergreen Park is the architect.

The Rev. Mr. Brett, who was appointed to serve both Worth and Mount Greenwood in 1937, has been assisted in the project by a building committee which includes Clyde Hayden, William Schroeder, Louis Hann, David Smith, Kenneth Davis, Henry Hirons, and Louis Tressler.

Mrs. Mary Warfield, 315 West 24th place, recently announced the engagement of her daughter, Loretta, to Sam Palmisano Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Palmisano, 328 West 24th place.

PUBLIC DEMANDS STARS PLAY PART OFF THE AIR, TOO

Find It Hard to Stay in Character.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Stay in character—even after you get off the air!

That is the command of the public to radio performers. Most radio actors want to be themselves when they get out of the studio. But unless they already appear as themselves on the radio an admiring public won't permit them. When they are encountered in person the listening public expects radio stars to look and live the rôles they have created in the nation's loudspeakers.

For most of them it is a hard thing to bear. But they put up with it as one of the prices that must be paid for being in the spotlight.

Gracie Allen is, of course, expected to be a zany whenever she appears in public. In shops attendants expect her to make daffy remarks. She doesn't always live up to these anticipations.

Kay Kayser an Exception.

Kay Kyser portrays a rôle on the air which is much like his real personality. He is just about as effervescent and funny when appearing among his friends as he is on the bandstand.

Paul Whiteman's personality is even more incisive when among friends and associates than on the air.

Bess Flynn [Mother Moynihan] is so accustomed to portraying her radio rôle that she will even answer to the name of Moynihan in public places. That's true for the entire cast of "Painted Dreams." They have been playing the rôles for almost a decade and really live the parts.

Case of Lum and Abner.

Chet Lauck and Norris Goff don't mind going into their Lum and Abner act in public. As individuals they aren't much like the rural lads they portray. Goff's voice and manner resemble that of the character Dick Huddleston a little. Their natural voices are like neither Lum nor Abner.

There may have been a time when Charlie Correll and Freeman Gosden enjoyed jumping up at night clubs and playing Amos and Andy. Those days have long since passed. Among friends they like to be just themselves.

Jack Benny, outside of the studios, does not like to play the part of Jack Benny on the air. The rôle of a chap who takes a lot of abuse and gets the worst of every situation doesn't suit him at all. However, Jack seldom gets very far from thinking about his radio show and his movie activities. A celebration like Waukegan is holding in salute to him this week-end is really a delight to him.

Allen Shuns the Public.

Fred Allen apears much the same off stage as on. His radio characterization reflects his real personality to an extent. But Allen, more than any radio performer we know, eschews contact with people he doesn't know. When he goes east or west it is difficult to learn the details of how or when he will be passing through Chicago. He shuns contact with strangers, but when they are pressed upon him he is always nice to them.

In summer when he takes a vacation he hides out in the Maine woods and goes to pains to keep his whereabouts a secret. He rarely appears even at the theater and almost never is seen at a night club or café. Between his first broadcast and his rebroadcast for the west coast he may be found in a little frequented grill near Radio City. But there won't be a dozen persons who know he is there.

Edward G. Robinson, the tough guy of the movies and the iron-fisted, eagle-eyed, go-getting newspaper man of Big Town on the air, is a mild mannered, quiet and gentle chap at parties or in cafés.

Grouch Not Groucho in Public.

No one dislikes the rôle he portrays in pictures and radio more than Groucho Marx. It is all very distasteful to him. When he hasn't been performing for awhile he can barely bear the thought of going back to it.

That is true, too, of Joe Penner. Penner's sense of theatrical values prompted him to create his radio personality. But Joe is a sensitive person, and he can't do his act off the stage or out of the studio.

Kate Smith avoids appearances in public because she doesn't look or reflect the rôle she essays on the air. She likes to hide out at Lake Placid, N. Y. She never goes to night clubs unless she is there professionally.

There are a lot of others like her.

Bing's Gal Friday

Bing Crosby's new singing discovery, Pat Friday, with Bandmaster John Scott Trotter. Patricia is a 17 year old Los Angeles co-ed. She is appearing with Bob Burns while Crosby vacations.

On Sunday Date

Frances Comstock, singing star of the musical revue "One for the Money," will make a guest appearance on "Your Sunday Date" on W-G-N from 8 to 8:30 tonight. [Vandamm Studio.]

COUPERIN SUITE TO BE PLAYED ON SYMPHONY HOUR

Originally scheduled selections to be played are Mandel's Oboe Concerto, with Mitchell Miller as soloist; "Les Eloides," by Franck, and the "Reformation" Symphony, No. 5, in D [opus 107], of Mendelssohn.

RADIO FLYING DOCTOR SERVICE TO BE EXPANDED

System of Great Aid in Australian Bush.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SYDNEY, Australia.—The proposal to erect a radio station at Alice Springs, almost in the exact center of the continent, represents another advance in the Australian flying doctor project.

The Australian Aerial Medical service already maintains five radio stations in the "out back" country. This one would be the sixth. These stations are hooked up with 135 "transceivers," in the "back country" each of which is licensed as a telegraph office. The stations are at Wyndham in the far north; Port Hedland in the northwest; Kalgoorlie in the Southwest; Cloncurry in the northeast and Broken Hill in the southeast.

How System Works.

This back country radio—medical—flying service operates in this fashion:

Short wave radio transmitters have been specially adapted for use in the bush country. Small high tension generators driven by bicycle pedals produce the power for the transmitters. This system of providing power was developed because storage batteries containing acid are not easily maintained in the hinterland. Pedal powered transmitters do not require much overhaul to keep them in working order.

These sets can be used for sending message upward of 200 miles. They enable a farmer to contact a neighbor, or a flying doctor who may be located at same distance.

Morse Code Is Used.

Where atmospheric conditions demand it, Morse code is used instead of a radiophone. The handicap of handling code by an unskilled operator is overcome through a keyboard somewhat resembling a typewriter on which a message may be pounded out and sent in code.

Calls for medical aid are relayed to the Aerial Medical service, which is government subsidized. Then a physician is dispatched by plane into the hinterland to provide relief.

These medical birdmen have a different routine from those of fashionable urban physicians. In one day one of the flying doctors stationed at Port Hedland did his rounds at a local hospital; performed several operations, visited patients and then flew 260 miles in his ambulance, treating another fifteen patients. He brought back two for further attention at the hospital.

One of the flying ambulances is operated by a woman. She operates from the Cloncurry base.

Valuable Time Saved.

In emergencies much valuable time is saved through this service. In a typical case it took native runners twenty-three hours to cover a distance of fifty miles to get medical aid. They had to swim rivers infested with crocodiles. After the radio flying service was instituted at this point a half hour was required to bring a plane with a physician.

Dr. Clyde Fenton, first flying doctor and still the best known, has a record of over a decade. Dr. K. St. Vincent Welch has flown as many as 250,000 miles a year to care for several hundred patients.

The federal council of the service receives $25,000 a year from the Australian government, another $16,000 from state governments and large sums from private organizations and individuals.

Webster's "Bunker Hill" Speech to Be Recreated

Daniel Webster's address at the laying of the corner stone of the Bunker Hill monument on June 17, 1825, will be re-created on the W-G-N program Gems of American Eloquence at 9:30 p. m. next Friday. In addition to the address the background of the occasion will be presented in a dramatic episode. Reese Taylor will take the part of Webster.

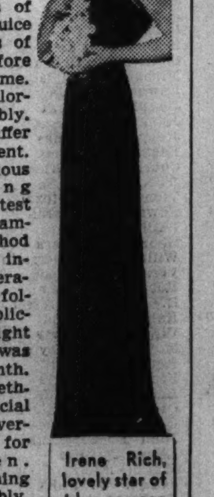
Lose Weight Safely

IF you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—First . . . eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second . . mix ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strenuous exercises or taking drugs. Yet!—in a test conducted by Dr. Damrau with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds was registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating; and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.



Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16.

If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add ¼ water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

LOUNGING ROOM OCCUPIES SPACE ONCE A GARAGE

Fireplace, Paneled Walls Add to Appearance.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

This is what has happened in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Cain, 2200 Pratt boulevard. The space which started life as an attached garage is today a finely planned all purpose room, its change due in great measure to the gift for "transforming" which expert modernizers possess.

It is the sort of room a great many men like; modern treatment in a conservative vein, deep soft chairs, real fireplace, built-in cases for books, metal smoking sets, a corner set apart for evening snacks and cooling drinks on summer nights, and streamlined floors and walls.

For some time we have seen striking instances of attic and cellar spaces changed into spots of inviting comfort and charm. Changing the purpose of a garage, however, is not seen so often.

Wood Paneled Walls.

In this instance the walls are wood paneled, together with use of new glass block, Alternate horizontal strips of genuine cabinet veneers of walnut and avodire are firmly fabricated to a backing of quarter inch thick cane fiber board.

The ceiling treatment is likewise attractive. It is made of the same cane fiber material in ivory shade, without the veneer finish, and accentuates the modern wall treatment through the use of exposed joints to form an important part of the design. This key joint permits attractive squares and rectangles to be fitted around a center sand blasted unit. A new and not expensive method of ceiling treatment, since the material includes at one and the same time a surface decoration as well as insulation. It is, moreover, sound absorbing and noise quieting.

The room has been wisely planned, with a view to complete harmony of the whole. That is the aim of wise modernization of one room or an entire house: To consider its shape, its purpose, its size and give attention to small details as well as to large ones.

Increases Home Value.

Doing with a house what you like and helping yourself to new comforts and conveniences is one of the immensely satisfying features of modernization. Add to that the fact that you are increasing the monetary value of your home, adding to its worth as an investment, and you have the reason for the large volume of modernization work going on all around us.

And even though you may not be in the mood for a complete transformation such as we have shown today, from garage to all purpose room, there are numerous small ways of improving a garage.

And if you are building a new, small home with an attached garage, and space must be saved, there's no reason for not taking advantage of a new trend and putting the far end of the garage to work in the shape of a laundry room, perhaps, or a workroom, or built in closet space for much used house and garden tools.

This is assuming you aren't planning on a basement. Though often the rear of a garage is brought into service to save steps. Where there's a basement, of course, there's space aplenty for utility articles and utility equipment.

Have you done some interesting piece of modernization on interior or exterior of your home in the last few months? The Tribune will be glad to consider pictures and stories of such modernization for publication. Send picture and story of same to Louise Bargelt, Chicago Tribune.

Start Contest for Queen of Irish Festival July 15

When Irish eyes are smiling on July 15 they will probably be those of the queen who will rule over the annual Festival of the Gael in Mills stadium, 4700 West Lake street. Entries will be received in the contest for the queen until July 8. The finals will take place on the evening of the festival. Mrs. Thomas J. Gibbons, 4313 Madison street, will be in charge of the entries. Southwest side daughters of Irish extraction are invited to participate.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, June 26.

A whitish substance on the stems and leaves of roses usually means mildew, a fungus disease. It can be controled by applying fine sulphur dust in the early morning to both sides of the leaves. The dust poisons the spores and prevents their being blown by the wind to other plants. It also checks the spread of the fungus threads that live outside the host plant. Mildew also attacks hollyhocks. Sulphur also will control red spider on phlox and mites on delphinium. Rose bug [rose shafers] feed on the buds and blossoms and should be hand picked and dropped into a can of water covered with kerosene. Young scale insects hatch in June and July and may be killed by spraying with nicotine sulphate and soap. The lilacs are likely to be attacked and should be sprayed in June, July and August.

Tuesday, June 27.

Continue to cultivate all beds requiring it. Perennials that grow close together and have a heavy root system should be mulched and cultivation discontinued. Mulching material may consist of decayed manure and straw, peat, grass clippings, or similar material. Water through the material. See that all parts of the yard are kept in good condition. Keep long, straggling branches trimmed back to form. Always keep insects under control. Sucking insects, such as aphids, scales, and mealybugs are controled with contact poisons and leaf eating worms with stomach poisons. Spray regularly to kill the young as fast as they appear. Remove dead leaves and destroy them.

Wednesday, June 28.

Plant sweet corn now. Fresh endive and kale will be enjoyed in fall if seed are planted at this time. Carrots, beets, beans, turnips and dandelion seed may be sown for fall use. Lettuce can be grown in midsummer if sown rather deep and the young plants protected from the sun during the middle of the day. Keep well watered. Do not cut asparagus after this month. Apply a top dressing of decayed manure to the asparagus bed. The beetles can be checked by spraying the asparagus tops with arsenate of lead.

Thursday, June 29.

Keep the newly planted shrubs, trees and other plants well watered. Leaf mold is excellent material for mulching azaleas and rhododendrons. Irises may be divided and transplanted as soon as the flowering season has passed. They require a well drained location, especially the bearded varieties. Make the divisions large enough to form clumps within a reasonable time and plant about a foot apart. Examine the plant for borers and dig them out and kill them.

Friday, June 30.

If the phlox has faded flowers, dig it out and get some new varieties. Never permit phlox to go to seed, for the seedlings do not come true from seed. Spray frequently with water to aid in keeping down red spiders. Dust with sulphur. Keep all walks edged to avoid grass growing over them. If certain branches die or twigs break over on the dogwoods it probably means there are borers at work. Cut back the twigs below the point where the borers are working and destroy them.

Saturday, July 1.

Geraniums intended for next winter's flowering should not be allowed to flower during summer. Pinch back to obtain as many stems as possible; shift when root bound, to one size larger pot. Some plants, like the aster, often have their roots attacked by root lice. To control, mulch the ground with tobacco stems, which can be obtained in bales from florist supply firms. Portulacas may yet be sown. The brilliant low growing flowers make a fine display when grown in masses, as an edging plant in the rockery, or anywhere that a low plant is wanted. It is said that a few seeds of the castor bean, when placed in the runways of moles, will drive them away. Keep plunged house plants well watered. Syringe the foliage early in the morning to keep clean of insects and dust.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT ALL THIS?
WE WERE JUST COMING OUT OF THE SERVANTS' QUARTERS WHEN WE HEARD THE COMMOTION, SIR.
LINE UP, GIRLS, I WANT TO TALK TO YOU.
DO YOU KNOW EACH ONE OF THEM, BUTLER?
NOT PERSONALLY SIR, BUT THEY'RE REGULAR MAIDS SENT US BY THE BUREAU.
TAKE OFF YOUR HATS.
AH! I THOUGHT SO! STEP OUT HERE, YOU, AND KEEP THE HANDS UP.
WITH THAT DISGUISE WIPED OFF HIS FACE, WE SEE ONE OF THE PRINCES RIGHT BEFORE US! THIS IS FRANKIE RELLIK, "WHIP" CHUTE'S PARTNER.
HE EVIDENTLY CHANGED FROM HIS PRINCE'S OUTFIT TO THE MAID'S DISGUISE, AND JOINED THE GIRLS AS THEY CAME FROM THE SERVANTS' QUARTERS.
BUT HOW DID YOU KNOW HE WAS A MAN?—YOU WERE STANDING BEHIND THEM.
WHEN A WOMAN REMOVES HER HAT, SHE USES BOTH HANDS. SEE?
FRANKIE RELLIK REMOVED HIS HAT WITH ONE HAND, LIKE THIS. NO WOMAN EVER DOES THAT.
MEANWHILE, SIX AND A HALF FLOORS DOWN, MITZI DOES HER PART—
MY EX-WIFE!
YES, WHIP, MR. TRACY SUGGESTED I OPERATE THE ELEVATOR HERE TONIGHT. I'VE STOPPED THE CAR BETWEEN FLOORS AND TOSSED THE SWITCH KEY AND STARTER HANDLE DOWN THE SHAFT. SO—WE'LL JUST WAIT.

AXEL ESCAPED, BUT IN A HAIL OF BULLETS THAT CUT HIS GAS LINE AND GUARANTEED HIS PLANE'S QUICK DESTRUCTION--- AT THE HACIENDA, THE BATTLE WAS SHARP AND BLOODY, WITH QUARTER ASKED, PERHAPS, BUT NOT GIVEN--- WHILE IN THE DUNGEON---
YES - A LITTLE LIGHT AND AIR COME THROUGH THE SHAFTS IN THE TWENTY-FOOT THICK WALL- BUT NOTHING ELSE- AND NOTHING AT ALL GOES OUT THERE-
BUT IF WE ALL HOLLERED TOGETHER- AND IF PUNJAB AND TH' REST O' OUR FRIENDS ARE UP ABOVE---
THEY COULD NOT HEAR, NO MATTER HOW LOUDLY WE CALLED, LITTLE ONE- IT IS BETTER WE EXPEND OUR BREATH IN PRAYER-
BUT WHY COULDN'T WE MAKE OURSELVES HEARD?
BECAUSE, ANNIE, THOSE WHO CONSTRUCTED THIS CHAMBER SO LONG AGO PLANNED IT SO THAT THE SCREAMS OF THE TORTURED WOULD BE DROWNED OUT BY THE ROARING WATERFALL OUTSIDE THIS WALL-
NOT ONE TRACE OF SAHIB WARBUCKS OR OF THE LITTLE PRINCESS, YET A DOZEN TIMES HAVE WE SEARCHED THE HACIENDA-
IT IS A STRANGE WILD PLACE---SEE, FAR BELOW---THE ROARING TORRENT THAT PASSES BY THE FOUNDATIONS OF THIS PLACE-
I FEAR WE MUST ADMIT THEY ARE NOT HERE---
LOOK OUT!
AR-R-R--NOW I, MIGUEL, HAVE YOU ALL-
HOW DID WE MISS HIM?
MAYBE WE HAVEN'T BEEN AS THOROUGH AS WE THOUGHT-
TAK! TAK! TAK!

HE TOOK THE BULLET THAT WAS MEANT FOR ME- I SHALL NOT FORGET THAT-HE IS A WORTHY MEMBER OF OUR BAND- FORTUNATELY HIS WOUND IS BUT SLIGHT-

WHAT? SANDY? OH, HE'S BEEN SNIFFING EVERY INCH OF THE HACIENDA---

YES- BUT SEE- HE HAS FOUND A TRACE--BY THAT WALL- HE TRIES TO TELL US SOMETHING-
IT IS SO---AND LOOK---IN THE DUST---TRACKS--- AS IF IN THAT WALL THERE WERE A DOOR---

I SAY, DO YOU KNOW THAT EXOTIC CREATURE WITH THE ORIENTAL EYES?
I HEARD YOUNG CRISPIN CALL HER MISS NOGARD!
MY WORD, MISS NOGARD, I CANNOT UNDERSTAND WHY I HAVE NOT SEEN YOU ABOUT IN HONGKONG!
I HAVE BEEN LIVING IN RETIREMENT TO PROTECT MY HEALTH, MR. CRISPIN!
I DO HOPE YOU WILL HONOR US WITH YOUR COMPANY MORE OFTEN IN FUTURE!
THANK YOU! I THINK YOU WILL BE QUITE AWARE OF ME, MR. CRISPIN! ... I SEE AN OLD ACQUAINTANCE ACROSS THE ROOM— WILL YOU TAKE ME TO SPEAK WITH HIM?
OH, YOU KNOW BARON DE PLEXUS?
BUT INDEED! GOOD EVENING, BARON! I BELIEVE THIS NEXT IS THE DANCE I PROMISED YOU!
TH' DRA--
OH, AH, YES, SO IT IS! PARDON US, CRISPIN?
OH, TERRY, LOOK! YOUR NICE FRIEND MISS NOGARD IS DANCIN' WITH THAT OL' BARON DE PLEXUS!
YEAH... AN' THE BARON DOESN'T SEEM TOO HAPPY ABOUT IT!
I WONDER IF---
THE SUAVE BARON APPEARS ILL AT EASE! IS THE EVENING PERHAPS A TRIFLE WARM?
WHY, YES! IT IS STIFLING HERE! I THOUGHT YOU HAD RETURNED TO YOUR ARMY AFTER OUR BUSINESS WAS CLOSED!
NO! AFTER I PAID YOU FOR THE ARMS AND SUPPLIES I SUDDENLY FOUND THAT INVADER SPIES HAD BEEN INFORMED OF MY PRESENCE IN HONGKONG! MOST INCONVENIENT!
HOW UNFORTUNATE! BUT, YOU HAVE EVADED THEM...
... YOU ARE SURPRISED TO LEARN! DEALING IN ARMS AND SUPPLIES WITH BOTH SIDES, AS YOU DO, YOU ARE WELL AWARE OF THE INVADER'S EFFICIENT SPY SYSTEM, AREN'T YOU, BARON?
WHY-AH-YES!
.... AND YOU ALSO KNOW THAT TO ELIMINATE TIRESOME EVIDENCE IN THE PERSON OF A PAID UP CHINESE CUSTOMER— YOU NEED BUT TO MENTION THAT PERSON'S PRESENCE IN NEUTRAL HONGKONG— AND THE INVADER SPIES WILL DO THE ELIMINATING!
I—AH— PROMISED TO PLAY BRIDGE WITH SOME FRIENDS—IF YOU WILL EXCUSE ME...
SO YOU MAY TELEPHONE THOSE SAME SPIES THAT THE DRAGON LADY MAY BE FOUND AT THIS FUNCTION? OH, BUT NO, MY DEAR BARON! I HAVE OTHER PLANS FOR YOU!
YOU'RE BLUFFING! YOU'RE WANTED BY THE BRITISH FOR A THOUSAND CRIMES! YOU WOULDN'T DARE RISK EXPOSURE BY CREATING A SCENE HERE!
6-25
THERE WILL BE NO SCENE! THE BARON WILL POUR TWO GLASSES OF PUNCH! THIS VIAL OF STRYCHNINE GOES INTO HIS! IF HE REFUSES TO DRINK HE WILL BE SHOT—AND THE DRAGON LADY WILL TAKE THE POISON!

Are You Sure You Never Offend?

● It's a well-known fact that the worst "B.O." offenders seldom know they are guilty. Others notice it right away, of course; but the offender may be blissfully unaware that "B.O." comes between him and everyone he meets. That's the dangerous thing about "B.O."!

Millions everywhere say, "It pays to play safe with Lifebuoy!" Lifebuoy in the daily bath stops "B.O."—assures personal freshness—guards against the risk of offending. Lifebuoy contains an exclusive ingredient not found in any other popular toilet soap.

With hot, sweltering weather ahead, it will be easier than ever to offend. Be safe—be confident—be sure of yourself—use Lifebuoy in your daily bath! So refreshing. And its mild, gentle lather is grand for the complexion, too. Try it—you'll enjoy it!

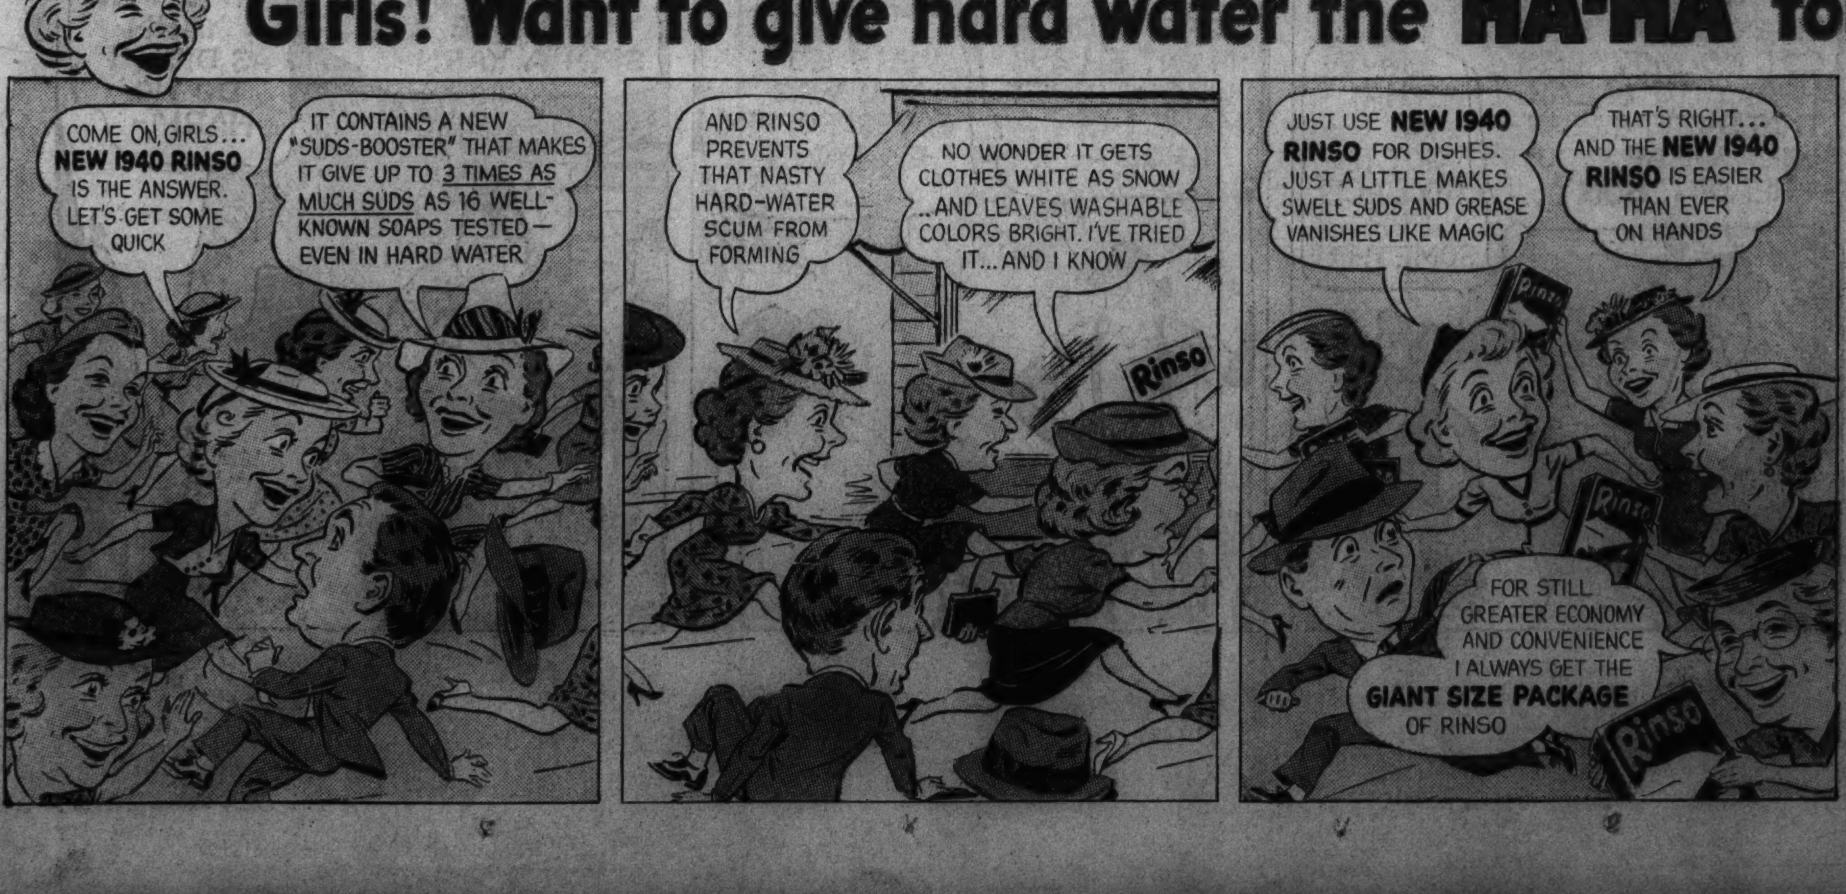
Girls! Want to give hard water the "HA-HA" tomorrow morning?



COME ON, GIRLS... NEW 1940 RINSO IS THE ANSWER. LET'S GET SOME QUICK
IT CONTAINS A NEW "SUDS-BOOSTER" THAT MAKES IT GIVE UP TO 3 TIMES AS MUCH SUDS AS 16 WELL-KNOWN SOAPS TESTED— EVEN IN HARD WATER AND RINSO PREVENTS THAT NASTY HARD-WATER SCUM FROM FORMING NO WONDER IT GETS CLOTHES WHITE AS SNOW ..AND LEAVES WASHABLE COLORS BRIGHT. I'VE TRIED IT... AND I KNOW
Rinso
JUST USE NEW 1940 RINSO FOR DISHES. JUST A LITTLE MAKES SWELL SUDS AND GREASE VANISHES LIKE MAGIC
THAT'S RIGHT... AND THE NEW 1940 RINSO IS EASIER THAN EVER ON HANDS
FOR STILL GREATER ECONOMY AND CONVENIENCE I ALWAYS GET THE GIANT SIZE PACKAGE OF RINSO
Rinso

Rinso

Millions get whiter, brighter washes safely

...thanks to new "suds-booster"

● The remarkable New 1940 Rinso was tested against 16 well-known soaps. Here's what happened: Cup for cup, the New Rinso gave up to 3 times as much suds, even in hardest water. Clothes came as much as ten shades whiter. Rinso dissolves almost at the touch of water . . . and prevents hard-water scum from forming. In tub washing, Rinso soaks clothes clean without hard scrubbing or boiling; saves the clothes—saves you! And if you own a washer, just remember this: Rinso is the only soap recommended by the makers of 33 famous washers. Switch to the New Richer Rinso. See how spotlessly clean even dirtiest clothes come from tub or machine.

HOW TO JUDGE A DIAMOND

TRUE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY.

"Claims" don't make a diamond. There are ee important things that do make diamond lue, however: Color Cut-Make and Perfecn. The meaning of each is explained below.

COLOR—Is the most important fact to emember when buying a diamond. Soalled "fine color" may mean a diamond f yellow or brownish tinge and therefore of low value. A Blue White stone n the other hand is highly prized and uch diamonds are of greatest value.

CUT AND BRILLIANCY—A properly ade modern cut stone is cut to give reatest of brilliancy or refraction. It is nown as the American Cut. The other ut is known as the European Cut and s an older and less desirable style. Both ave a total of 58 facets but the European Cut lacks the fiery brilliancy and is uch lower in value.

PERFECTION—"Perfect" is probably he most abused word applied to a diaond as a diamond of Fine Blue-White olor, modern in cut and brilliancy with small flaw is much more valuable than "perfect" or flawless stone that is ellow or off color.

EEP ALL THESE POINTS IN MIND HEN YOU ARE BUYING A DIAMOND

Day by Day on the Farm

By BOB BECKER

Pheasant Rearing Time.

June 24, 1939.

IT'S pheasant rearing time on Chicagoland farms. This was evidenced early last week by two incidents relating to these beautiful and valuable game birds occurring on THE TRIBUNE'S Du Page county farm. Similar happenings are being noted by hundreds of middle western farmers and outdoor fans.

The boys on the farm believe the hen pheasant which is raising a family in one of the hay fields is about the pluckiest bird in the county. She demonstrated how she could protect her offsprings the other day when a big German shepherd dog—the pet of one of the farm families—invaded the field where she was taking care of her chicks. The dog outweighs the pheasant by about fifty pounds, but that didn't prevent the battling hen from attacking the intruder.

Feminine Fury Strikes.

When Rusty, the dog, trotted innocently into the hay field after one of the men he didn't know he was heading for a fight. But when he got close to Mrs. Ringneck's chicks he soon realized he was facing real feminine fury. The pheasant flew right at Rusty's nose, pecked him, clawed him, and in general made his life miserable until he ran thirty yards away from the spot where the chicks were waiting for their mama.

In another section of the farm a White Rock hen hatched out a family of five pheasant chicks. She had been sitting on her nest of ringneck eggs in a tiny hatching coop since May 24, so she undoubtedly is glad her chicks are out so she can lead them through the grass in search of food. The chicks are provided with a grain mash in their coop, and it didn't take them long to learn that the little wooden tray contained something good to eat.

This week other hens are scheduled to produce game bird families, including Bob White quail and Chukar and Hungarian partridges. More partridges and quail will arrive during July. All the game birds hatched on the farm under domesticated hens are protected until they are old enough to care for themselves. Then they are released in the farm woods to wage war against insects and weed seeds.

A Hike Through the Woods.

When we hiked through the east woods of the Du Page county farm early in the week we found a heavy growth of sweet flag standing in the bed of the winding creek. Sweet flag is somewhat similar to wild iris.

Dr. George Fuller, professor emeritus of ecology at the University of Chicago, who accompanied us on this walk, was reminded of boyhood days in Canada when he saw this familiar plant. He remembers when his grandmother used to pull sweet flag from a stream bed when any of the children in the family complained of a stomache ache. The root is cleaned, cut into small pieces, and boiled in sugar to which a small amount of water had been added. When the bitter root was coated with sugar the ailing child ate it to relieve the stomache ache.

Many wildflowers and roots which hikers often overlook were medicinally valuable to our grandparents, and the sweet flag [or calamus root] was one of these aids.

REAL ESTATE LOANS, MORTGAGES.

— — — WE ARE LARGE ENOUGH — — — to place at your service our own capital, the vast resources and co-operation of Banks, Insurance Cos., and Building and Loan Ass'ns, AND, moreover, the ability, knowledge, and experience of our first rate organization.

YET WE ARE SMALL ENOUGH to devote to your mortgage problems the time, skill and personal attention of our officers—not mere clerks—which brings about an enviable close and confidential relationship between our clients and ourselves.

Don't shop around! See us immediately if you wish to buy, sell, build, repair, or refinance. We lend up to 80% of the value on homes—frame, stucco, brick—up to 30 years old; also 2 to 4 apartments, large apartment buildings, stores, garages, and factories, in good locations. 20 year FHA loans, too, at 4-4½-5% interest.

We advance funds to settle estates, taxes and liens and to redeem property. If even our top loans won't do we will see your mortgagee or bondholders committee to cut down overly large debts to present day levels.

We make no promises but we have saved many thousands of dollars for our clients, and prevented many foreclosures by skillful negotiations with mortgagee or bondholders for a cut of top heavy debts. And mind you! We were successful in almost every case we tackled. Come in! We will help you, too. Quick, able, loyal service.

The foundation of a beauty program for every woman is exquisite cleanliness. In striving to preserve her charm and daintiness, which she knows go hand in hand, she takes advantage of every feminine aid available to her. She adapts them to her individual requirements and faithfully uses them to enhance her femininity and loveliness.

Daintiness Not a Heritage: It's a Set of Habits

By ELEANOR NANGLE

SINCE the beginning of time it's been expected of women that they exercise a certain delicacy of taste to stress and enhance their femininity. It pleased them to do this, and there can be no denying that it pleased the other sex, too. Fastidiousness never has gone out of fashion, but there can be no denying that in this year of grace—or should we say gracious dressing?—"dainty" becomes the most important word in the feminine vocabulary.

The woman of today strives to look dainty and to BE dainty. Her costumes are picturesque, whimsical, and designed to emphasize her femininity. In her grooming of herself she follows a program that intensifies the effect. She strives to look and to feel as fresh as a flower.

Exquisite cleanliness is the foundation of her beauty program. She is decidedly a lady of the bath. And her bath is no ordinary garden variety cleansing with soap and water. It's a ritual of beautification and relaxation, with an added touch of luxury to fortify her spirit and satisfy her soul.

For sensitive skin the soap must be bland. In hard water districts the water must be guilefully softened. A bath brush or loofah is used to stimulate as well as to scrub. These are just the commonplace tools of her daily bath or shower. Trimmings are something else again.

Bath salts, finer than of old, are having a revival. A handful of scented crystals is the preference of some women; others like oils, especially the fine ones that "break down" instantly in hot water and make the tub a soft, perfumed sea. Some like bath preparations that foam magnificently; they like the luxurious sensation of stretching out in an ocean of perfumed bubbles. All women apparently like a perfumed bath, and all women may have one, day in and day out. The luxurious bath no longer is a joy reserved for the rich.

Depending on the schedule, the bath is taken to relax or to stimulate as well as to cleanse. The bath that soothes the nerves, best taken before going to bed, is a leisurely, warm one in which you loll for about ten minutes in quite hot water, cooling it slowly and not too much toward the end. The stimulating bath never is so hot as to be enervating, and should be topped by a cold spray or shower. The quick, bracing bath in the morning and the leisurely cleansing at night are the ideal combination for most women.

The bracing bath can be followed with a rubdown. Cologne in a favorite fragrance is a most popular choice, and the good cologne has the added advantage of possessing deodorizing qualities.

Not that cologne alone is sufficient. There can be no daintiness without the faithful use of deodorants or anti-perspirants. No other item of beauty, not even the lipstick, is as important to a woman as a preparation that neutralizes or prevents all traces of odor from the flesh. Perspiration is a perfectly natural, healthy function. The degree and type of odor it has varies with the individual. But every woman, and every man, should realize that its odor, however slight, is offensive and should and can be eliminated.

Deodorants and anti-perspirants are of many types. Experiment until you find the type that is most efficient and convenient for you. Some like creams, some liquids, and recently little pads saturated with a controling solution have had great success. In any case, the dainty woman takes no chances. She uses a deodorant as faithfully and almost as frequently as she does her toothbrush.

Preparations for use on the feet are a distinct aid to scrupulous grooming. Deodorizing powders or lotions not only eliminate the possibility of odor but are an actual aid to foot comfort.

A suave, flattering makeup, well groomed brows, and clear, sparkling eyes are important elements of daintiness, but remember that facial freshness is not a matter of complexion clarity and makeup alone. The cleanliness and luster of the hair that frames the face are just as important. The radiant face in a dingy frame presents a most imperfect picture. No woman who values daintiness fails to keep her hair exquisitely clean.

In the course of even twenty-four hours hair acquires an amazing amount of grime. The scalp throws off a certain amount of natural secretion; this, plus perspiration and the dust which none of us can escape, combines to make the hair rather frighteningly dirty.

The fastidious woman extends the grooming of her hair well beyond the weekly shampoo and wave. She brushes it daily as both a cleansing and a beautifying measure. The scalp stimulation and the polishing afforded by vigorous use of a good hair brush constitute the best health and beauty hair program yet devised.

• • •

Perfume for hair is a new-old idea. The scents used on flesh should not be used on hair, which has a natural odor of its own that often conflicts with or even changes the perfume. Perfumes created especially for use on hair neutralize the hair's odor and give it a clean, sweet scent that is a joy to the dainty woman.

And the state of her hands, like the state of her hair, is another special consideration of the exquisitely groomed woman. Here again cleanliness comes first, ornamentation second. She has the hand washing habit and the habit of using a protective cream or lotion to keep the skin smooth. Her nails are gleaming, precisely shaped jewels. She knows that chipped polish and grimy nail tips are not compatible with the pursuit of perfection.

"Daintiness" is not for sale. It's a state of being which each woman must develop for herself. Dozens of good little grooming habits are its formula!

Fashion's Hint of Bustle Now Is Real Thing

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—As predicted in these articles early this spring, the styles are moving on from the full-skirted, childish clothes of the present season. Dressmakers in Paris, who hinted a few months ago of their intention to mass all the fullness in our skirts at the back, now are out on a full platform of this new fashion. Balenciaga, Schiaparelli, Mainbocher, three big shots who signaled this fashion in their early spring shows, now go ahead with it on a bigger scale in their mid-season collections.

Other dressmakers of the first rank, such as Alix, Chanel, and Molyneux, join the "stop the crinolines" brigade in a slightly different manner. Chanel presents a group of slender evening gowns with the skirts draped spiral-like, or broken into tiers. Alix masses her skirt fullness at the front on a lot of models, being an original and going her own sweet way. Molyneux continues to be a one man pressure group in favor of the undeviatingly slim evening skirt, and Jeanne Lanvin backs him up.

• • •

The exaggerated bustle dress, that was used in the early spring to shock you into noticing that a new style was proposed, has been modified into a much more wearable and attractive kind of back-skirt fullness. Mainbocher makes skirts for both day and evening with slender front lines and the backs flared modestly by circular movement. Balenciaga gathers skirt backs or plaits them for daytime. Schiaparelli merely suggests this sort of thing by bands at the back of the skirt for daytime, but in the evening she lets the flares be marked by full godets, bows, and drapery.

Most of the big time Paris dressmakers are content to leave our skirts the same length for daytime and full length for evening. But Chanel proposed that daytime skirts be longer, and shows her dresses a good three inches longer than those we have been seeing, while for informal evening she likes ankle length skirts that are some inches shorter.

There are, in many of the Paris mid-season shows, however, plenty of full-skirted, fitted-waisted dresses and coats for the die-hards, who have to be led up to a new style like a balky horse.

• • •

One of the most exciting novelties seen in Paris for a long time is produced by Balenciaga, the daring young Spaniard, who is the talk of the town. He takes the full circular daytime skirt we've been wearing and gives it a sort of Can-Can dancer effect by lining it with shirred taffeta, encrusted with coral velvet bows, so you feel an irresistible impulse to burst into some dance steps in order to show the inside, which is just what the mannequin who presented it did.

There are some daring new colors being shown by the Paris dressmakers. Notable among them are Schiaparelli's intense sky blue, Mainbocher's aviary pink, which is the pink that the flamingo bird wears, and Molyneux's love blue, that's soft and tender and slightly mauve. Balenciaga wants us to wear parma violet as a detail and accessory shade, or coral. Schiaparelli likes orange and nasturtium yellow for details. Sweet pea pink and mauve are Chanel's new colors.

• • •

Balenciaga's newest back fullness is shown in a dinner dress made of mauve satin spangled with tiny silver stars, and the fullness breaks out at the back of the skirt below a big bow of parma violet velvet ribbon. Long gloves of parma velvet and a canteen handbag of the same flanked by velvet bows complete the striking accessories.

Back fullness is brought to daytime dresses by this house. A black silk crêpe model has a fitted waist, gathered slightly around a heart-shaped yoke at the front, and buttoned down the back. The skirt is straight at the front, and plaited softly into the waistline at the back. A tied belt of the material suggests a sash.

Chanel's new evening silhouette is presented in a dress made of delicate pastel blue silk crêpe, and the skirt is draped into a spiral and in one with a scarf that can be worn like a cape, or allowed to trail off the back. The waist is shirred at the front and very low cut.

The latest Schiaparelli dinner dress and hat are exciting. The hat, made of sheer black straw, is worn to cover the entire face in a peekaboo effect, and is trimmed with flowers and ribbons. The bodice of the dress is very long in front, and severely buttoned, while the back is just hip length and ends in a bow. The skirt is draped above the knees and full at the back only.

Patterns by Clotilde

By Clotilde.

Your life this summer will be divided between town and country, and for both spheres you will need an abundance of cool frocks, both tailored and dressy. Three patterns today are offered to help you complete your season's wardrobe.

At the left, a frock with long, slenderizing lines cherished by women with mature figures. The V neckline gives way to a fluttering jabot edged with lace, ruffling, braid, or what you will. The sleeves are puffed, and the entire frock is paneled for slenderness and flare. Cottons, linens, and wash silks make up beautifully, and plain shades are best.

Center, a demure little frock with heart shaped neckline, snugly fitted bodice, flared skirt, and short kimono sleeves. Bright prints are excellent choices, and rickrack braid or other trimming, used around neckline, sleeves, and down the front closing, should be of a color to harmonize with one in the print. Cottons, linens, and washable mixtures are inexpensive selections.

Right, a tailored frock that buttons all the way down the front. The V neckline has a soft rolled collar. The short sleeves are full and plaited with a tailored air. Tucks lend desirable fulness to the bodice, and the skirt is moderately flared. All types of summer fabrics make up well.

French Tennis Outfit Has Good American Wearability

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—I know you'll like this tennis ensemble, because it unites traditional French smartness with good old American wearability. At a fashion show devoted exclusively to sports attire, one of the highlights of the exhibit was this tennis dress and accompanying bolero. The original creates the frock in checked pique, with the jacket of white pique trimmed with matching checked revers and cuffs.

The frock itself has a square, rather high neckline in front, given a bow for finish. There are two straps in back extending to the bow-shaped décolletage. The skirt is widely flared. It's the sort of dress not even the most strenuous set on the courts can disturb. The straps will stay in place because they're styled to be firmly anchored. Pockets, if you like them, may be used on the skirt. I've designed the pattern to provide for them, although the original model didn't use them.

There is no reason on earth why the outfit, with the bolero, cannot double for informal daytime wear. No one will know that a bare, delightfully cool back is enjoying summer beneath the bolero.

There are many fabric and color combinations you can arrange. This is a good season for both white and gay colors. Concoct your own scheme.

Style No. 5300 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 8 requires 1¾ yards of 39 inch printed material and ¾ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 113 West 19th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

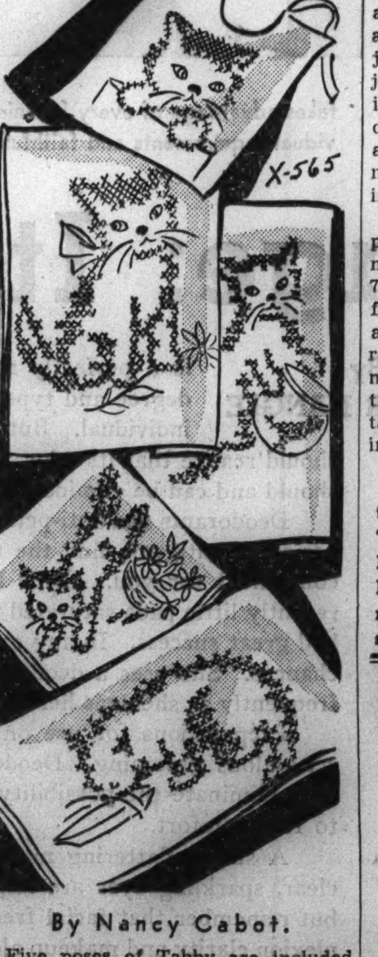
Appealing Tabby in Cross-Stitch Has Five Poses



By Nancy Cabot.

Five poses of Tabby are included in this cross-stitch group, and each figure is appealing. Tabby may be embroidered on baby's bib, used on baby's towels, as a decorative touch on a crib quilt, pillow case, or in corners of a luncheon or tray cloth.

If Vegetables Are to Appeal Preserve Color

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Keeping the color in vegetables fresh and bright is as much a factor in appetite appeal as is the proper cooking method. Peas, spinach, asparagus, and string beans, should be clear green when they are brought to the table. Cabbage should be creamy white, perhaps tinged with green. Red cabbage should be its own violet-red color, not a sick blue.

Yet how often fresh peas darken and lose their brightness in cooking. How often spinach reaches a sloppy, dull dark hue. White cabbage, more frequently than any other vegetable, is off color, and red cabbage may come to table in a watery ink shade.

• • •

Keeping good color is closely related to keeping good texture and to preserving the food value in vegetables. American cooks, who constantly are advised through books and newspaper and magazine columns on food, presumably, should always send tempting, fresh colored vegetables to their tables.

HOW TO COOK WHITE VEGETABLES.

The problem in cooking white vegetables is not to preserve the color they have, but to prevent undesirable colors from developing. The answer in this case is a simple one. Darkening and graying do not occur in white vegetables unless they have been overcooked. Unpleasant dark color usually is accompanied by unpleasant odor and flavor in the white vegetable class.

Use a large amount of boiling, salted water and cook uncovered for the shortest time possible. As soon as the vegetable is cooked, drain it and season for serving. White potatoes are an exception to this method. They may be boiled covered with less water, or they may be steamed. Steaming is very bad for other white vegetables, particularly cabbage, cauliflower, their relatives, and onions.

HOW TO COOK YELLOW VEGETABLES.

Yellow vegetables such as carrots, squash, and sweet potatoes aren't difficult to cook and shouldn't require particular care, for their pigment is quite stable. Most of them are cooked in a rather small amount of boiling water, with a cover. Yellow turnips and rutabaga, belonging to the "strong vegetable" class, are cooked uncovered, in a large amount of water. Excepting the last named, yellow vegetables may be cooked with good results in a steamer or pressure cooker.

HOW TO COOK RED VEGETABLES.

Beets and red cabbage are the important examples of this class. In both cases a slight acidity during cooking will preserve their color. Beets contain enough acid in themselves to protect the red pigment, unless they are cut up for cooking, in which case a half-teaspoonful of vinegar may be added. Red cabbage always must be acidified or it will turn purplish or blue. A little vinegar will do the trick. German housewives add a little tart apple, which serves the same purpose.

Steaming or pressure cooking is a recommended practice for beets, but fatal to red cabbage!. Cook it like any member of its class, for a very short time in lots of boiling, salted water.

HOW TO COOK GREEN VEGETABLES.

Here's where the real trouble begins. There are many green vegetables and what does for one may not do for another. In general, they should be cooked in boiling, salted water, to cover without a cover on the cooking pan. Steaming ruins most of them. A notable exception is spinach, which may be steamed with good results. Never pressure cook a green vegetable.

• • •

Heat and acid are sworn enemies of chlorophyll, which is the coloring matter in green vegetables. There is acid in the vegetables themselves, and if they are cooked longer than just tender, this acid does a mean job of spoiling the color. Particularly is this true if a cover is used on the cooking pan. Spinach cooks in such a short time that heat and acid have no time to do their dirty work, even in a steamer.

Specific methods for cooking all popular vegetables are given in a new booklet, "Ways with Vegetables," 7 cents by mail. There are recipes for creamed, French fried, braised, and glazed vegetables. There are recipes for vegetable soufflés and ring molds, in addition to cooking directions and special sauces for vegetables. Address mail requests to me in care of THE TRIBUNE.

The Stamp Collector

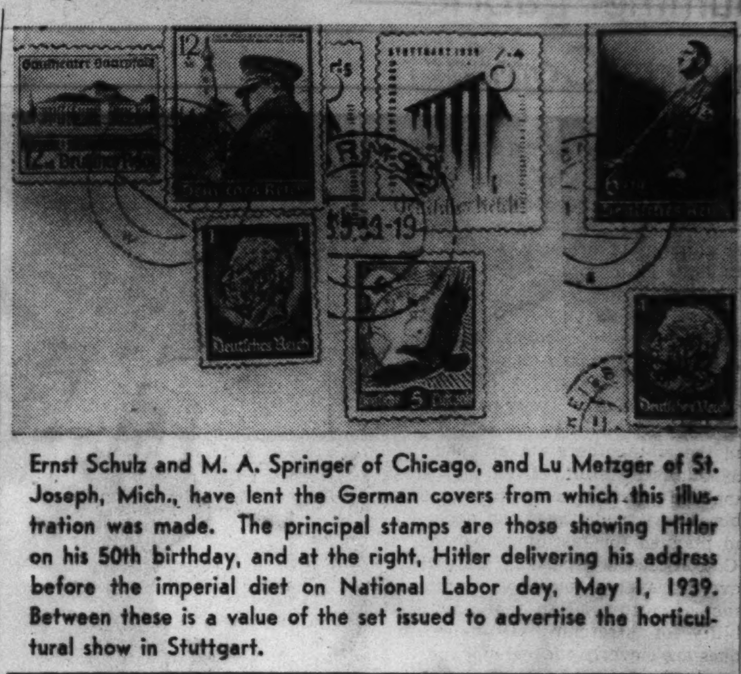
By Richard McP. Cabeen



Ernst Schulz and M. A. Springer of Chicago, and Lu Metzger of St. Joseph, Mich., have lent the German covers from which this illustration was made. The principal stamps are those showing Hitler on his 50th birthday, and at the right, Hitler delivering his address before the imperial diet on National Labor day, May 1, 1939. Between these is a value of the set issued to advertise the horticultural show in Stuttgart.

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

From 1873 until 1891 the postoffice department issued four designs of domestic postal cards, all in the rather small size measuring 3 by 5¼ inches. In 1891 a new design was adopted and the size was greatly increased so that the cards measured 3¾ by 6¼ inches. A few cards have turned up which measure 3½ by 6¼, but as these had printed addresses and apparently were enclosed with a letter for a prepaid reply it is thought that they were privately cut down in order to make possible their insertion in standard envelopes.

The design for this large card shows a three-quarter portrait of Grant facing left in a vertical ellipse which is decorated below and at the sides with a wreath of laurel. This portrait occupies the normal position for a stamp and the remainder of the upper third of the card contains inscriptions and titles. At the top in small type are the words "Postal Card One Cent," while just below in shaded English text within a decorated frame are the words "United States of America." Below the latter in a small panel is the inscription, "This side is for the address only."

The cardboard used for this issue is a light buff and is generally uniform in shade. The portrait and lettering are in black, but this varies from an intense full black to a rather grayish tone.

A variety of this card has been seen which has the printed portions at the bottom. If the address is placed on such a card in the normal position, the printing appears inverted. The variety is due to an error in cutting up the large multiple sheets of cards.

While this large Grant card was in use a great many were backed up with lithographic views of the Columbian exposition and sold in sets at the fair grounds. It appears that the postal authorities ruled against this treatment of postal cards and required that an additional one cent postage be paid on each. Collectors hold large quantities of these early view cards in unused condition, but they are rather scarce used.

Coincident with the issuance of the large card was the appearance of a very small card measuring 3 by 4¾ inches. This had the identical portrait design of Grant, with a slightly modified group of inscriptions. This small Grant card, the sixth design of domestic one cent cards, was printed in blue or dark blue on grayish white cardboard. The Grant cards were superseded in 1894 by a new series bearing the portrait of Jefferson.

The 30 cent trans-Atlantic airmail stamps were printed from four 200 subject flat plates numbered 22381 to 22384, inclusive. The 3 cent baseball centenary stamps were printed from four 200 subject flat plates numbered 22385 to 22389, inclusive.

Adolf Gunesch, 30 West Washington street, announces the publication of the eighth edition of the Handbook of Bureau and Local Precancels. This edition contains 224 pages and is priced at 50 cents. The handbook contains precancel information of every kind, from the pioneer precancels of 1847 down to and including the Presidential issues of today. The beginner will find chapters intended to guide his course and clarify his problems when it appears that the hobby is too complex for a single collector to handle.

The handbook is of equal interest to collectors of city types, precanceled coils and bureau types, for it contains a fund of information on all phases of this philatelic sideline. The current edition includes new chapters on collecting by cities, on colored precancels, air post precancels, dated mail order house precancels, etc.

According to the Kenmore Kollector, the postal authorities of Egypt have announced that several sets of recent commemorative stamps have been offered to the public at face value, with the restriction that the stamps are no longer available to prepay postage.

The Kenmore Kollector is quite rational when it calls this procedure a racket. Some of the issues involved in this peculiar sale were sold out on the first day of sale when they were originally offered in Cairo one or more years ago. Dealers at that time had to be content with a part of their orders. Now that quotations have risen to the point where a profit is possible, the Cairo postmaster discovers a surplus of the stamps.

In a booklet entitled "Philately of Tomorrow," Souren Yohannessiantz explains the workings of the Philatelic Research Laboratories, Inc., which he has organized with the assistance of Harold D. Ellsworth, for the study of stamps. Mr. Yohannessiantz is better known to stamp collectors under the business name of Y. Souren.

Several of the leading stamp publications of the United States and Europe are endeavoring to learn more about Tanna Touva and its postal service. Several readers of THE TRIBUNE have received covers which purport to come from Kizil, Tanna Touva. Can any one offer any proof of the authenticity of their covers beyond the postmark on the cover?

Frank Zaracki, 2763 Dupont street, Omaha, Neb., will send to interested readers of this paper three different metallic poster stamps if return postage is provided.

Loring Stannard, Box 8, Derby, Conn., announces his final series of covers on shakedown cruises. This series will be for the U. S. S.'s Hammann, Helena, Mustin, Rhind, and Russell. Send ten addressed covers stamped at domestic rates, for each vessel in order to obtain complete set of ports visited, and include a cent forwarding fee for each cover. Deadline July 1.

Clotilde Children's Patterns

Women and girls have adopted overalls as a summer playtime fashion, but the boys wore them first, so we present a brand new version of this sports attire for the young men themselves. Such garments are a boon to mothers, since they wear like iron and save a boy's clothes for more dress parade occasions.

Denim is an excellent fabric choice for these overalls with their matching jacket. The collar of the coat may be trimmed with braid. There is a pocket on the trousers into which boyish treasures may be stuffed, and two others on the jacket. Without the jacket, the overalls leave the arms and back bare, since there are only straps to hold the trousers to the body.

For toddlers the pattern is especially suitable, since it may fashion either the overalls or a shorts play suit. A nautical motif in the form of an anchor may be applied to the front with the aid of embroidery pattern No. E-705, available for 10 cents extra. The sun suit need not necessarily be made of heavy material. Some of the softer, easy-to-launder cottons make up well, and they're inexpensive.

Style No. 2102 is designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8. Size 4 requires ⅞ yard of 35 inch material for the play suit, 1⅛ yards of 39 inch fabric for the overalls, and 1¼ yards of material for the jacket.

Underlayers in Summer Fabrics nsure Comfort

By Rhea Seeger.

Fresh as a spring morning, soft as zephyr, cool as an ice cube, and dec- ative as anything in sleek satin are e summer underlayers, the correct undations for summer clothes, fea- re fabrics that go through soap ds without fatalities. Net, voile, tton lace, smooth cool batistes, and mbinations of these make the new- t finds. No excuse for discomfort for any laxness in wearing spot- ss lingerie. Girdles, corsets, bras, d the all-togethers are all made of is summery stuff. Even the side nels of elastic are as thin as pos- ble. Every model has been designed d planned for fastidious women.

Cotton lace is especially attractive, everly layered over a matching nel of cotton net so that any pos- bility of stretching is banished. ones are cleverly concealed, expertly aced where they will do the most od . . . in front and at the back. mall short bones keep the sides nooth. Bra tops are beautifully de- gned with radiating bands of ribbon assure the right uplift and a sep- ation directly in front. Neatly and noothly made to accentuate the long reamlines, these summer models not ly promise comfort but the right tlines to the figure, and all are iced for limited budgets.

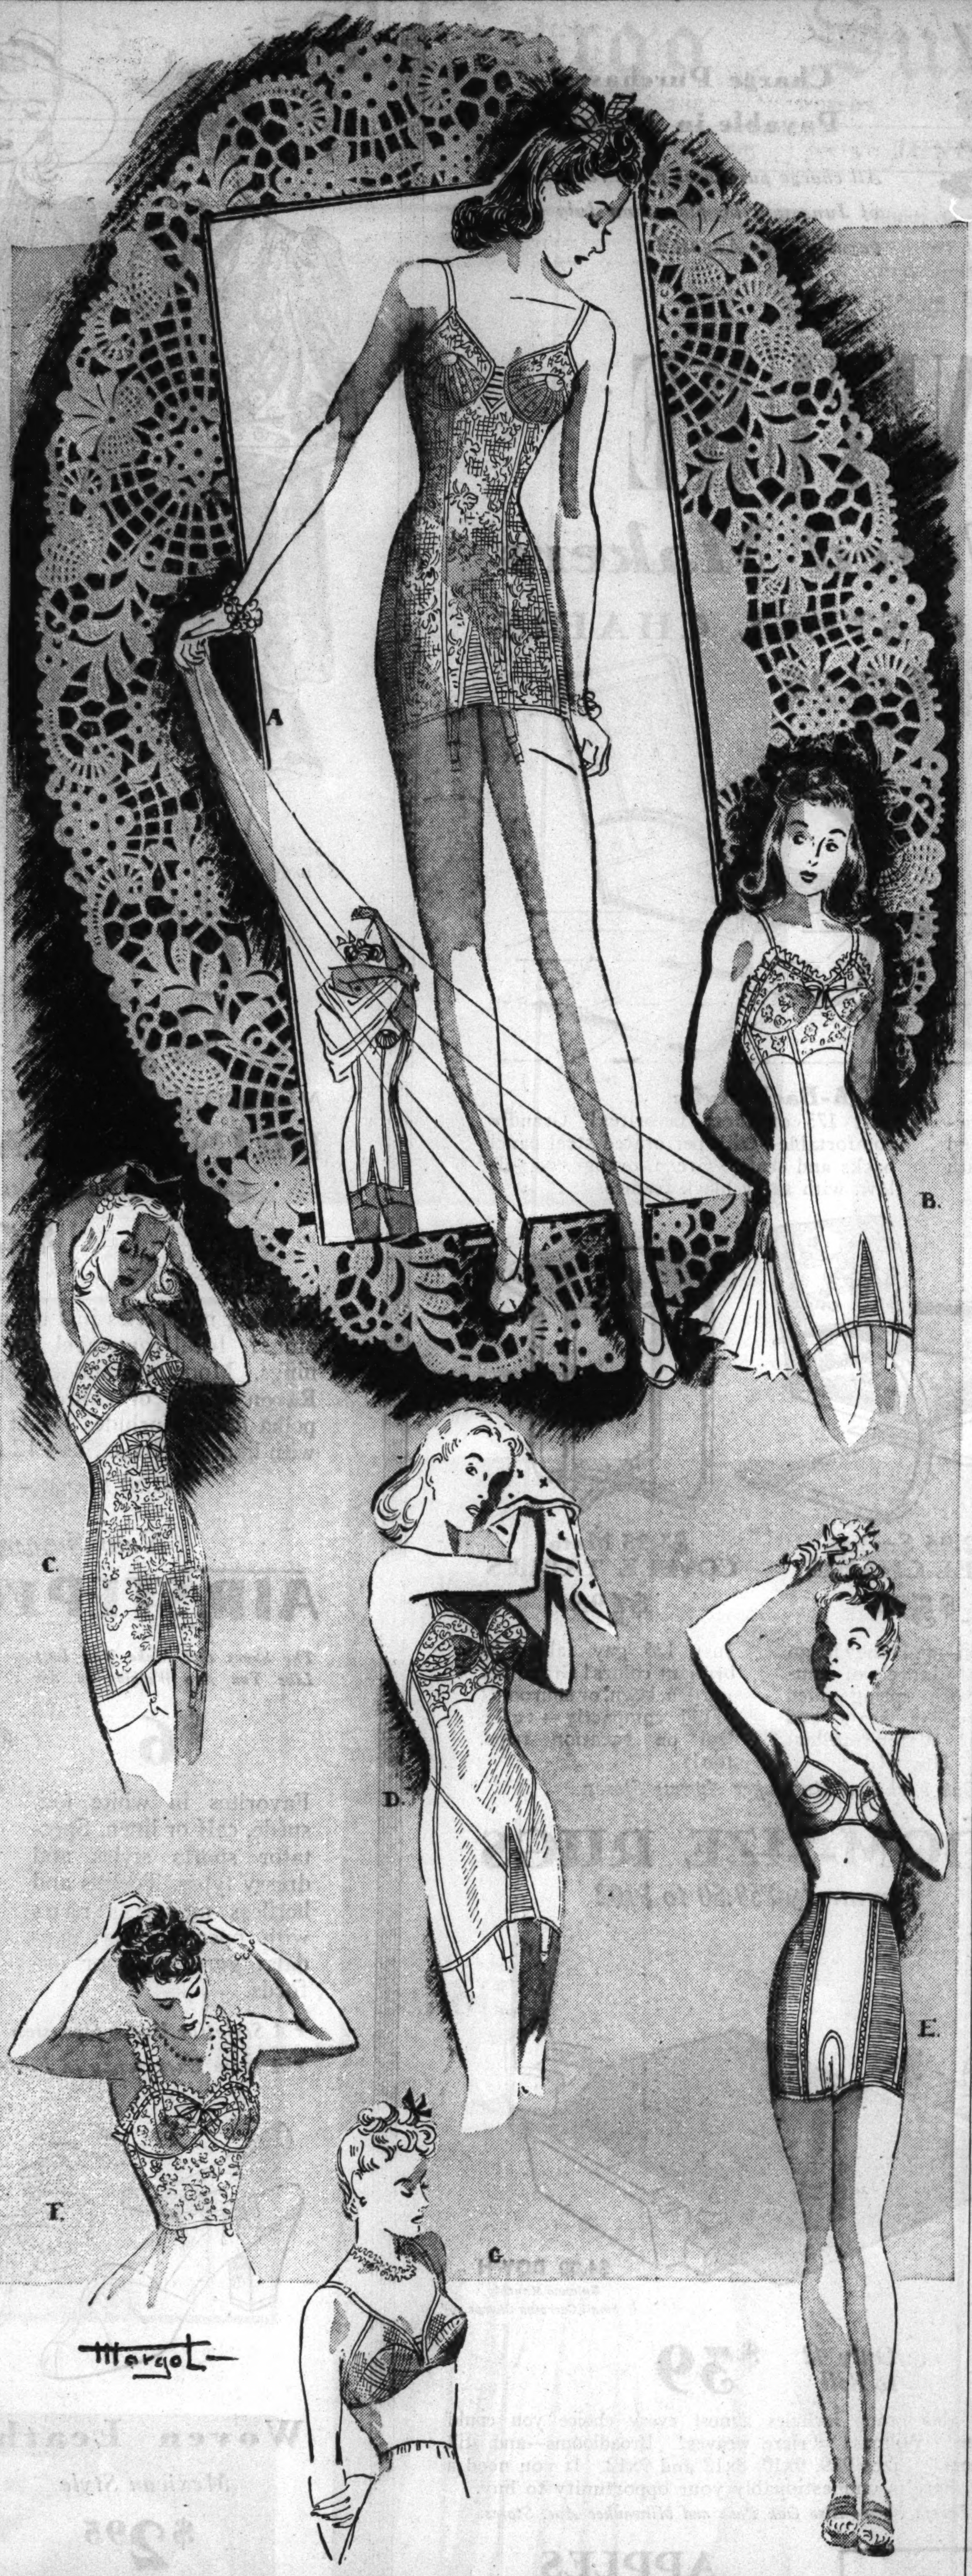
White is becoming more popular ery year. This summer you can nd white batiste models, with or ithout lace trimmed tops. Lace immed tops were designed for wear ith the sheer blouses, so they look ke camisoles with dainty shoulder raps and the lace frill around the ge of the all-together itself. Other- ise, they are simply fashioned with e finest of materials and the inimi- ble skill of experienced designers.

A new shade called "nude" is es- cially flattering. It blends in with l colorings and comes in girdles, l-togethers, and brassières. In dou- e cotton net the best of the daytime l-purpose tailored models are for ca- er girls and others operating on easured clothes budgets. The cotton t is extremely firm. The models are ade of two layers of net and there no fancy trim. For more money u can select the more dress parade fairs in cotton lace, with the mini- um of trim.

• • •

They tub repeatedly and keep in e original outline after weeks of rvice. They're the last word in cool, ry comfort. Flesh tints are obtain- ble in the same models with the me moderate price marks.

New models are particularly suc- essful in the 1939 girdles. They are nger than ever before, come well ove the difficult diaphragm roll, d stay up. Long bras also have en especially designed for wear ith these longer girdles and, when orn together, the duet becomes a mooth, unbroken foundation ready be worn under the most fitted ock or suit. However, it's the super- ol summer cotton materials with e strategic and concealed boning at make any of the newest finds so igh fashion, so easy to wear and under. They are streamlines for the ottest weather, underlayers for the ost fastidious women . . . at mod- t prices. All are designed and fash- oned with the same expert attention d detail as are expended on the ore expensive satin and brocade eauties for winter seasons. Seven ummer models are sketched.



A—Double net tailored affair for career girl. Has long streamlines and uplift bra top. ● B—Plain white smooth batiste used for all-in-one model with lace bra top edged with dainty frill of lace and then laced with satin ribbon. Also in nude or flesh pink. ● C—Cotton lace girdle with higher waistline for diaphragm control. Trimmed with satin bow appliqued to front panel. ● D—Summer batiste and net foundation for heavier figure, boned in front, side and back. ● E—For sports wear, panty girdle of alternate bands of thin cotton web lastex and satin lastex fagoted together. Hooks at the side. Bra to match. ● F—Camisole top brassiere to wear with girdles with built-up waistband effect. Lace frills over straps, around top of camisole effect. White, pink, or nude. ● G—Cotton net brassiere with elastic back. Grand, comfortable, washable model for sports wear.

Writer Points to New Trends in Education

Our "Hobbies and Activities list" is helpful, with vacations ahead. Send a large, stamped, addressed envelope for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1939: News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

June days are graduation days. Our boys and girls are stepping out in flocks of hundreds, thousands from grammar school [or private lower schools] into high or preparatory schools. Others are stepping out from high schools into life itself, or from college into the wide world to seek their fortune, that fortune being a job, a career, love, marriage—one or all.

How, every thinking person must ask, has the school [and colleges are not exempt from this question] prepared each boy and girl for living—for living with themselves and with other human beings? Has the emphasis been on academic tool subjects, on cultural ones, on grades and marks? Or has the school looked at them as whole human beings, in whom character and personality fulfillment are quite as vital as achieving A+ in arithmetic or English literature and chemistry IV. or Lab III.?

To me it seems, taking schools in general, the answer is that education still is guilty of a great lag. This does not mean that all educators are asleep, that no school is doing anything in this direction. The leaven is working, and individual schools, school systems and groups of farseeing people all over the country are trying to "lighten the lump." But it is all too slow in its progress—this penetration of advanced ideas into practice in education.

• • •

If I were not aware of all this from my own experiences and information I would have it borne in upon me by my correspondence. Letters from readers tell of instance after instance of life made miserable for the pupils themselves [and their families] because they fail in arithmetic or reading; or in their teen years, in achievement in other more advanced fields of study.

Many children go through school and leave it with a sense of failure. This is wrong. A knowledge, not only of better teaching methods, but of mental hygiene would prevent this.

This time of the year when so many of our children are "finishing their education," or passing from a lower to a higher school, when so many speeches are being made to them about idealistic thinking and acting is a good time for us to look hard at education with the aim of improving it in a live, liveable way. So let me quote Dr. Charles Foster, professor of education in Rutgers university, who has recently conducted an inquiry into mental hygiene practice in the school systems of New Jersey.

• • •

Parts of the survey by Dr. Foster makes statements which, while true in New Jersey, are also true in a widespread way of schools and school systems in general. He says: "Only a few of our schools, on the whole, make much effort to study the needs of the pupils before attempting to teach them.

"In many communities this lack of attention to the needs of the youngsters begins in the elementary grades. Pressed by the demands of their teaching duties, the teachers haven't the time to find out what the children need.

"If mental hygiene teaches anything, it tells us that the growth of personality is more important than learning subject matter. Yet, in all too many instances, this side of the youngster's development is cared for only if the individual teacher happens to take an interest in it.

"Good mental hygiene demands, too, that the pupil have a feeling that what he is doing is worth while.

To better school conditions for our children there should be more attention to social adjustment, working habits and sex adjustment; more trained guidance workers in the school; more clinical service, and much better training of teachers in the direction of practical application of the theory of mental hygiene in the classroom.

How to gain these fine ends? They are all furthered not only if the educators work toward them, but if we who are parents think and know about these matters, and in many cases function and press for action in small parent-teacher groups and in large associations of a similar sort.

Co-ed Patterns

By Carolyn Ramey.

Looking cool is half the battle of feeling cool. The simpler the dress, the cooler the effect. There's an ice cube frostiness about my new midsummer frock, and I'm passing along my latest recipe for comfort for your own collection. The original, which I made in a couple of hours of my vacation leisure, is of handkerchief linen in a dainty floral print. The organdy collar and the fluttery sleeves are edged with organdy ruffling. Buttons in trios are used down the blouse front, which derives fullness from a yoke effect. I put a stiffening back on some of the dress material for a matching belt. The skirt swirls.

If you want a more tailored model, give the dress puffed sleeves and a contrasting shirtwaist collar. Piqué, gingham, linen and other rather sturdy cottons are excellent choices. Dark shades will be equally as smart as light ones, particularly for business and travel.

Style No. T-8628 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material, with ¼ yard of contrasting.

Sally Invites Youngsters to a Movie Party

By Sally Joy Brown.

The activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Tribune Charities, Inc.

Here we are again, boys and girls. School's out and the good old summertime has come at last!

I know it's your favorite season, 'cause it's time for ice cream and pop, for getting freckles and going barefoot, for loads of time to play and forget about reading and writing and 'rithmetic—AND—it's also the time, as hundreds of you very well know, when I drop everything else and see what I can do about helping you boys and girls have some fun.

• • •

For the last few weeks I've been busy scouting around, lining up the summer parties sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and I've made some perfectly swell plans!

First of all, I'd like to explain that the only purpose of these parties is to help you youngsters to enjoy yourselves. You don't have to buy anything, you don't have to sell anything. All you have to do is really want to have some fun and tell me about it.

We're going to say "Hello" with "Goodbye." I know that's not a very good riddle, but here's what I mean: Our opening party of the year will be your opportunity to see a brand new movie, the title of which begins with "Goodbye." You've guessed it! It's "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," now playing at the Apollo theater. One week from next Thursday, July 6, fifty boys and fifty girls will be my guests at this new movie. I'll tell you more about the movie itself tomorrow, although I imagine a good many of you know about it already, because the book from which it was taken was so very popular and the movie had been rated as great entertainment by the critics. Right now I want to explain to you just how to try to win an invitation.

• • •

If you're a movie fan and think this party will be an especially fine treat, and if you're most anxious to come write me a letter and tell me all about it. That's absolutely all you have to do. You see, from your letters I can judge which youngsters are most interested in seeing this movie about the funny old schoolmaster and which of you will really enjoy it most. I have invitations for 100 boys and girls, and I'll select my guests by reading your letters and choosing the writers who seem most enthusiastic and sincere.

There are just a few simple little rules which you must observe if you're to win an invitation. Here they are, and keep them well in mind when you're writing! Your letter must include your name, address, and age, and you must write it all by yourself. Your mother or father or big brother's letter won't do you one bit of good! I want to hear from you personally, and when you write to me you don't have to worry about your spelling or penmanship. Just let me know if you think you could have a good time if I invited you to come with me. Be sure you remember to tell me how old you are or the waste basket will gobble up your letter. Please don't request invitations for brothers, sisters, or friends. Have them write their own letters.

• • •

I'll read all the mail and select my winners on next Thursday, June 29, so you'll have to give your letter to the mailman in time to have it reach me by that date.

The winners will be announced in this column in next SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE and if you'd like to see your name in the list you'd better get that letter off to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

I'll tell you more about our party tomorrow, so if there is anything you don't understand watch for tomorrow's TRIBUNE.

It's a Help to Me, Says—

Mrs. L. M. Metcalf, 701 East Front street, Bloomington, Ill.: When fitting a dress on myself I have found that I can adjust the hem easily by using "bobby" hairpins instead of pins. I slip these over the edge of the turned up material. They slip on readily, do not make the hemline stick out, and do not leave pin holes.

* *

Mrs. C. M., Chicago: I have found that if I cut off flower stems at an angle, instead of straight, before I put them in vase, more of the plant cells are exposed to water and the blossoms keep fresh longer.

* *

K. H. M., Evanston: My husband makes our own "fog" lights for the car from those oil silk dish covers which are used for covering dishes in refrigerators. Such a yellow oil cover can be carried in car pocket and then slipped over lights when need arises. A plain elastic band around edge of cover makes the contact tight.

* *

Clara James, Milwaukee, Wis.: I always wash fruit with a damp cloth as soon as I bring it home from the store. In this way, I not only clean it, but check any slight "rot" which may have gathered on its surface from contact with other fruit in store.

* *

Mrs. Mary T., Chicago: I have always found it easy to teach my children to hang up their clothes by providing them with hangers which they can reach. My husband straightens the wire of an ordinary coat hanger and substitutes a long hook and wire instead of a short one, so children of different ages can all reach hangers without any stretching and climbing on chairs.

[Have you some favorite household help, something that lightens labor and gets results. Address It's a Help to Me, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.]

Why Won't They—

Pass a law making it necessary for all park and picnic commissioners to enclose wire trash cans in attractive rustic wood containers, painted green to match landscape, the wire trash cans to be removable, of course? Mrs. Flora Daniels, Chicago.

* *

Design and put on market only beds which are adjustable in length so they can be made comfortable for very tall people as well as very short ones? Mrs. A. Brown, Normal.

* *

Speed up the development of pocket telephones which can be carried around in one's pocket and used anywhere without connecting wires? Lloyd H., Chicago.

[Is there some comfort or convenience you could enjoy? Some of these suggested improvements may have been already perfected, but we'd like your ideas. Address Why Won't They, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.]

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

One modern and efficient way of cooling your house in hot weather is by the use of well water. Where a home owner has naturally cold water available at moderate cost, this type of air cooling with well water system can be installed. Well water is usually from 30 to 50 degrees colder than room temperatures on a hot day. With efficient heat absorption equipment, this temperature differential provides an appreciable reduction in the dry bulb temperature of room air. Incidentally, the cost of operating a well water system in a home is very low.

Flooring for your new or remodeled home is fast going the streamlined way and there is a new hardwood oak flooring just out, with bevels on ends and sides to give the floors a patterned look. The installation costs are very low, for flooring comes to you ready to lay, all sanded, finished, waxed, and polished.

[For further information on above items, please send stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Chicago Tribune, Chicago.]

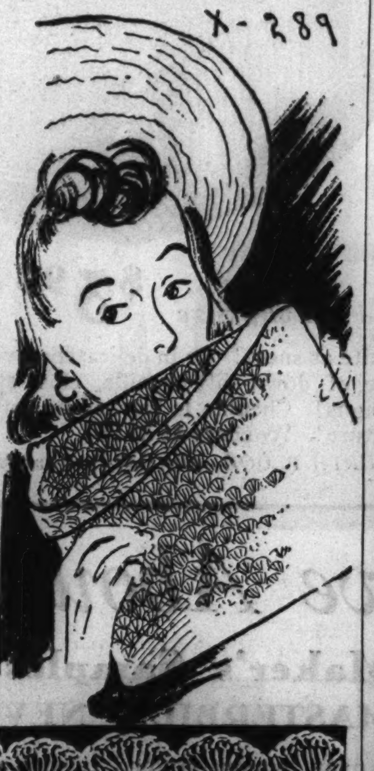
Crochet Purse Uses Treble and Shell Stitches



By Ellen Bruce.

Shell stitch and treble crochet are combined to make this good looking bag for any season of the year. For summer it may be crocheted in white or pastels, and in more vivid or darker colors for fall and winter. One spool of carpet warp, a one-half yard of linen, and a zipper are the items required to create this shell stitch purse measuring about 10 by 12 inches when completed. Linen or gimp may be substituted with equal success and beauty.

For instructions in crocheting the shell stitch purse, No. X-289, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Lederer and Margo to Appear in Person in 'Seventh Heaven'

Play Will Open Next Sunday at Civic Theater

By Cecil Smith.

Francis Lederer and Margo, both celebrities of the cinema, will appear together in person at the Civic theater beginning next Sunday evening. Their vehicle, the fourth play in the summer series offered at the Wacker drive playhouse, will be a revival of Austin Strong's "Seventh Heaven."

Margo [in private life Mrs. Lederer] has played on the Chicago stage just once. In Maxwell Anderson's poetic drama "Winterset" she left a deep impression through her personal beauty and the smoldering intensity of her acting. Mr. Lederer never has made a stage appearance in Chicago. After his initial Broadway success in "Autumn Crocus" he was gobbled up by the movies before the play had a chance to tour.

A sketch of Mr. Lederer's career reveals a type story of the unprivileged boy struggling against the odds of extreme poverty and climbing to the top of the ladder under his own power. His father, a leather merchant in Prague, was able to provide a grammar school education for his son and a period of training at the Prague Academy of Dramatic Arts. After graduation, however, the young actor was left wholly to his own resources. At the dramatic academy, however, he had shown the sort of outstanding ability that inevitably attracts public attention. Without much trouble he was able to secure an acting job at the Old German theater in Prague.

• • •

Here his life was no bed of roses. His weekly salary in terms of American money was precisely $1.20. Since this sum will not buy many champagne suppers in any given week and since young Lederer had no intention of allowing himself to waste away from starvation, the budding actor picked up odd jobs washing windows, sweeping floors, and decorating department store windows.

This unhappy state of affairs did not last long. Opportunities arose to play in Budapest, Vienna, Breslau, and Berlin. In the German capital he played opposite Elisabeth Bergner in "Romeo and Juliet" and scored a triumph equal to hers.

An engagement in the musical comedy "Wonder Bar" followed. This piece was transplanted to London, where Mr. Lederer duplicated his Berlin success. Remaining in London for a year and a half, he played important rôles in "Autumn Crocus," "Volpone," and "The Cat and the Fiddle."

• • •

"Autumn Crocus" was brought to New York in the fall of 1932. After the end of the play's New York run Mr. Lederer's history belongs to the movie department, although he did briefly return to the stage in 1934 in a Hollywood performance of "Autumn Crocus." His first motion picture was "Man of Two Worlds." One of the most popular was "The Pursuit of Happiness," the comedy about the New England custom of bundling, in which he played the rôle given to Tonio Selwart on the stage. His most recent films are "Midnight" and "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

On Oct. 16, 1937, Mr Lederer married Maria Margarita Guadalupe Boldao Castilla, who for understandable reasons prefers to be known on the stage simply as Margo. Mrs. Lederer's early career was as uncertain and unlucrative as that of her husband. Born in Mexico, she came to California when she was 4. From an early age she studied dancing, making her first public appearance at the age of 9.

Southern California was the locale of her earliest dancing. At 15, however, she went to New York to dance at the Waldorf-Astoria. Not long afterward Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, on the lookout for a feminine lead for their independently produced movie "Crime Without Passion" decided that Margo would fill the bill exactly.

With equal suddenness she was given an opportunity to make her stage debut with Burgess Meredith in "Winterset." Later she acted in the motion picture version as well. Until now she has played only three rôles on the stage—in "Winterset," "The Masque of Kings," and Max Reinhardt's Hollywood outdoor production of "Faust."

"Seventh Heaven," a sentimental tale of Paris garrets the war, separation, unfaithfulness, blindness, and renewed love, was one of the spectacular successes of the 1920s. The first New York presentation lasted through 704 performances, beginning in the fall of 1922. The first cast included Helen Menken, George Gaul, Marion Kerby, and Frank Morgan. Chicago caught its first glimpse of the play in September, 1934, with Miss Menken, Miss Kerby, Henry O'Neill, and Jason Robards. Two movies have been made, a silent picture with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell and a talkie with Simone Simon and James Stewart.

This week Samson Raphaelson's "Accent on Youth," an excellent comedy quite above the class of the recent "Skylark," remains at the Civic theater. The principal players are Esther Ralston, Donald Brian, Sam Wanamaker, Betty Hanna, Leo Curley, and John Goldsworthy.

Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Mikado," in its famous swing version, renews its lease on life under WPA auspices at Mandel hall on the University of Chicago campus next Saturday and Sunday evenings. Tuesday, July 4, the modernized opera reopens at the Great Northern theater with full expectation of a prolonged run. All the principals in the all-Negro cast retain the rôles they had when the show closed last February.

No doubt the performers in "The Mikado" will find it a relief to settle down in Chicago again. As everybody remembers, the spectacular production was ripped out of the Great Northern at the height of its popularity simply because the New York project of the Federal theater—then as now enjoying a singularly questionable reputation—desired to strengthen its popularity by presenting a sure success. After a few weeks in New York under federal auspices the show was sold to two Chicagoans, Bernard Ulrich and Melvin Erickson, who offered it to the New York public as a commercial attraction at higher prices. It was a quick failure on these terms. The cast came back to Chicago and a short while ago was recertified in toto for work in the theater project.

Harry Minturn produced and directed "The Mikado." The decors are by Clive Rickabaugh and the exotic costumes by John Pratt. Sammy Dyer and Hazel Davis staged the dances and Viola Hill directed the singing.

◆

Latest flash from the Selwyn theater, where John Barrymore is holding forth in "My Dear Children": Doris Dudley, who plays the rôle of Cordelia, has officially, publicy, and finally changed her surname to O'Dudley. Reason withheld. Failing to find the solution in palmistry, astrology, or numerology fellow members of the cast are said to have begun to read tea leaves in search of an explanation. If the movement spreads perhaps the title will become "O My Dear Children," featuring such notables as O'Barrymore, O'Lois Hall, Dorothy O'McGuire, Philippo Reed, and Stiano Braggiotti-O!

◆

Brenda Forbes, the wonderful rubber faced comedienne of "One for the Money" at the Harris theater, belongs to a well known English theatrical family. Her brother, Ralph Forbes, and her mother, Mary Forbes, are prominent in the movies. Miss Forbes' earlier experiences were entirely with serious parts—among them with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and with Orson Welles in Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House." But when she completely realized her phenomenal capacity to distort her features into grimaces of the most ridiculous nature she gravitated naturally into the convulsing sketches she now offers in "One for the Money."

◆

The current productions of the federal theater project continue this week. "As You Like It," with Pierre Nuyttens' fine costumes, closes Saturday evening at the Blackstone theater. "Street Scene," in the midst of an indefinite engagement, remains at the Great Northern this week, moving to the Blackstone on July 4 to make way for "The Mikado." "The Emperor's New Clothes," a charming children's play by Charlotte Chorpenning, will be given only once, on Friday afternoon in the Blackstone.

Southern Wisconsin's first professional summer theater, the Port Washington Summer playhouse, began its initial season last Wednesday. The opening play was "The Bishop Misbehaves." Fourteen professional actors form the Port Players, as the company calls itself. At their head is Parker Mills, director of the Civic theater of Springfield, O. The season will continue until Aug. 27 with a different play each week, running from Wednesday through Sunday.

◆

The 1939 opening of the Theater of the Dunes at Beverly Shores, Ind., takes place Friday evening. A ten week repertory of contemporary plays will be offered on Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and holiday evenings, with Philip Barry's "Spring Dance" as the first bill. The director is L. Newell Tarrant, Civic theater director of Fort Wayne, Ind.

◆

The first summer play of the Northwestern university theater, Tom Robertson's "Caste," will be given every evening this week from Wednesday through Saturday.

◆

"Hero Come Home," by Dorothy Dow Fitzgerald, third prize winner in the recent contest for new comedies, will open the season on July 18 of the Coach House Players at Oconomowoc, Wis. Margaret Waller, seen here with the Lunts in "The Sea Gull," is tentatively slated for the leading part.

Theatrical circles on the west coast are buzzing with excitement over the impending tryout of Helen Hayes' new vehicle. Titled "Ladies and Gentlemen," it is the handiwork of Charles MacArthur [Miss Hayes' husband] and Ben Hecht. The first presentation will take place July 10 at the Curran theater in San Francisco. Herbert Marshall deserts the movies to share top billing with Miss Hayes. A fortnight in San Francisco will be followed by a similar period at the Biltmore theater in Los Angeles. Then Mr. and Mrs. MacArthur will go abroad as guests of their producer, Gilbert Miller, until the time for a Broadway première arrives in the fall.

BUT KEENE!

Linda Keene is the southern belle whose sultry voice adds vocal brilliance to Jack Teagarden's music in the Blackhawk restaurant.

New Conductor

The Scranton Philharmonic orchestra has a new conductor in the person of George Sebastian. His first appearances in his new position are being made this summer when the orchestra presents a series of outdoor concerts at Scranton Bowl park. October will see the start of the regular season. Former conductor of the Scranton ensemble was Dr. Felix M. Ganz.

The newcomer is a native of Budapest, Hungary. By 1920, when he was only 17, he already had been graduated from the Franz Liszt academy of music, where he studied with Leo Weiner, Zoltán Kodály and Margit Varro. His career started immediately with his becoming assistant to Bruno Walter at the Munich State opera.

After remaining there two years he went to New York, working as assistant conductor for two seasons with the Metropolitan Opera company. Returning to Germany, he conducted opera in Hamburg and Leipzig for three more years. Now, at the age of 24, he was appointed first conductor at the Berlin State opera, making his debut with "Die Meistersinger." Here he introduced such works as "Jonny Spielt Auf," "Madame Butterfly," "Manon," "Fedora," "L'Amore dei Tre Re," and "Don Carlos." From 1930 to 1933 he alternated between the Teatro Liceo in Barcelona and the Teatro Colon in Buenos Aires, frequently making guest appearances in France and Germany.

At the end of this period he was made general music director of the broadcasting system of the soviet union and leading conductor of the Moscow broadcasting station. This post kept him busy until last year.

Rains Fill N. Y. Theaters with Cash Patrons

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Heaven hears so many complaints about the weather I imagine it was greatly relieved to have it. New York wire buzz with hallelujahs one matinée day last week. The rains came, and not only did they fill the potato farmers of Long Island with joy, after a 54 day drouth, but they also filled the Broadway theaters with patrons. It was the first indication play producers have had that the world's fair may yet turn out to be the expected friend of the theater rather than its most active enemy.

The fair, up to now, has been emptying the theater with devastating regularity. Only the biggest hits in the list of 12 shows remaining on Broadway have been meeting expenses, and all but five of these have had losing weeks.

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois" [Raymond Massey], "The Little Foxes" [Tallulah Bankhead], "No Time for Comedy" [Katharine Cornell], "The Philadelphia Story" [Katharine Hepburn], and "Hellzapoppin'" [Olsen and Johnson] are the successful exceptions.

Now, the producers are convinced, the turn has come. Schools are closing all over the country. School teachers are free to travel. Parents are free to travel. Junior and Sis are free to travel, or be sent back to "that old camp." Everything is, or should be, on the upbeat from now on. Showmen are just naturally optimistic.

Asked what convinced them that the sudden appearance of playgoing crowds was due to the influx of fair visitors, the showmen replied that 90 per cent of the new business was counter business [which would mean the seats were bought at the last minute at the box office] and also that all the shows selling those gaudy pictorial souvenirs of the play which New Yorkers refuse to buy report a tremendous increase in sales.

Meanwhile the fair goes rolling along, averaging about 100,000 paid admissions a day, and I, as a one-man self-appointed committee of selection, have named Norman Bel Geddes as its miracle man. There is more talk about the Geddes "Futurama," which is General Motors' free ride through the America of 1960, than there is about any other one exhibit on the grounds, and more people waiting in line for a chance to see it.

But miracle men can have clay feet, too. Down in the amusement sector there is a second Geddes exhibit, that of the "Crystal Lassies." For this the daring designist has built an octagonal globe with three tiers of railed paths running around inside it. The walls of the interior are mirrors. The floor that bisects the ball is a mirror. And when lightly draped or liberally bared ladies appear on the mirrored floor to dance their images are reflected in walls and ceilings and thrown up from the floor, to the smiling befuddlement of the visitors along the winding paths. Every girl can be counted seven or eight times and, naturally, from seven or eight angles. Which, if counting nudes happens to be your passion, probably is good fun. Seems a little cheap and hokumy after the General Motors Futurama.

Still, I repeat, Norman Bel Geddes is the miracle man of the fair, so far as the outstanding exhibits are concerned. And, when you come to think of it, why shouldn't he be? None of the scenery designers of the theater has done more striking sets than he ["Dead End," "Lysistrata," "The Eternal Road"]. He did several great sets for grand opera ["The Legend," "Cleopatra's Night"]; he was one of the outstanding designers of Chicago's A Century of Progress Exposition, and every fourth gadget you pick up in department store novelties was patterned by him.

He was designing streamlined trains as far back as 1928, before the railroads were ready for them. It took them ten years, in fact, to catch up with Geddes' imagination. And who, of all the country's geniuses, has had a more picturesque approach to fame than he?

Remember, he was tossed out of high school for drawing caricatures of his superintendent on the blackboard. That was back in New Philadelphia, O. [he was born in Adrian, Mich.]. It started him on a career, he thought, as a cartoonist. He studied at the Art institute in Chicago. He had an experience in movies. And finally, to get him properly in the "poor boy makes good" class, he told John Chapman that he was down to his last $6, and wondering what to do, when a fellow sitting next to him on a park bench got up and left a copy of the Literary Digest behind him.

The wind was turning the pages of the Digest when Norman notices a headline: "Millionaires Should Support Artists." He read the article. It was based on an interview with the late Otto Kahn. Geddes took the hint. Five of his six dollars went into a telegram to Mr. Kahn, telling the art patron what he had done and what he wanted to do, and Kahn sent him $400. Nothing in the biography of any genius can be much more picturesque than that.

• • •

Geddes built his Futurama two or three years ago, and the only thing more wonderful than that he could do it is the fact that General Motors let him do it. To ride through it you climb a long ramp, step into a darkened hall, walk slowly down two other ramps while a concealed lecturer makes you trafic conscious and sets you wondering whatever the world is coming to.

Now you step onto a moving sidewalk and from the sidewalk into a love seat built for two with a couple of soft speakers at the back. Soon you are riding alongside, or looking down upon, or soaring above a world in miniature with all the Geddes trafic theories of transcontinental highways, model cities, tunneled mountain ranges, model airports, and the like, spread miraculously before you. As you move along the voice from the soft speaker explains the scene to you. The ride takes 15 minutes, approximately, and when you step off the train onto the sidewalk again you are at a street corner in one of those Geddes cities of 1960, walking along elevated sidewalks, while on the street level below are a collection of—guess what?—General Motors' cars, silly!

Nice human item in the papers the other day. Up in the Hudson River valley, where Maxwell Anderson and Burgess Meredith live and where the playwright got the inspiration for his prize winning "High Tor," which he wrote for Meredith, an organization known as the Hudson River Conservation society had a garden party.

Among the guests was a little, old fellow of 76, Elmer Van Orden by name. He had come down from High Tor, which is his property, to be inducted into membership in the society as a reward for his devotion to the principles of the society long before it was organized.

Mr. Van Orden, in fact, is the hero of Mr. Anderson's "High Tor." The farm, which includes the mountain from which the play is named, came into the Van Orden family before the revolution by grant from George III. of England. He is still a poor man, but has many times refused to sell his property to those who would disfigure the face of it by digging out the trap rock, just as Van Van Horn did in the play.

Burgess Meredith, who played the hero's rôle in "High Tor," was there. He and iZta Johann gave scenes from the play. A nice time is reported, for all Mr. Van Orden doesn't set much store by play-acting.

IN EMPIRE ROOM

Margaret Van Sickle is one of the elaborately costumed Merriel Abbott dancers, current in the Empire room at the Palmer House.

Vaudeville

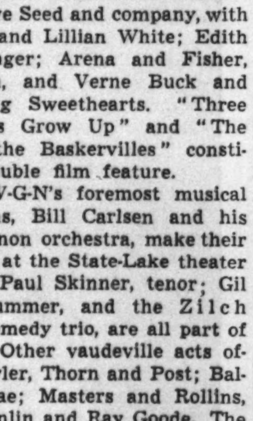
Phil Spitalny's "Hour of Charm" moves from the Drake hotel to the Chicago theater's stage this week. Besides the thirty-piece, all-girl orchestra, the entertainment offers Maxine Marlow, singer; Evelyn Kaye, concert violinist; Ginger, comedienne; a glee club, and the Three Little Words, harmony trio. "Invitation to Happiness," with Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray, is the current film.

At the Palace theater Frank Fay appears in person with his own show. Among its performers are Kay Hamilton, vocalist; J. Burton De Vant, juggler; Buster Shaver and company, with Olive and George, and Fred Hillerbrandt. On the screen is "The Sun Never Sets," featuring Douglas Fairbanks Jr., Basil Rathbone, C. Aubrey Smith, and Lionel Atwill.



Frank Fay.

Carl Freed and His Harmonica Lads head the stage show at the Oriental theater. Other vaudeville features number Dave Seed and company, with Jack Janis and Lillian White; Edith Griffith, singer; Arena and Fisher, dance team, and Verne Buck and the Dancing Sweethearts. "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" and "The Hound of the Baskervilles" constitute the double film feature.

One of W-G-N's foremost musical organizations, Bill Carlsen and his Aragon-Trianon orchestra, make their stage debut at the State-Lake theater this week. Paul Skinner, tenor; Gil Rutzen, drummer, and the Zilch Brothers, comedy trio, are all part of the group. Other vaudeville acts offered are Tyler, Thorn and Post; Ballard and Rae; Masters and Rollins, and Ray Conlin and Ray Goode. The motion picture is "Winner Take All," with Tony Martin and Gloria Stuart.

In the large cast of the "Riding High Revue", at the Rialto theater are Ann Davis, Marion Miller, Patricia Perry, and Doris Chesterfield. "Blackwell's Island" is the film. It features John Garfield.

Variations

Jaromir Weinberger, composer of "Schwanda, the Bagpipe Player," is composing a set of variations and a fugue on the old English tune, "Under the Spreading Chestnut Tree." Dedicated to the New York Philharmonic-Symphony orchestra, it will be premiered by that group at its opening concert in the fall, on Oct. 12. The composer first heard the tune in a cinema theater in France. The variations are entitled "Her Majesty's Virginal," "The Madrigalists," "La Dame Noire," "Scottish Highlanders," "Pastorale," "Mr. Weller Sr. Discusses about Widows with His Son, Samuel Weller, Esq.," "Sarabande for Princess Elizabeth, Electress Palatine and Queen of Bohemia."

Loop Will Add 2 New Names to Swing Rolls

Two new names will be entered on the loop's swing roster this week when Joe Reichman and Bunny Berigan bring their orchestras in for preholiday debuts.

Reichman's is a familiar name in show business, usually being followed by the soubriquet, "Pagliacci of the Piano." Joe headlines a new summer revue in the Empire room of the Palmer House, opening Thursday night. In addition to the Reichman rhythms will be heard the baritone voice of Ish-To-Opi, Indian singer; the musical caricatures of the Oxford Boys, and the duets of Staples and Cerny, holdovers from the current show. Action will be furnished by Bob Ripa, juggler, and the twelve dancing Abbott girls.

Bunny Berigan's year old orchestra follows Count Basie in the Panther room of Hotel Sherman Saturday night. The young Gabriel from Fox Lake, Wis., will feature his own four octave trumpeting, which won him spots in such bands as those of Hal Kemp, Tommy Dorsey, Goodman, and Vallee. With Berigan is Wendy Bishop, pretty young vocalist.

"Sleeper" has two connotations in show language. A "sleeper jump" is, rather obviously, an overnight trip between engagements. By logical continuation of the idea it comes to mean any long and usually arduous trip. Also "sleeper" is a performer who clicks surprisingly. Both uses of the term can be applied to Romo Vincent's success at Chez Paree, where he and Harriet Hoctor, Vincent Lopez, Betty Hutton, the Sterner Sisters, and the Adorables are entertaining summer diners out. Vincent was signed as a good addition to a star studded show and turned out to be the hit of the program. And his place as star of a Chez show is a long way from his original Chicago job as a singer of spirituals in the old Samovar café.

• • •

They've added a dance team to the nightly shows at the Blackhawk. Berni and Jovanna, a young couple who capitalize on the romantic mood.

• • •

There is a workshop behind the startling scenes presented nightly in the Stevens hotel's Continental room by Gwynne, the magician. He maintains a staff to construct the properties necessary for new illusions, and modern versions of old ones. There's also a lot of repair work on the devices that get such frequent workouts during his three nightly shows.

After a week in the Blue Fountain room Milt Herth, staccato organist, and his piano-drum accompanists have convinced Hotel La Salle patrons that swing has many methods of production, and that brass sections or moaning winds are not indispensible to rhythmic orchestration.

• • •

Joe Venuti's orchestra shares the Aragon and Trianon bandstands next week-end, doubling with Griff Wi liams Saturday at the Aragon an with Woody Herman at the Triano Sunday.

From "Tobacco Road" to "Sta Lane" is the tour Eddie Garr mad when h came bac to Chicag for th openin that wa schedule Thursda night out a Bon Ai Countr club. Gar well remen bered her for his in persona tions an all aroun entertai ing ability, left a Chicago café e gagement to take over the Jeete Lester rôle in the well known pla and made a hit. Eddie's comedy pr vides a perfect contrast for the sloe eyed singing of Gertrude Niesen, th other headliner in Bon Air's "Sta Lane" revue. Johnny Barnes, Grac and Nikko, and the twenty Belles o Bon Air complete the cast. Two o Sammy Rose's production number are "Little Figures from the Ink well," a novelty ensemble wit movie cartoon characters portraye by masked girls, and "Strolling Dow Star Lane," a more conventional, bu original dance routine.

Sir Adrian Boult to Open Ravinia Concerts Thursday

3 Conductors, Noted Soloists on Season Card

By Cecil Smith.

It's Ravinia time again. On Thursday evening the gates of the wooded park on the north shore will be unbarred, the swinging Japanese lanterns in the pavilion lighted, and the eager musical public admitted to the first of the summer's twenty-four concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

For six weeks Rivinia will be one of the major musical centers of the United States. Three eminent guest conductors—Sir Adrian Boult of London, Vladimir Golschmann of St. Louis, and Artur Rodzinski of Cleveland—will come to direct the orchestra. Each conductor will remain at Ravinia for two weeks, presenting both familiar and novel works of his own choice, and from time to time collaborating with such famous soloists as Josef Hofmann and Emanuel Feuermann. Concerts will be played each week on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, and on Sunday afternoon.

• • •

Sir Adrian Boult, guest conductor for the initial fortnight, has never visited the middle west, although he has appeared in Boston and New York and has led the NBC Symphony orchestra on the radio. At home in London he holds an important and influential post as music director of the British Broadcasting company. In nine years under his direction the broadcasts of the government controled corporation have been planned with remarkably high standards of performance and unusual breadth of taste.

Sir Adrian is a musician because he had to be. His natural endowments began to show themselves when he could still hardly walk or talk. While he was still so small that the piano keyboard was approximately on a line with his eyes he began to pick out by ear the tunes he heard his mother play and sing. When he was only 3 or 4 his mother expressed surprise at the accuracy with which he reproduced a melody and asked him how he found the correct succession of notes so readily. "Because it sounds right," he replied, disdainful and surprised that any one should ask so silly a question.

Since his mother was an intelligent and educated musician the boy was allowed to follow his natural bent. He was not forced into any hothouse growth, nor was he publicly exploited. But at school, at Oxford university, and later in Leipzig with the great conductor Nikisch, he immersed himself in as continuous and enthusiastic a study of music as any present day performer can point to. Happily free from any overdevelopment of vanity or conceit, he was always able to listen and learn, and he always held in high regard the accomplishments of others.

This admirable, and unfortunately somewhat rare, attitude of character he showed once again recently to the Ravinia program committee. In their advance programs both Sir Adrian and another conductor had scheduled a certain work which it was not desirable to perform twice in the season. Informed of the conflict, Sir Adrian volunteered to remove the work from his program, saying: "I am only eager that it should be heard; I am sure my colleague will conduct it very well."

• • •

From the descriptions of those who have seen him at work Sir Adrian is a restrained, intelligent conductor, more intent upon making the music sound right than upon presenting a bizarre or sensational personality to his audience. In England he has attained his present high rank on the strength of the substantial, unpretentious record of his twenty years as a conductor.

His musical sympathies are wide. He is one of the most active gladiators on behalf of modern music, especially that of his fellow countrymen. His Bach and Brahms, on the other hand, have won great praise. He has conducted the third "Brandenburg" concerto of Bach, which appears on next Sunday's program, oftener than any other piece.

Reserving most of his novelties for the second week, Sir Adrian has drawn up an attractive series of more standard programs for his opening week. On Friday and Saturday he will enjoy the superlative collaboration of Josef Hofmann, one of the world's great pianists. Mr. Hofmann has never before accepted summer engagements. He will play a different concerto each time, the Chopin E minor on Friday and the Beethoven "Emperor" on Saturday.

To those who have never visited Ravinia it may be well to point out that the park is not inaccessible. Located between Glencoe and Highland Park, about half a mile west of the lake, the grounds straddle the space between Sheridan road on the east and Green Bay road on the west. Parking space is provided at both east and west entrances. The Green Bay road parking lot is larger and easier to use.

After considerable experimentation I am able to recommend the quickest and least congested automobile route from the loop: Outer drive to Foster avenue; west on Foster avenue to Lincoln avenue; northwest on Lincoln avenue to Skokie highway; north on Skokie highway to County Line road [the Villa Moderne is on the southeast corner]; east a short stretch to Green Bay road; north a few hundred feet to the park entrance.

IN RAVINIA FESTIVAL

On Friday and Saturday nights Josef Hofmann, the celebrated pianist, will appear with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at the festival in Ravinia park. Under Sir Adrian Boult's direction he will play a different concerto each night.

Current Music News

Customarily the American Conservatory of Music presents a series of faculty recitals during the summer session. This year will be no exception, and on Wednesday the first one will be given in Kimball hall. Edward Collins, pianist, and Robert Speaker, bass-baritone, are the performers.

The former will open the concert with Beethoven's Sonata in C major, opus 2, No. 3. Three preludes by Chopin, "The Valley of the Bells," by Ravel, and "Dance," by Hindemith, will be played on the second group. Two of the pianist's compositions, a setting of the Negro spiritual, "Didn't My Lord Deliver Daniel," and a nocturne in B minor, plus Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue conclude the recital. Mr. Speaker will present four songs by Brahms and four by contemporary composers, including "Cape Horn Gospel 1," by Jeanne Boyd.

Henoit Levy, pianist, and Stella Roberts, violinist, are paired on the second recital the following Wednesday.

During the second week of Ravinia concerts Philip Manuel and Gavin Williamson will transport a pair of harpsichords to the festival shed, playing them with the orchestra on Friday night. Chicago's valuable purveyors of classical music on classical instruments will be heard in Bach's Third Concerto for two harpsichords and strings. Sir Adrian Boult will be the conductor.

Next fall Manuel and Williamson will sponsor an ancient music festival, to be held on the last three Tuesday evenings in October. Assisted by local instrumentalists and vocalists they will play works by Bach, Mozart, Rameau, Couperin, and other composers of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. Harpsichords, spinets, virginals, flutes, strings, and a Muzio Clementi piano will be heard singly and in combination. The Goodman theater will house the festival.

A program by blind musicians is scheduled for Tuesday night at the Metropolitan church, 4100 South parkway, at 8:30 o'clock. The participants are members of the Fellowship Circle of the Blind, and their sponsor on this particular occasion is the Sun Flower club of the Metropolitan church. This is the circle's first appearance. Numbers on the program range from mixed double quartets and instrumental solos to readings.

Recently Jason F. Whitney, president of the Chicago City Opera company, stated that if "2½ per cent of the citizens of Chicago bought one opera ticket this winter the 1939 season of grand opera would be self-supporting." In an attempt to reach this 2½ per cent an energetic committee of women, headed by Mrs. William Cowen, is busily contacting local commercial firms, hoping to make opera patrons out of the employés. Employers are urged to help the cause by buying coupon books which they can either give or sell to their workers. According to the opera company many are donating these books to the employés in an effort to enlarge the latter's cultural experience. The coupon books referred to are purchasable by any one for $10 and are worth $11 at the box office.

Jazz to Serious.

Johnny Green, best known as a jazz composer, has deviated into the realm of serious music, writing a piano composition, "Music for Elizabeth."

Book Review

Richard Franko Goldman, associate conductor of the Goldman band and son of the great bandmaster, Edwin Franko Goldman, is the author of "The Band's Music," a compendium of historical, critical, and reference material published recently by the Pitman Publishing corporation of New York.

In the introductory section of the book are interesting and highly informative essays on the development of the band répertoire and the history of wind instruments. There is a list of music written for original wind instruments between the sixteenth century and the present day. That the author has a realistic attitude toward the band is proved by the little essay entitled "The Band and the Public," in which he freely concedes that a great part of the band's activities must consist in the presentation of light music to a general audience. There is no attempt to lead the band along exclusively "high brow" roads, although Mr. Goldman believes that this type of musical unit has esthetic possibilities comparable to those of a symphony orchestra.

The bulk of "The Band's Music" is devoted to program notes on the mass of original and transcribed music utilized by wind instrument combinations. This section should prove very valuable to writers of notes for band programs, to the continuity men handling band broadcasts, and to the more curious section of the general public. Since a majority of band pieces were originally written for other instruments or combinations of instruments, this reference section has a far wider value than the title of the book would indicate. E. B.

Sacred Music Fete.

The Secra Musicale dell'Umbria at Perugia and Assisi is a biennial festival devoted to music of a sacred character. There will be one this year from Sept. 21 to Oct. 4. On it are scheduled Liszt's "The Legend of St. Elizabeth" in stage form [Italian première], Haydn's "The Creation," Palestrina's "Missa Papae Marcelli," Cherubini's Requiem in C minor, Mulé's "La Cieca di Gerico" in stage form [world première], Honegger's "Judith," Vaughan Williams' "Job" ballet [Italian première], a Bach cantata, a Franciscan concert — music dealing with the St. Francis legend by Mancinelli, Malipiero, etc.—organ and orchestral works.

Nickel Machine Music of 1939 Worries Critic

By Edward Barry.

A rambling column to follow a rambling vacation:

The outstanding musical development of this decade seems to be the gradual adoption by roadside joints of a modern type of nickel music machine. Before dropping his coin a customer may select from a group of ten or twelve tunes the one he is most eager to hear. Then, by putting the pointer opposite the name of his selection, he can command the machine to emit this particular piece and no other.

There is no point in quarreling with progress, but it is permissible to point out the fact that in this case, just as in every similar case, something has been lost as well as something gained. In an elder day, when a person dropped his nickel in the piano and was forced to take whatever tune the instrument wanted to play, there was no possibility of a bystander having to hear "Moonlight and Roses," say, more than once. It could not come up again until its turn came—until all of the other pieces in the piano's répertoire had been heard.

Now this protection has been removed. A person dropping in for a snack may find that a group of young "Moonlight and Roses" enthusiasts has preceded him. It is quite possible that he may hear the piece four times during the time necessary to consume two scrambled eggs and a dish of ice cream. With a more elaborate meal the number of playings can easily rise to six, depending on the supply of nickels the enthusiasts command and on the sturdiness of their appetite for the piece of their choice.

• • •

So much for the outstanding development of the decade. If one were forced to single out the phenomenon which seems most likely to give this year of 1939 its ultimate musical character, choice would probably alight on the reëmergence of an opus called "I cried for you, now it's your turn to cry over me."

This, it turns out, is an old song, but it simply had to come back. There is something in the sentiment, in the tempo, in the very contour of the melody which fits it magnificently for the crooning type of delivery which the last few years have brought to perfection. The piece was born before its time, into a world which could only dimly sense its value. Now conditions are ripe, and the song has come triumpantly back.

It is impossible to hear it day after day and night after night without realizing that the piece fits its style of performance as a glove the hand. That close mouthed, intimate crooning, which can give so exciting a twinge to the word "cried" and can suggest that the singer is heroically winking back his tears as each phrase approaches its climax, is the one method of delivery capable of laying the feeling content of the song before a listener in all its tremendous urgency. And the inner character of the piece justifies—or rather demands!—an occasional break or near break in the voice. Those were wonderful days and nights on the road!

In garages and drug stores and restaurants and hotel lobbies the radios blare uninterruptedly along. Symphonies and dance tunes and scripts and recipes succeed one another relentlessly—and nobody seems to care what is on. Something has to be on, of course, for a moment of silence on the part of the radio seems to create an uneasy feeling among the groups of people who have been talking or playing cards or working within range of the instrument.

Have psychologists yet investigated the possibility that a great part of radio's popularity may be due to its ability to provide a vaguely pleasant sort of general conditioning? Perhaps the low muttering of scripts and the dimly sensed texture of musical instruments are becoming almost necessary backgrounds to hour by hour living. And what the scripts and the music happen to be saying seems to be a matter of comparatively small moment.

The importance of such an investigation cannot be overestimated. A new era in radio might result. If it turns out that most persons do indeed care everything for the mere sound of the broadcast and nothing at all for its sense, the whole profession of radio program building will be revolutionized. Supplying the gentle stimulus that resides in the noise alone will take the place of actually thinking up new programs for every fifteen or thirty minute spot. If radio does come to this the listeners in the garages and drug stores and restaurants and lobbies may not even notice that a change has been made.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Without having had much chance to relax, the Illinois Symphony orchestra embarks on its summer season next Thursday night at the University of Chicago. In Hutchinson court on the university campus, 58th street and University avenue, the first of six open air concerts will then be given. The remaining five will follow weekly on Thursday evenings through Aug. 10, with the exception of July 20. All concerts are open to the general public free. In case of rain they will be held in Mandel hall, adjacent to Hutchinson court.

Izler Solomon will conduct this week's program on which are listed the following numbers: Overture, "In Springtime," by Goldmark; Symphony No. 4, F minor, op. 36, by Tschaikowsky; "The Moldau," by Smetana; Spanish dance, from "La Vida Breve," by De Falla; waltz, "Tales from the Vienna Woods," by Johann Strauss, and the prelude to Wagner's "Die Meistersinger."

A second series of outdoor concerts will be given by the orchestra in the Washington park amphitheater, Wilmette, beginning July 12. This set will continue regularly on Wednesday nights through Aug. 30.

◆

Two recitals by faculty members of the De Paul university school of music are scheduled for Tuesday and Friday afternoons. On the earlier one Sergei Tarnowsky, pianist, and Richard Czerwonky, violinist, will pool their acknowledged abilities in performances of Brahms' Sonata in A major and Richard Strauss' only sonata for this combination of instruments. Friday's recital will offer two groups apiece by Magadalen Massman, pianist, and Margaret Lester, soprano. The latter will devote one of her groups to songs by her husband and accompanist, William Lester.

These appearances by faculty members and students will continue throughout the summer school term on Tuesdays and Fridays. They are held in the De Paul Little theater, 64 East Lake street, and no charge is made for admission.

◆

A mass in F minor by Corrado Alfani and Jane Ogden Hunter will be premiered on a program of sacred choral music to be presented by the Lorel Singers in the grand ballroom of the Drake hotel today at 3:30 o'clock. Director of the group is one of the composers, Mrs. Hunter. Soloists for the occasion are Lorraine Westphal, Dorothea Drake, and Junis Kuehn, sopranos; Evelyn V. Johnson, contralto; George Fisher, tenor, and Robert J. Merki, baritone.

◆

The Rockefeller Memorial chapel, 59th street and Woodlawn avenue, presents half hour choral and organ concerts several days of the week at 7 o'clock. Those engaged to perform this week include Mario Salvador, organist, Sunday; Hazel Quinney, organist, Tuesday; the Oriana a cappella choir, Paul Vernon, director, Wednesday, and Gilman Chase, organist, Thursday.

◆

Members of the children's group of the Katherine Dunham dance school will appear in their first program on Wednesday, 8:30 o'clock, at the Abraham Lincoln center, 700 Oakwood boulevard. "Suite in Modern," with music by Bach, "Chopiniana," "Folk Suite" and "Fiesta" with music by Navarro make up the recital. Carmella El Khoury, Spanish dancer, will be guest performer in the last item. John Pratt has designed the costumes.

◆

This department was justly taken to task by a correspondent in "The Voice of the People" for neglecting to mention the seventy-fifth birthday of Richard Strauss. It fell on Sunday, June 11. The great German composer celebrated the event in part by conducting the Vienna Philharmonic orchestra in the former Austrian capital. His Sinfonia Domestica formed part of the program.

◆

Moritz and Hedwig Rosenthal, renowned pianists and pedagogs, having recently completed their teaching session at the Chicago conservatory, now move to Toronto, Canada, to hold master classes at that city's conservatory of music from July 3 to 29.

Mount Holyoke Two Unit Plan Ends First Cycle

[Dr. Evans' booklet on methods of selection of a college or university may be purchased at Tribune Public Service offices for 10 cents, or 15 cents by mail. He will answer questions concerning colleges and universities, but will not recommend any specific institution.]

By the Rev. John Evans.

Commencement at Mount Holyoke college, South Hadley, Mass., this month closed the first cycle of an educational experiment for a small group. The plan, instituted four years ago, is known as the two-unit plan, the idea for which originated with Miss Elizabeth G. Kimball, an alumna and member of the faculty, who has directed and advised the group since the plan was started.

Success of the plan, even measured by the rigid standards of the accepted liberal arts course, is manifested in the record of the group which was graduated this year. Among the seven seniors, four have been elected to Phi Beta Kappa, five are doing honor work, and three, taking advantage of high academic rating, are each spending a year at the Universities of Munich, Copenhagen, and Paris.

◆

At the beginning of each academic year Mount Holyoke college accepts a small group of students for a plan of study that limits the number of subjects requiring a student's attention during the year. Students for this two unit plan are selected for their eagerness to learn, and a mature attitude toward their work which will enable them to pursue individualized programs. They are released from the usual five course curriculum, and build their program solely around two subjects.

Each student has a faculty adviser, and she does her work by means of conferences with instructors who aid in discovering the best methods of gaining mastery of the subject. In some cases a student is advised to attend regular classes in connection with her conferences.

The two unit group is housed by itself for convenience, because much work is done outside the campus and conferences, not being classes, can be held as and when desirable. But this by no means implies that the group is divorced from any aspect of college life. Members of this year's class have all been prominent in extracurricular activities like the glee club, the dramatic club, the fellowship of faith committees, and student reporters.

"The two unit plan has, in the short time of its trial, demonstrated that students of superior intellectual ability can reach mental maturity more quickly than students similarly endowed can under the ordinary course system," says Miss Kimball. "The opportunity to gain wide knowledge over a defined field in a short time enables students to grasp the subject earlier and to interpret it for themselves. Thus they learn to deal independently and effectively with larger and more complex problems confronting them later in their studies."

◆

The two unit plan appears particularly to advantage in the study of foreign languages and literatures. In linguistic and critical training, the conference method provides more time than would be available in classes for working over faulty diction and pronunciation.

To the eclectic type of academic mind, the appeal of the two unit plan depends upon what Elenor Withington, a 1939 senior, terms the "immediacy of curiosity." Miss Withington was a student who "read, wondered, and was moved to investigate upon that wondering," and so she became extremely interested in the humanities and studied philosophy, Greek poetry, religion, and English literature.

This example is mentioned lest any might be led to think that the two unit plan is lacking in broad cultural background. But units with special opportunities have been developed in almost every subject in the college curriculum. The two unit plan, therefore, combines all that a liberal arts course is supposed to implant, together with rapidly acquired knowledge in a special subject. As illustrative of the concentration and of the extent which may be obtained at the same time, the two unit program of another student may be outlined.

◆

Specially interested in archaeology, this student made it the core of her program combining Greek with it each year. Her second year was spent at the University of Copenhagen studying English literature and German in addition to Greek archaeology. Her other units have included French, Latin, geology, classical and modern history, and the history of art from Sumerian period to WPA murals.

"That this is a well rounded educational program must be conceded," says Miss Marianna McNees, a graduate representative of the college. "Moreover, it is a program that not only satisfies the individual ambition it has also provided tools for the pursuit of a profession should the occasion arise."

Good Morning!

I think we should have us a wax works in this country! Something à la Madame Tussaud's in Paris, with a special "Marvels in Makeup" corner.

Here should be preserved for the edification of future generations, great players as the Creator—and man—made 'em. For instance, Helen Hayes as Victoria Regina, Muni as Pasteur and Juarez, Brian Aherne as Maximilian—and Robert Donat as "Mr. Chips."

Donat's depiction of the Hilton hero is one of the most remarkable achievements in makeup and characterization the screen has ever known. . . . And never did picture follow more tenderly and faithfully a simple, beautiful, and deeply moving story than does the cinema, "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," adhere to the tale of the shy, lonely professor of Latin who, while training successive generations of British youth, grew to be one of the beloved traditions of the English school, Brookfield, where he labored devotedly from after graduation to the age of 83.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer wisely decided to produce the film in their English studios with a practically all-English cast. Consequently, backgrounds of gray Gothic English school buildings, campus, and countryside are authentic. The good dialog is delivered with believable accent. . . . And in the brilliant and appealing Donat is a "Mr. Chips" who must make James Hilton's heart sing for joy. In the book the fictional character was so real! In the movie he lives just as truly.

The action picks him up as young, timid, but intrepid Prof. Chipping arrives at Brookfield—and gets off on the wrong foot with everybody. . . . Despite his longing to "belong" he remains an outsider to all until his marriage, when, under the sunshine of the love, faith, and inspiration of a lovely and gracious woman, he expands and learns to make happy contacts with his pupils and fellow instructors, contacts that remain unbroken after Katherine has passed on.

The romance, merely suggested in the book, has been made an important part of the picture—a delightful and deeply moving sequence.

You'll love Mrs. Chipping, as portrayed by a winsome and beautiful newcomer, Greer Garson. I hope we'll be seeing her very often. She reminded me some of Anna Q. Nilsson. Paul von Hernried, as the instructor who lures Chipping to the Tyrol for a vacation, during which time he meets Katherine, gives a perfect performance. . . . Terry Kilburn is excellent as four generations of Colleys. Not a member of the cast ever goes wrong, as a matter of fact.

The story develops easily, absorbingly, under grand direction.

You smile often—often smiling through your tears.

You feel that your world is nicer because "Mr. Chips" has been a part of it.

See you tomorrow.

Rainer on Stage.

Luise Rainer returned to the legitimate theater via the London stage recently. She is being starred in Henry Sherek's production of "Behold the Bride," an adaptation by Geoffrey Kerr of a play by Jacques Deval. This same drama bobbed up in San Diego, Cal., not long ago as "Broom for the Bride," with Irene Rich. As "Soubrette" it was also to be seen last summer in one of the Massachusetts "straw hat" theaters.

A New Instrument

A new instrument combining the body of a violin and the finger board of a lute has been invented by Howard Linn Edsall of Philadelphia. Appropriately enough, he calls it a "violute." It is played, as is the lute, by plucking the strings with the fingers or with a pick, giving it the tone qualities of that instrument; but by using the resonating principles employed in a Stradivarius, the volume is increased beyond the resources of the original forms. The inventor believes that the "violute" will find a place in such scores at Mahler's "The Song of the Earth," which calls for a mandolin. The latter is too weak for the modern orchestra and electrical amplification spoils the tone color. Hence, the "violute" makes an ideal replacement for the mandolin.

THE BISHOP SWING CASE

Wendy Bishop is the eye appeal of Bunny Berigan's swing band, a July 1 entry in the Hotel Sherman's Panther room swing stakes. Wendy handles the vocals for the year old orchestra.

Jean's Eyes Meet Another's, and at That Instant She Is Given Her Most Important Clew

By Rex Stout

THE STORY TO DATE

● Jean Farris, owner of a fabric business, is in love with a half Indian, Guy Carew, whose American millionaire father has been murdered in the tomb he had built for his Indian wife, Tsianina. Before making a momentous decision Guy's father always consulted Tsianina's spirit at the tomb. If the sun fell on her face he must give up his plan. If no light came in he should go ahead with his plan. At sunrise of the fatal day he had gone to the tomb to decide whether or not he should marry Portia Tritt, young stylist. Only three persons besides Carew were allowed in the tomb—an old Indian, Woodrow Wilson; Amory Buysse, curator of an Indian museum founded by Carew, and Guy, the son. Also at Carew's Lucky Hills estate at Mount Kisco when the murder occurred were Amory Buysse; Leo Kranz, textile importer; Melville Barth of Wall street, and his wife. Clutched in Carew's hand was a piece of red bayeta yarn. There are tales of a former romance between Guy and Portia Tritt. Guy's alibi was that Portia Tritt was in his room from 2 a. m. until after the murder. At a fashion show at Mrs. Barth's estate all members of the fatal house party are present. Jean Farris is wearing a suit made of bayeta obtained from a jacket which Guy had given her. Guy arrives with Portia Tritt. Portia admires the suit. When Guy asks Jean to give him the suit she indignantly refuses. Alone in the garden, just as a whippoorwill calls, an unseen assailant knocks Jean unconscious. She wakes up to find her suit gone! Jean suspects Guy. He denies the attack and tells her he wanted the suit because of the thread clutched in his dead father's hand. Jean realizes that her assailant must be the murderer. A detective, posing as a fashion reporter, gets a sample of the bayeta from Jean's partner, Eileen Delaney. It is identical with the strand found in Carew's hand. Jean is arrested and undergoes an all-night grilling. In the morning Guy comes to headquarters and admits he had given Jean the yarn. To square himself with Jean he confesses his alibi of Portia Tritt being in his room was false. He is arrested for murder. Jean asks Mrs. Barth to invite the suspects to her home. She plans to enact the attack upon her, hoping to trap the guilty one.

BRYAN leaned back and regarded Portia Tritt in silence. At length he sighed and started again.

"You know, Miss Tritt, there are two or three ways of doing what I'm going to do now. I could easily ask you some trick questions that would put sweat on your brow—excuse the expression. That might be fun, and it would serve you right, but it would be a waste of time.

"The quickest and best way is just to tell you that we know you've lied from the beginning about what you did that night between two a. m. and seven-twenty-five. The last time you did it was yesterday afternoon, to me. Well, that's out. That lie's no good any more. So suppose you go go ahead and tell me what you really did do."

Portia Tritt was smiling at him, but the smile was confined to her lips, for her eyes were too intent on their specific job to join in. She said with a little laugh: "Really, inspector! Of all the tricks, why do you pick that one? It's the most obvious of all."

"It's not a trick this time. I suppose if I told you that Guy Carew has been arrested under a charge of murder, and gave you my word of honor on it, you wouldn't believe that either."

She smiled again. "Certainly not. Would you expect me to believe that sort of nonsense?"

With a grunt Bryan pushed a button on his desk. He observed grimly: "If it wasn't for the waste of time I swear to God I'd lock you up till this time tomorrow and see what you think of it then. Did you ever hear of something called obstructing justice? And something nicer still, conspiring to obstruct justice?—O, Burke, are the rags out with it yet?"

"Yes, sir. All of 'em."

"Got one?"

"Yes, sir."

"Bring it here."

• • •

HE SAT and looked at her. The smile had left her lips, and the banners of indignation and defiance no longer flew in her eyes, but they were quite steady. When Sergeant Burke reëntered she didn't turn around, and she gave him only a casual glance as he passed on his way to the desk to hand his superior a newspaper. Bryan waved it away. "Give it to Miss Tritt."

She took it, and it screamed at her:

GUY CAREW ARRESTED FOR MURDER!

Then Bryan lost her face, for it was bent over the paper, bent low. It took her minutes to read what there was of it on the front page, and Bryan let her alone.

She lifted her head, and the paper fell from her knees to the floor. Apparently she had forgotten to breathe while reading, for her whole body shook with the urgency of a shivering inhalation.

"My God!" she muttered. "It's ghastly."

"Yeah, it usually is. I warn you, Miss Tritt, there'll be no tendency around here, or at White Plains either, to let you down easy. You did obstruct justice. You told the police a lie that gummed the works from the beginning, and you stuck to it. There's only one thing to do now—come absolutely clean, and be darned careful while you're at it. Tell me now exactly what you did do that night from two o'clock on. If you come clean with me here and now, so I can start a check-up, I won't keep you and I won't put a charge on you. Not for the present at least, if the check-up is good."

She sat and stared at the newspaper, her lips pressed tight, her brows drawn together, stiff and motionless. After a while she muttered, "It's hard to think straight with—under the circumstances." She sat and stared some more.

Suddenly she pulled herself up, looked Bryan in the eye, and told him: "All right. You say if I tell you what I did I can go. Everything happened as I said it did up to two o'clock. I returned to the house at one and went to my room and sat there. Around two I went to bed, and I slept some, but not much and not very soundly. At half-past five I got out of bed again, and a little later I got dressed.

"At six-thirty exactly, which was the time the rays of the sun were supposed to come through the walls of the tomb, I left the house at the end of the north wing corridor and cut right across the lawn and through the grove of evergreens. I must have——"

"See any one?"

"No. Not a sign of any one. I must have got to the tomb inclosure about twenty minutes to seven, or a little before. What I intended to do was to be at the gap when Val Carew came out. I stepped into the gap and saw the Indian on the ground. His hands and feet were tied with strips of his shirt, and he was gagged.

"Then I saw the door of the tomb was partly open, and I ran to it and tried to see through the opening, but it was only a crack, so I pushed it wider, and saw something on the floor. I went in, and it was Val Carew, and he was dead. I kneeled down by him to make sure, and then I stood up, and I don't know how long I stood there.

"When I left I could see the Indian lying over by the gap, but I didn't go out of the inclosure that way. I went around and left by the gap at the other end and kept beyond the shrubbery to circle back to the house, because I didn't want any one to see me. Perhaps that was foolish, but I only half knew what I was doing. I got back in by the door I had left unlocked and went to my room and undressed and got into bed. I had decided to let no one know I had been out. But lying there in bed——"

She shivered. "It was horrible. Val Carew lying dead out there, and no one knowing, and time going on all over that house. . . . I got up and dressed and went to Guy's room and knocked on the door and went in. He was up and dressed. I told him. He was so stunned he couldn't believe me, and I was still telling him when there was another knock on the door. It was the Indian. He had come to and worked himself loose and gone to the tomb——"

"Yeah, I know. While you were in the tomb why did you take that lance from the wall, and why did you go up the stone steps to the platform?"

"I didn't." She stared. "O, you mean my finger prints. But I've told you how they got there. Val Carew took me——"

"Was that the truth, maybe?"

"It was." She looked in his eyes. "I realize I'm handicapped now. I told a lie, and everything I say is suspected. But I told that one lie, and that's all."

"Maybe. You've just described how you lay in bed after you got back from the tomb, feeling horrible. Guy Carew says that you told him that you decided he had killed his father and you went to his room to see how he would act. How about it?"

"I—I didn't. That isn't true."

"You mean you didn't tell him that?"

"Possibly I told him something like that. Much later. But I didn't really—I was much too shocked——"

"I'll bet you were. I'd hate to tell you, Miss Tritt, what I think it would take to shock you. And I'm warning you, if you don't give me everything straight this time you will be shocked. Why did you tell the police you had been in Guy's room from two o'clock on? When did you think that up?"

"I didn't think it up. It just—I knew, of course, that he would be suspected, and I knew he couldn't be guilty, and I thought it would save him embarrassment, even misery——"

"Isn't it true that you and Guy thought it up together? That you concocted it in his room?"

"No. We didn't."

"Isn't it true that he admitted his guilt and you agreed to shield him——"

"No. Why should he admit guilt? He wasn't guilty."

"Isn't it true that you made a bargain with him that if he would marry you you would provide him with an alibi to safeguard him from a charge of murder?"

That, or something like it, went on for four hours, but essentially she surrendered nothing. All Bryan had on her at the finish was that she had lied about her movements on the fatal night, and he had had that when they began.

But he let her go. He had said he would, and, besides, there was no good reason to keep her. When she got to her feet she was trembling, but soon had herself composed, and a few minutes later, down on the street, she appeared quite natural and her voice was quite steady as she gave a taxi driver the address of Nyasset House.

• • •

MELVILLE BARTH'S frosty eyes glittered with annoyance. He demanded irritably of his wife: "How the devil could I? He's in jail charged with murder. Hutchings and Osborn want blood. The brokers say they're out of it, they're only bookkeepers. The final settlement must be by Tuesday noon, and I can't settle. For God's sake quit asking me about it; it only aggravates me. And this idiotic business—these people downstairs—why did you agree to it?"

"Haven't I told you?" Mrs. Barth sighed. "She said it would be a favor to Guy Carew. And after all, Mel, it was in our house, at least on our grounds, that she was beaten unconscious and had her clothes stolen and had to walk to our door and ring the bell in her underwear. If that happened to me anywhere—at Mabel Clement's place, for instance——" Mrs. Barth shivered.

"Anyhow, I told her I'd do it, and they're all waiting downstairs, and you're supposed to be there. Another thing, I thought if I didn't humor her there's no telling how much trouble she could make—I had enough of it with those three detectives this morning, all over the place and asking questions and poking around, climbing the fence and falling into shrubbery——"

"Very well. It can't be helped." He put on a coat and followed his wife downstairs.

Two minutes later a procession of six people left the house and took the circling path to the right toward the farther driveway. Jean Farris and Mrs. Barth were in the lead, behind them were Leo Kranz and then Barth, and Amory Buysse and Woodrow Wilson were in the rear. Buysse was dressed approximately as he had been on Thursday, but Wilson wore his overalls, with blue shirt and red tie and no hat.

They followed the others across the graveled drive and another broad expanse of clipped lawn, along the edge of the cutting garden with outbuildings at one end, and through a wide stretch of meadow grass. From there the boundary fence of the estate could be seen, almost completely concealed by a riot of shrubbery. The goal apparently was ten yards short of it, for there Jean stopped, brushing the edge of a dense thicket of birch saplings.

"This is the place, all right. I know it by that bush, the one with the berries." Her heart was pumping.

"I want to show all of you exactly where I was lying." She moved. "My head was right here. Come closer, Mr. Wilson, if you don't mind. I want the opinion of all of you—you, too, Mr. Buysse. My head was there, and I was on my back with my eyes closed, and—I don't believe I've mentioned this before—I heard a noise——"

Everybody jumped. Not at Jean's words, but at a shrill, ear-splitting note that shattered the air. Jean, not, of course, herself startled, had her eyes strained to watch them. She had spent hours thinking about this moment and had reached conclusions about it, but it happened so swiftly, and her faculties were all so concentrated in her eyesight, that she didn't immediately realize that her conclusions had been completely justified.

It happened precisely as she had calculated. When that piercing note sounded, five heads had turned with a jerk and five pairs of eyes had sought to penetrate the surrounding gathering gloom, but then almost immediately one of the pairs of eyes, and only one, had turned swiftly to look at her, and she had met them, and he stood so close to her that even through the dusk she could see the change when the eyes realized what they were doing. They turned from her again.

There was movement among the others. Mrs. Barth was exclaiming: "My God, it scared me to death! But we were talking—I never heard of a whippoorwill—good heavens, what have you got there?"

• • •

THAT was for Buysse, who had acted. He had dashed into the thicket of birch at their elbows, there had been the sound of a brief scramble, and now he emerged dragging something. They all stared. Jean muttered weakly, "O, please, please——" But no one heard her. They were staring at Buysse's catch as he dragged it closer and stood it up, grasping its collar. Leo Kranz stepped closer to take a look. Mrs. Barth cried, "But what—what——"

Barth demanded coldly, "Who the devil are you, and what were you doing in there?"

The man gulped, with Buysse still gripping his collar. He was at least a foot shorter than Buysse, with a little black mustache, big ears, and eyes popping out. He gulped again. Barth demanded, "Well?"

Jean saw there was no way out of it. She moved over beside him. "Let go of him, Mr. Buysse. It's all right; he's—he's a friend of mine. May I—Mrs. Barth, this is Mr. Tamber. Mr. Roy Tamber. I brought him with me when I came."

"You brought him—Miss Farris, this is ridiculous——"

Tamber found his voice: "I didn't expect—I didn't know——"

"All right, Mr. Tamber. I'm sorry. I'll pay you double." Jean was trembling with excitement; she couldn't help it. "I may as well explain, because it's all over anyway. I said I wanted to try an experiment, and I did. I brought Mr. Tamber with me and smuggled him in here. He makes noises for the Federal Broadcasting company, and I wanted him to be a whippoorwill, because a whippoorwill sang close to me Thursday evening just before some one struck me. I wanted——"

Barth put in impatiently: "Absolute insanity. I don't want people smuggled into my grounds——"

"Of course you don't, Mr. Barth. I didn't want to be knocked unconscious in your grounds, either, and I wanted to find out who did it. I assure you I'm not insane, and one proof of it is that I did find out who struck me."

"My dear child——"

"Yes, Mrs. Barth, I did. I know now absolutely and conclusively which one of you came from behind those bushes Thursday evening and hit me on the head and took my clothes. I can't prove it, not yet. But there must be a way to prove it, and I'll find it somehow. I want to thank you, Mrs. Barth, for giving me the chance to do this. Come on, Mr. Tamber, I'll smuggle you out again."

She moved. Tamber, who had been released, moved after her.

"But, Miss Farris, you must explain——"

"I think the rest of us have a right——"

But Jean, with Mr. Tamber trotting after her, was gone into the dusk.

As, in Jean's roadster, they rolled along the curving secondary road leading to Portchester, Mr. Tamber cleared his throat and finally found his voice. "Of-course——" There was a squeak, and he cleared his throat again and started over. "Of course, I knew there might be some danger involved in it. I agreed to it, really, for the adventure. I didn't mention it to you, but you must have known I had read all about you in the morning paper. Quite an unusual name, Jean Farris."

He went on talking as they rolled into Portchester, turned right on the post road, and continued south. Jean was aware that now and then he turned to look behind them, but there was no interruption to his verbal flow. The lights of a thousand thoughts flashed along the avenues of her mind, but it was impossible to shut her ears completely to his voice, or even to his words. Finally, and abruptly, she told him:

"I've just remembered that I have to make a stop this side of Larchmont to call on somebody, and I don't know how long it will take. It might be hours. Do you mind if I drop you off at the Rye railroad station? There's sure to be a train before long."

Mr. Tamber said that would suit him fine.

They rolled into the Rye station plaza, circled a parked truck, and came to a stop. Jean offered a good-by, together with an expression of gratitude for his performance and regret for its unfortunate sequel. But Mr. Tamber made no move to open his door, and Jean suddenly exclaimed, "O, my Lord, I forgot; I haven't paid you!"

Jean hastily got into her bag and explored. "I said I would pay you double, but I don't believe I have that much. Here's thirty dollars; will that do? I'll send you a check for the balance."

"This is quite all right." Mr. Tamber climbed out. "Good-by, Miss Farris, good-by, and thank you."

He had backed off a step, but now he came close again, stuck his head in the window, and said in a tone low and hurried but carefully clear, "You ought to know that that car stopped under a tree at the far end, New York TZ9205, has been following us ever since we left." Then he disappeared inside.

She peered the length of the plaza and saw that there was a car parked under a tree with its dim lights on, but at that distance she could make out neither its license number nor its occupant. She shrugged, engaged the clutch, rolled out of the plaza, and headed back for the post road.

By the time she was two miles south of Rye, some five or six minutes later, she was wishing that she had done differently—at least that on leaving the plaza she had circled close enough to make out the license number—for it appeared certain that she was indeed being followed.

• • •

THE southbound trafic at that hour, ten o'clock Saturday night, was thin. Thrice she had slowed down to twenty-five and then suddenly accelerated to fifty, keeping watch in the mirror, and there was unquestionably a car behind which neither overtook her when she slackened nor lost much ground when she speeded up.

Her feeling was not so much alarm or even curiosity as it was indignation. Whoever it might be, it was a damned impertinence. The indignation got hotter in her breast. She pressed the pedal until the speedometer showed sixty, and kept it there for a mile, until the follower had had time to get into the pace, and then suddenly stepepd on the brake, hugged the curb, and came to a quick stop.

She saw in the mirror that the pursuer was stopping, too, fifty yards back. That was worse than impertinent, it was insolent. With the top of the roadster down, all she had to do to get a good look was to twist from under the wheel and kneel on the seat, which she did. A highway light was so placed that she couldn't make out who was in the car through the windshield, but the license plate did show TZ9205, or something very like it.

With a mutter of impatience she moved, thinking to get out and walk back, but with her hand on the door lever she stopped, arrested by a sudden little chill of fear. Even on that main highway, with cars roaring by in both directions, it was quite possible, if a man was sufficiently desperate and determined . . .

She scrambled back behind the wheel, put the gear in, and started off. In the mirror she saw that the other car started, too. All right, to the devil with him. Her speedometer went to fifty. Let him play tag if he wanted to and see what good it would do him. Fifty-five, sixty. On a curve her tires whined, and she eased up a little. She realized that she had gone to sixty not by deliberate decision but because the little chill of fear had spread through her blood almost to the indignity of panic, and that infuriated her.

What the devil was there to be afraid of? Well, even on the lighted post road there were short stretches flanked by woods—and even where the lights were bright, after all, she was in an open car—and a shot, coming from behind, into the back of her head as she whirled along at sixty miles an hour—and she realized that her teeth were clamped tight, her jaw rigid, as she gripped the steering wheel——

It was intolerable. So as she entered the thickening of habitations which was Larchmont she slowed down to thirty, and two minutes later, arriving at the array of lights from a cluster of filling stations, she slowed down, rolled on by a short piece, and stopped.

When a glance in the mirror showed her that the follower had likewise stopped, the same distance behind as previously, she pushed the gear to reverse and started to back. Back she went, smoothly, alongside the curb, her head turned, her left hand controling the wheel, until her rear bumper gently kissed the front bumper of TZ9205. Then she stopped, pulled the gear to neutral, pulled the hand brake, and switched off the ignition.

A door of TZ9205 was flung open, and she sat motionless with her head turned again and stared as Amory Buysse and Woodrow Wilson clambered out and approached her.

"Well!" she said, and breathed deep. "What the dickens do you mean by following me like this?"

• • •

THE Indian was stretching his wrinkled neck to peer at her from behind his companion's shoulder. Buysse, at the running board, towered above her and had to look down. He said calmly: "We thought we ought to have a talk with you, right away."

"Did you have to sneak along behind me?"

"I wouldn't say we were sneaking exactly. We just wanted to have a talk with you tonight, and we didn't like to stop you—out on the road like this——"

"What do you want to talk about?"

"Well——" Buysse lifted a foot to the running board and crossed his forearms along the rim of the door. "For one thing, we'd like to know is it Wilson here or is it me you're trying to frame for cracking you on the head? Maybe you're going to say it was Wilson here."

"No. It was Leo Kranz."

A grunt came from the Indian. Buysse peered in silence at Jean. She said: "I know it was. I'm absolutely sure. But how am I going to prove it? How is any one going to prove it?"

Wilson grunted again. Buysse finally took a deep breath. He said: "It might be. Kranz. It might be. I'm willing to believe you without proof, but that don't get Guy out of jail. If you've got any ideas I can help with——"

"I don't know." Jean frowned at him. "I had one, and I've used it up. But it isn't possible for a man to do a thing, actually commit a murder, and leave no way of proving it—is it? There are so many things—of course, not the weapon, because it was there in the tomb. And no finger prints, because he wore gloves. And if no one saw him on his way to the tomb or coming back—but there must be something.

"For instance, the jacket. He must have worn Guy's jacket. He could have got it from the closet in the hall without being seen, but what did he do with it afterward? He couldn't have returned it to the closet, or the police would have found it.

"After the yarn was found in Val Carew's hand they searched everywhere for bayeta, so it couldn't have been in the house. And if Kranz hid it somewhere, where did he hide it and why? And how did he get it into Guy's room the afternoon I was there and Guy gave it to me? He wasn't there that day. You see, Mr. Buysse? There's an idea, even if it's nothing wonderful. Where was the jacket from the morning of the murder until the day Guy gave it to me?"

"I had it."

Jean stared, and Buysse jerked around to stare with her at the Indian. He, in the light from the filling station glare, looked imperturbable.

Buysse demanded: "You had what? None of your damned tricks, now."

"Me?" Wilson grunted. "No tricks. I had the young one's jacket."

"You had it when?"

"All that time. Like she say."

"Where did you get it?"

"It was by me. When my life came to my head that morning. When my life came back I work to get free, first my hands, then my mouth, then my feet. Then I look around, I see the young one's jacket on the grass under the hedge. Then I see the door open. I go and look. I see Tsianina's man dead. That look good; now he not marry other woman.

"I go get jacket and shake head at it. I think Tsianina's son big damn fool; after he kill Tsianina's man he leave jacket when he tie me, then forget. I have many cache where I keep things, no one can find. I put jacket in cache, go to house to see young one. Other woman there. He not act big surprise, damn fool again. He send me go tell you——"

"You damn jackass!" Buysse blurted. "All the time you've been sure Guy did it, and I've been sure you did! Is this the truth?"

The Indian shrugged. "Now this woman say Kranz kill Tsianina's man. Good trick. Young one in jail, get him out. Get him out, put Kranz in, everything okeh."

"Where did you cache the jacket?"

Wilson grunted. "Maybe show you."

"You bet you will. Did you take it to Guy's room the day he found it there?"

"Me? Sure."

"Why did you do that?"

"Think maybe young one worried where jacket. Me not thief, me not keep anyway. Good day come, take it from cache, take to his room.

"Plenty truth, my friend Buysse. Plenty."

• • •

BUYSSE eyed him a moment in silence, then turned to Jean. "I think it's the truth. I've known him thirty years."

"You see!" Jean put a hand on his arm. "What did I tell you? There's bound to be proof, if only somebody will find it!"

"Well, I wouldn't exactly call that proof that Kranz murdered Val Carew——"

"No, but it helps to prove that Guy didn't! Would he have put his own jacket under the hedge and left it there? And if he had, wouldn't he have asked Wilson later what he had done with it? Wouldn't any one realize that if he had done the murder and left the jacket under the hedge, then when he found it that day in his room——"

Jean stopped with a frown. After a little she went on. "No, that wouldn't fit. It's too complicated for me, at least the way my head is now. I'm about half dead. But what are we going to do about this jacket business and Wilson? Who are we going to tell?"

Buysse slowly shook his head. "Got me. Up to twenty minutes ago I was giving odds that it was Wilson that killed Val, and for a plugged nickel I'd have broke his back for it, but I wouldn't have liked to see the cops get him, and no more would I now. And while this whippoorwill story of yours is good and fancy——"

"It is not fancy! It's absolute fact. And some one has to be told about Wilson and the jacket, but who? Do you know Orlik, Guy's lawyer?"

"I've met him. Got grease in his brains. He made then turn Wilson loose at White Plains."

"I don't care if he did, I don't like him. He wanted me to run away, and, anyway, he thinks Guy is guilty, so he's no good." Joan's frown deepened. "I know another lawyer, but he wouldn't like—I mean, I know him personally." She stopped in perplexity. "It's utterly ridiculous; we've found this out, and what can we do with it? Unless we tell Inspector Bryan." She nodded. "I believe that's it."

Buyse objected, "He'd only lock Wilson up again."

"No, he wouldn't. Not only that, I may be naïve, and I've never hated any one as I hated him last night, but I believe that what he wants is the truth, and he'll work to get it. That's the thing to do, I'm sure it is. We'll go to him together in the morning, and take Wilson."

"Who the devil are you, and what were you doing in there?"

Pessimism to be avoided today. Strive for balanced viewpoint; guard writings and business promises, too. The week ahead calls for very careful planning and handling, for irritations appear unexpectedly all along the line.

When Schooling Fails

The amount of education a man or woman has is by no means as important as the quality of it. The true meaning of education is development of that which is within the character of the individual, drawing out the good of the inner man. Plastering facts on his memory is not real education. If a man has finished a university course and is also dishonest his schooling has been a big failure.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

Last week I set down the main features of the four-five no trump convention: the requirements for the bid itself, and the arbitrary method of responding to show aces, or kings of bid suits. Now we shall take up the lesser known aspects of this valuable slam convention.

When a four no trump bid shows "two aces and the king of a bid suit," the "bid suit" must be a genuine biddable suit in the hand of either partner. The kings of suits bid artificially do not count in these requirements.

A suit is bid "artificially" only when it is:

[a] A bid in the opponents' suit, to show control in that suit.

[b] Part of an artificial slam convention.

Likewise, the responding hand, after his partner's four no trump bid, can respond with five no trump when he has one ace and the kings of all genuine bid suits. For example:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 heart | 1 spade | 2 diamonds | Pass |
| 3 hearts | Pass | 3 spades | Pass |
| 4 hearts | Pass | 4 no trump | Pass |

The "kings of bid suits" in this case are the kings of hearts and diamonds, but not the king of spades. North obviously has no genuine spade suit; he bid spades to show control. The spade king is not important as a key card. South must respond with five no trump if he holds:

♠ 9 ♥ A K 10 9 8 4 ♦ K 4 3 ♣ J 7 5

◆

When a four no trump bid is made, and the partner does not have an ace in his hand, but is void in a suit, he may bid that suit as though it were an ace if it is lower in rank than the eventual trump suit.

However, if his void suit is higher ranking than the eventual trump suit, he should not show the void for fear that there will be duplication of values and that the contract will be forced too high.

A void is never counted as an ace in making the five no trump response. When partner bids four no trump, and you hold an ace and a void, show the ace, but do not bid five no trump.

◆

When a player who has made an opening forcing two bid later uses the four no trump bid, he expects the same responses as when the opening bid was a suit bid of one with this important exception:

The responder, holding an ace or a void in an unbid suit, must show the ace or void whether the suit is higher or lower in rank than the eventual trump suit, and whether his hand contains added values or not.

With the bidding as follows:

| Opener | Responder |
|---|---|
| 2 hearts | 3 no trump |
| 4 no trump | |

If the responder's hand is:

♠ A Q 6 ♥ 7 2 ♦ 8 5 4 2 ♣ 7 6 4 3

he has only the bare 1½ honor tricks shown by his three no trump response and if he shows the spade ace it will force the bidding to six hearts. Nevertheless, his response must be five spades. The opener may have a sure slam in his own hand if the holding of the responding hand is ♠ A Q x instead of ♠ K Q J.

◆

In a few cases, the bid of four no trump does not necessarily show the conventional requirements, and partner is allowed to pass. One exception occurs when the responding hand has made a jump two or three no trump response, indicating a certain number of aces and kings. For example:

| South | North |
|---|---|
| 1 club | 3 no trump |
| 4 no trump [not forcing] | |

The four no trump by South is simply a raise to show about four honor tricks. Similarly:

| South | North |
|---|---|
| 1 spade | 2 no trump |
| 4 no trump [not forcing] | |

South shows about 4½ honor tricks and asks his partner to continue if he has better than a minimum two no trump bid, say about 3 plus honor tricks.

◆

Another exception occurs when the bidder has shown on previous rounds of bidding by his no trump responses that he does not wish to reach a slam contract, but does wish to play the hand in no trump. For instance:

| South | North |
|---|---|
| 1 diamond | 1 no trump[minimum] |
| 3 spades[forcing] | 3 no trump |
| 4 diamonds | 4 no trump[not forcing] |

North made a minimum no trump response on the first round and cannot have a conventional four no trump bid. Again:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 heart | Pass | 2 no trump | Pass |
| 3 no trump | Pass | Pass | 4 clubs |
| Pass | Pass | 4 no trump | |

If North wanted to bid a slam, he would not have passed three no trump. His four no trump shows, therefore, that he thinks ten tricks can be won at no trump, and that a game will be more profitable than a penalty.

In response to an opening two bid in a suit, an immediate four no trump is not conventional; this response has been reserved to show 2½ honor tricks.

The four no trump conventional bid must be sharply distinguished from the opening four no trump bid, and the four no trump overcall of the opponents' preëmptive four bid.

Likewise a raise of an opening three no trump bid is not conventional.

◆

When it happens, as it sometimes does, that one partner has all four aces and the other partner has a hand strong in kings, queens and other high cards, for purely psychological reasons the player who has an aceless hand is not likely to contract for a grand slam, because no matter how strong the bidding is he cannot assume so rare an event as four aces in one hand. The only way to reach a safe grand slam bid is for the partner to show him that he has all four aces.

The 4-5 no trump convention makes this unmistakably clear by the following beautiful inferences:

| West | EAST |
|---|---|
| ♠ K Q J 7 5 4 | ♠ A 6 3 |
| ♥ K Q J 2 | ♥ A 3 |
| ♦ K 8 | ♦ A 6 3 |
| ♣ 7 | ♣ A Q J 6 2 |

| West | East |
|---|---|
| 1 spade | 3 clubs |
| 3 spades | 4 no trump |
| 5 clubs | 5 no trump |
| 7 no trump | |

After West's opening bid and rebid, it is apparent to East that the small slam is certain and a grand slam quite possible. When East bids four no trump, West is compelled to sign off, for though he has added values he has no ace. But when East bids five no trump, West knows that even a singleton spade [♠ A] in East's hand will give him better than a two to one chance for the grand slam, and at once he bids it.

Any conventional bid of four no trump immediately followed by five no trump by the same player, usually after partner signed off to four no trump, shows all four aces in his hand.

The only cases in which partner has not signed off [because they are the only cases in which he can make a positive response without an ace in his hand] are when he has the kings of all bid suits; or a void.

In the example just given, if West had held the king of clubs instead of diamonds, he could have jumped to six spades over four no trump. In that case, East would not have needed further information and could have gone to seven spades.

An article by Mr. Culbertson appears in the feature section of The Tribune each weekday.

Bridge Problem

NORTH
♠ 8 3 2
♥ J 9 5 3
♦ K 5
♣ K 7 6 2

| WEST | EAST |
|---|---|
| ♠ K J 9 6 4 | ♠ — |
| ♥ K Q | ♥ 10 8 7 6 4 2 |
| ♦ 7 6 | ♦ Q 10 4 3 |
| ♣ Q 9 8 5 | ♣ J 10 4 |

SOUTH
♠ A Q 10 7 5
♥ A
♦ A J 9 8 2
♣ A 3

This is a double dummy problem, i. e., as declarer, you are supposed to know how all fifty-two cards lie. South's contract is five diamonds and West opens the six of spades. Can you take eleven tricks against the best defense? If so, how?

Answer—Dummy's spade eight must be played at the first trick, so that if East refuses to ruff, you will be in dummy for an immediate trump finesse. However, East's best defense is to ruff with the diamond three, and to return a low heart. Winning with ace, you lead diamond eight to king and ruff a low heart with diamond nine. You then cash the club ace and lead to the club king. Next you ruff a club with diamond jack. You cash diamond ace, then exit with diamond deuce, discarding low spade from dummy. East must win and has nothing left but hearts. On dummy's two heart tricks, while you discard spades, West becomes squeezed. If he lets go the club queen, dummy's seven spot becomes good, whereas if he blanks spade king, your A-Q both make.

Bach Festival Opens July 17 in Carmel, Cal.

The annual summer Bach festival originated at Carmel, Cal., in 1934, will be held this year from July 17 to 23. The seven concerts are performed by the local orchestra and chorus composed of amateurs and professionals from the Monterey peninsula under the leadership of the eminent conductor, Gastone Usigli. Professional artists from other parts of the country who are willing to give their services out of musical interest alone augment these two organizations.

Aside from Mr. Usigli and his assistant conductor, Madeline Currey, the long list of performers includes Alice Mock and Lou McIlvain, sopranos; Belva Kibbler, contralto; Russell Horton and Robert Kidder, tenors; Sten Englund, Edwin Dunning, and Noel Sullivan, basses; Alice Ehlers, harpsichordist; Robert Pollak and Doris Ballard, violinists; Michel Penha, cellist; Ary Van Leeuwen and Helen Mead Little, flutists; Ralph Linsley, Sumner Prindle and Douglas Thompson, pianists; John McDonald Lyon, organist, and Chandler Stewart Jr., Gordon Stewart and Donald Stewart, trombonists.

* *

On the first day the program will offer the Fifth Brandenburg Concerto; the cantata, "Praise Our God;" a sonata for flute and harpsichord; harpsichord solos, and chorales.

Works by Bach's three most famous sons will comprise the second day's concert. Johann Christian will be represented by a Symphony in B flat and a Concerto for piano and strings; Carl Philipp Emanuel by a Concerto for cello and orchestra and a Sonata for unaccompanied flute, and Wilhelm Friedemann by a Symphony.

Wednesday and Friday, the third and fifth days of the festival, will be given over to organ recitals, reverting to the compositions of Johann Sebastian.

On Thursday the program will consist of an Overture in D major, the Second Brandenburg Concerto, the Concerto in F minor for piano, a Sonata for violin and piano, and works for solo piano.

* *

The sixth program lists more chorales, the concerto in E major for violin and orchestra, the Concerto in D minor for three pianos and orchestra, and the canata, "Phoebus and Pan."

On Sunday the festival will be brought to a climactic close with a performance of the Mass in B minor.

The last concert will be held in the Mission San Carlos; the organ recitals are scheduled for the All Saints' Episcopal church, and all the other evening concerts will take place in Sunset auditorium. Lectures on the programs and on the place of Bach in the history of music will be given on five mornings by Alfred Frankenstein, music and art critic of the San Francisco Chronicle.

This Week Will Bring Two Important Openings

By Judith Cass

This week brings two of the summer's most important openings, that of the thirty day racing season at Arlington Park tomorrow afternoon and of the six week festival season at Ravinia park Thursday night. Vacationers who leave Chicago in July miss two of the most delightful events offered in Chicagoland during the summer.

As usual, the Post and Paddock club will be the rendezvous of the "pretty world" at Arlington, and every day that there is a program there will be gay luncheon parties in the charming clubhouse or on the equally attractive terrace. Laurance H. Armour is president of the club, Thomas E. Wilson vice president, Charles F. Glore secretary, and Lawrence Stern secretary. Charles A. McCulloch is chairman of the board of the Arlington Park Jockey club and Otto W. Lehmann the president.

Roy Carruthers is secretary of the organization that operates the plant, and Mr. Armour, Roy D. Keehn, Weymouth Kirkland, and Warren Wright are vice presidents. Leonard S. Florsheim is the treasurer, and the board of directors includes all the officers and Britton I. Budd, Philip D. Block, Maj. Louis A. Beard, Edward A. Cudahy Jr., Stanley Field, Mr. Glore, John D. Hertz, Albert D. Lasker, Harry L. Lobdell, Charles S. Pearce, James Simpson Jr., and Silas H. Strawn.

Mrs. Louis Eckstein, who makes the Ravinia festival possible each year by donating the use of the park, which was founded by her late husband, is honorary chairman of the Festival association and Percy B. Eckhart is active chairman. Sir Adrian Boldt of London will conduct the Chicago Symphony orchestra during the first two weeks. If you plan to attend many concerts during the season it would be wise to purchase a coupon book between now and July 2, for none will be sold after that date. With a book eighteen gate admissions cost $10; without a book the same number would be $13.50. No one sneezes at saving $3.50 in these days, not even a so-called millionaire!

Books are on sale in town and all along the north shore. The ticket committee's headquarters is at 333 North Michigan avenue, telephone Central 7360. J. Eugene Davis heads this important section of the association. It would be hard to decide which committee does the most necessary work, the one that raises the guaranty fund, the one that plans the programs, or the one that provides the audiences, for each does a vital work toward making the season a success. Howell W. Murray heads the group of men that raises the guaranty fund, and Francis M. Knight is program chairman.

Several dates for next fall already are marked in the engagement pads of those who go places and do things, for work has started on more than one of the big benefits for next season. Not exactly a benefit, but to raise (Continued on Page 2.)

Woman's City Club to Hold Citizenship Classes

By Betty Browning

The Woman's City club will have no vacation this summer. A simple statement, on the face of it, but there's a story behind it.

Just to establish that this state of affairs is worth a story: The summer recess is a tradition of the club world. From May or early June until September or October no club undertakes anything more demanding than an occasional card party or trip to a member's country home. Behind the scenes conscientious chairmen may struggle over recalcitrant programs for the coming year, but there hard work ends.

Now the Woman's City club, noted for independence during all its twenty-nine years, breaks with tradition. A school of citizenship will be started July 21 in conjunction with the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers.

That will mean at least one afternoon a week of serious study of Chicago's governmental and civic problems. Authorities will be brought in to throw light on their particular fields and to suggest matters for study or action. Morning sessions will be devoted to a study of parliamentary law.

Mrs. J. Sharpless Fox, who assumed the presidency in April, gives full credit for the idea of the school to Mrs. Herbert H. Siddall, former homemaking chairman and present publications chairman of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Siddall recently joined the Woman's City club, and has worked out plans for the school with Miss Mary Louise Ramsey, chairman of the municipal citizenship committee.

The school is to be the first of a series of study classes sponsored by the club. The board of directors has just voted to substitute for the usual weekly forums on public questions a monthly forum, with several study meetings preceding it. Then, when informed speakers address (Continued on Page 2.)

the forum, members will have a background of information on the subject matter under discussion.

The school, Mrs. Fox hopes, also will be the first of a number of joint civic activities with other prominent women's organizations, such as the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Willett H. Cornwell, retiring president of the Chicago Woman's club, who has been appointed chairman of its civics committee, already has expressed her interest in such coöperation.

As a matter of fact, whenever a sufficiently pressing problem of public concern has arisen, it has been the custom for the leading women's organizations to work together toward a solution. Leaders prominent in more than one organization facilitate joint action. Mrs. Laura Hughes Lunde, for instance, is program chairman of the Woman's City club and chairman of the Illinois League of Women Voters' department of government and education.

Mrs. Fox herself has been prominent in the parent-teacher movement as well as the Woman's City club. She was the first radio chairman of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, a post she held thirteen years, and has been associate radio chairman for the national organization. She was bulletin editor several years for the state organization. Before her election to the presidency of the Woman's City club, Mrs. Fox was its press and publicity chairman.

For all her experience in publicity Mrs. Fox wants none of it about herself. The bare facts are these: She was born near Niagara, N. Y., of Revolutionary war stock, and came as a small child with her family to Allegan, Mich., where she grew up.

She still considers herself a "small town person," more so than her relatives who live in Allegan. Perhaps that accounts for her interest in the welfare of the community in which she lives, also for the fact that, since coming to Chicago in 1906, she and her husband have lived in the same block in Hyde Park.

Mrs. Fox met her husband when she was an undergraduate at the University of Michigan, and he was a fellow in history. She became an assistant in the history department, and just before their marriage she typed her fiancé's thesis for his Ph. D. Mr. Fox now is professor of history at Wilson Junior college.

After her marriage Mrs. Fox continued to work with her husband—always unofficially—first as his secretary when he edited the historic Schoolcraft papers in the Library of Congress, then in the University of Wisconsin library.

Later, with Miss Edith Rickert, the University of Chicago's Chaucer scholar, Mrs. Fox contributed articles to women's magazines. The articles were practical rather than scholarly, dealing with subjects such as college girls' deficient punctuation, Mrs. Fox smilingly recalled. When Miss Rickert for a short time was an editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, Mrs. Fox was her secretary.

Miss Rickert is godmother to William, the Foxes' second son. He is a member of the political science department at Temple university. John, the Foxes' eldest son, is doing research work on yellow fever with the Rockefeller medical foundation. He and his wife and child will be transferred to Rio de Janeiro this coming autumn. The youngest son, David, expects to study medicine, too, and will enter Haverford college, his father's and brothers' alma mater, in the autumn.

Characteristic of Mrs. Fox is the fact that this interview was almost entirely a discussion of other people and their plans. Mrs. Siddall and Miss Ramsey she credited with the citizenship school, Mrs. Lunde, with the study classes preceding the monthly forum; and to Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher, her immediate predecessor as president, she attributed the Woman's City club's new memberships.

Through these special $5 memberships newcomers are entitled to attend meetings and to take part in the club's social life without participating as voting members. The objective is to draw within the club's orbit the untapped woman power of the city, as Mrs. Fox put it. Such a small fee will place the club's informative programs and its civic activities within almost every woman's reach, Mrs. Fox emphasized.

A president's rôle, Mrs. Fox feels, is to help other people to carry out their ideas.

Characteristic also of Mrs. Fox was that only by chance was her hobby revealed. She is an inventor, although she would probably disclaim the title. Mrs. Fox made herself raincoats of the new transparent waterproof material before they were on the market, and has rain hats that fit every hat, and neat bags of the same material to hold the entire rain outfit.

When she was knitting for the soldiers during the war, she discovered how to knit two sweaters or socks at once. Now, by an adaptation of this same process, she knits simultaneously two gloves. Unlike any other knitter, she begins with the end of the fingers. Then, if the yarn runs out short, she knits a ring of contrasting color that is ornamental around the wrist, but would be hideous at the finger tips.

Miss Gladys Gorchoff and Jerome Pinkus Are Married

Miss Gladys Gorchoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gorchoff of 1011 South Austin boulevard, became the bride of Jerome Pinkus, son of Martin Pinkus, 106 Parkside avenue, at 9 o'clock yesterday evening at the Hotel Knickerbocker. Mr. Pinkus attended the University of Illinois and now is studying at the University of Chicago. The couple will go to California on their wedding trip.

EUROPE FOR WEDDING TRIP

Mrs. Robert J. Guerin was Miss Marion Jane Faget until her marriage last Tuesday. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Faget of 3147 Washington boulevard. Mr. Guerin, son of Mrs. Edmund H. Guerin of Woonsocket, and his bride will make their home in Woonsocket after a wedding trip to Europe.

Illinois Opera Guild Opening Summer Drive

The newly organized Illinois Opera guild, which was started only a month ago, already has more than a hundred members on its roster and has opened the enrollment of life members.

Mrs. James G. McMillan.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

This report of activities was made last week by Mrs. James G. McMillan of Winnetka, the president, who has gone to New York for a brief vacation before the midsummer intensive drive for membership begins.

For nearly three years various representative groups of Chicago women have been banded together to support the cause of opera in Chicago, but not until May 1 of this year did the group combine under their own charter as the Illinois Opera guild, opening headquarters in the Opera building, 20 North Wacker drive.

• • •

"To put grand opera on a permanent foundation in Chicago is the desire of the women who are sponsoring and developing the guild," declared Mrs. McMillan, "and to have every seat filled at every performance is our ultimate goal. The institution to which we have pledged our services is the Chicago City Opera company, and every Chicagoan has some place and some duty, large or small, to assist this effort toward the city's highest ideals in cultural entertainment."

The guild is a nonprofit organization and all of its funds will be used for maintenance of opera. It has other functions besides the raising of funds. It will provide each season increasingly a number of seats to be placed at the disposal of students. Six opera boxes already have been purchased by the guild for the use of students next season, the University of Chicago, Northwestern university, and the Highland Park High school being among the recipients. It also will provide a service to its members in the purchase of tickets.

• • •

The Metropolitan Opera guild in New York has much the same function in that city, and has become the major support in opera subscription sales. The Illinois guild, although its first unit is in Chicago and its membership takes in the surrounding suburbs, will in time cover the entire state with units in the principal cities. There are three types of membership: Life at $100; sustaining at $10, and active at $5.

Mrs. Louis E. Yager is executive vice president; Mrs. Dwight C. Orcutt, first vice president; Mrs. L. Lewis Cohen, second vice president; Mrs. John L. Kellogg, third vice president; Mrs. Barnett Farroll, fourth vice president; Mrs. Hugo Dalmar, treasurer; Mrs. Millard B. Kennedy, recording secretary, and Mrs. Frederick William Mueller Jr., corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Edward Percival was formerly Miss Marie Nosek, daughter of Mrs. Minnie Nosek of 6837 Riverside drive, Berwyn. Mr. Percival is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Percival of Riverside. He and his bride are at home in Berwyn.

Saturday, Sept. 30, has been selected as the date for the annual dinner-dance of the North Avenue Day Nursery board of directors, always one of the gay parties of the early season. The place has not been decided upon yet. Mrs. John P. Wilson Jr. is president of the board.

• • •

The Chicago Junior league is going to have its second open house at the Drake on Saturday, Oct. 14. Plans are still in somewhat of a tentative stage, but the day will be patterned much after the successful open house of three years ago. Mrs. Robert N. McKenna is chairman of the large committee planning the affair, with Mrs. Marshall G. Sampsell and Mrs. Gorton Loud as co-chairmen.

The next Tuesday, Oct. 17, is the date of the annual St. Luke's fashion show, which, as usual, will be given in the afternoon and again in the evening in the Grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel. I say the women in charge should rent the Stadium! No ballroom is large enough to accommodate the thousands of women who pack the room in the afternoon to see the dernier cri in fashion and the pick of the debutantes on the runway. It's a grand show every year and, since the same women who have run it for the last twelve years are to manage this year's, it's certain to be just as good as the preceding dozen.

The Auditorium theater has been engaged by the Service club for the night of Saturday, Nov. 4, for its annual revue, and the Grand ballroom of the Palmer House has been reserved for the cabaret supper-dance that will follow the performance.

• • •

The Evanston Junior league will do its bit towards contributing to the gayety of the season by giving a new edition of the "Junior League Follies" on Nov. 9, 10, and 11 in the Glencoe school auditorium. Following the last performance there will be a cabaret. Mrs. William Stahl heads the large committee in charge.

Mrs. Donald F. Bowey, Mrs. Waldo Logan, Mrs. Lee Graham, Mrs. William Kelly, and Mrs. Harry Dubia are some of those working to make a success of the Margaret Etter Creche's annual benefit party. It will be given on Nov. 11 at the Drake. The theme will be a cruise to the West Indies and it is to be "The Captain's Dinner."

The New York Philharmonic orchestra will give a concert in the Auditorium on Sunday afternoon, Nov. 26, to benefit the Children's Memorial hospital. The three women's boards are in charge with Mrs. Frederic W. Upham as the chief mogul of the various committees that will work on the project. John Barbirolli will come west with the orchestra to conduct it.

The Church Mission of Help, which has sponsored the opening performance of the San Carlo Opera company for several years, is switching to the ballet this year. It has taken over the first night of the Ballet Russe's Chicago engagement, Dec. 29. Mrs. Walter R. Kirk, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine, Mrs. George A. Ranney, and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. are on an advisory committee that will assist in planning the details.

Fairbank Home in Lake Geneva Has '75 Charm

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS. "Where time stands still," is probably more descriptive of the Butternuts than of any of the homes on Lake Geneva. It appears substantially the same today as it did in 1875 when it was built by Nathaniel K. Fairbank, father of the late Kellogg Fairbank. Now it is the summer home of Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, the novelist, Janet Ayer Fairbank.

The house is said to be a perfect example of the best of the mid-Victorian architecture, built in what was known as the "Eastlake style," the architecture of the period being influenced greatly by the English painter, Sir Charles Eastlake and his contemporary, John Ruskin, the English writer and critic. Except for the third floor, which was added in 1893 to accommodate the growing family, nothing has changed at the Butternuts in sixty-four years. Most of the original furniture is there and when additional pieces have been needed, Mrs. Fairbank has made every effort to purchase articles of the same style and woods as those brought to the house in the '70s and '80s by Mrs. N. K. Fairbank.

• • •

The whole effect is indescribably charming and the high ceilings and spacious rooms, opening with wide double doors from each other and from the great hall that runs, cross fashion, through the house, give the house an airy coolness that make it an excellent type country home even today. For all its definite air of the past, the house has that attractiveness and comfort that only a home much loved and lived in possesses.

One of the most delightful rooms is the study and workroom of the novelist, a long room beyond the stately dining room and the music room, its many rounded windows looking out upon lawn and trees and lake. This room is lined with low bookshelves and above the shelves are seemingly hundreds of pictures—old prints, photographs, snapshots, and newspaper pictures, one of the latter being the launching of one of the many ships built under the supervision of Kellogg Fairbank during the war when he was president of the Chicago Shipbuilding company, which it is said, turned out a steel fleet greater than that constructed by the navy at Hog Island.

Besides the study in the house, much of Mrs. Fairbank's writing is done in a tiny brown structure, small replica of the mansion, that stands at the west end of the grounds near the lake shore, but well hidden by trees and shrubbery. This sanctum of the author was built when the big house was erected and has been the playhouse of several generations of Fairbank children.

• • •

Mrs. Fairbank is at present working on a new novel which she hopes to finish while at the lake this summer if she can spare time from her family, most of the members of which will be with her all season. Her daughter, Janet, the concert singer, recently returned from Europe, has, as usual, taken complete charge of the lovely gardens. Benjamin, the younger son, and his wife, the former Virginia Hobart will spend week-ends at the Butternuts, and the young Kellogg Fairbanks have arrived for the summer with their little daughter, Peggy, named for Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank's sister, another famous writer, Margaret Ayer Barnes.

Last summer Peggy was the constant companion of her grandfather, who died last Feb. 18. Except for possibly four years, Kellogg Fairbank spent every summer since 1873 at Lake Geneva, the family renting a cottage in the then village of Geneva before they built the Butternuts, named for the many giant butternut trees that grow on the grounds.

One of Mr. Fairbank's earliest memories was of the burning of the first Butternuts, of which the present mansion is a replica. The first house, begun in the autumn of 1874 and completed in June, 1875, was burned to the ground Oct. 16, 1875.

The following is an item from the local newspaper, Lake Geneva Herald, of that date:

"At 4 o'clock this morning the beautiful mansion of Mr. N. K. Fairbank of this village was discovered on fire. The building is now [7 a. m.] a mass of smouldering ruins. The furniture was all saved and many of the doors and windows. Loss probably about $40,000. Mr. Fairbank was present and expressed his intention of commencing another and even grander building next Monday morning . . ."

The 5 year old Kellogg remembered the family and servants trying to put out the fire with water from their own reservoir, then the coming of help from the village of Geneva, a mile away, and the forming of a bucket brigade to the lake, a distance of a hundred yards. When it was seen that the destruction of the building was inevitable, every effort was concentrated upon saving the furniture, the grand piano, the great carved sideboard, the love seats, the bamboo maple bedroom furniture, and other pieces that still grace the fine old home.

When all the furniture had been removed, the men went to work again and in spite of the fire all about them managed to pry out the handsomely carved mantel pieces, door and window frames. Last of all, with flames fairly charring the wood, the great black walnut newel post and balustrade were literally wrenched from their setting and carried to a place of safety on the lawn.

A few feet from where this newel post now stands, and over one of the fine old mantel pieces saved that day, is a portrait of Kellogg Fairbank, painted in London two years ago by the well-known English artist, R. E. Eves. This splendid likeness arrived only recently at the Butternuts. It came from the Fairbank Chicago home when Mrs. Fairbank left there for Lake Geneva and it will return with her to the city in the fall.

Choose Tables in Relation to Room's Scheme

Make your bedroom one of the prettiest rooms in your home! How to do it is told in the booklet, "Beautiful Bedrooms," by Edith Weigle, Tribune furniture stylist. By Edith Weigle.

Tables are so much taken for granted in the furnishings of a room that we seldom stop to think how important they are. Not so many years ago the big reading table placed smack in the center of the parlor or the sitting room was usually pièce de resistance of the scheme. Today the reading table is just one of several such convenient items placed about the living room.

The couch is often flanked by a pair of lamp tables, there may be a console table between two windows or doors, with perhaps a matching duo on either side of the fireplace, besides a coffee or cocktail table and chair-side stands for books and smoking accessories. A spacious interior can take all of these without seeming in the least cluttered, but if your room is small be careful not to provide too many lamps or tables.

And in choosing them bear in mind the relation they will have with other items of the room's furnishings. Thus if you tell the salesman, "I want a pair of tables, please, to use with my couch in the living room," you may live to regret it, but if you measure the height of the arms of the couch first, and make sure of its design, then tell him, "I'd like to look at tables that are twenty-five inches high to be used beside a couch of modern design."

Instead of asking "What is new in tables?" describe the furnishings of your room, for each style of decoration has its own special types. If you have a colonial mahogany room you won't want modern, light wood tables, no matter how "new" they are. Likewise, if you start out your furnishings with French chairs and a couch stay with that period and don't try to lug in two or three lamp or chair-side tables that have no relation to it.

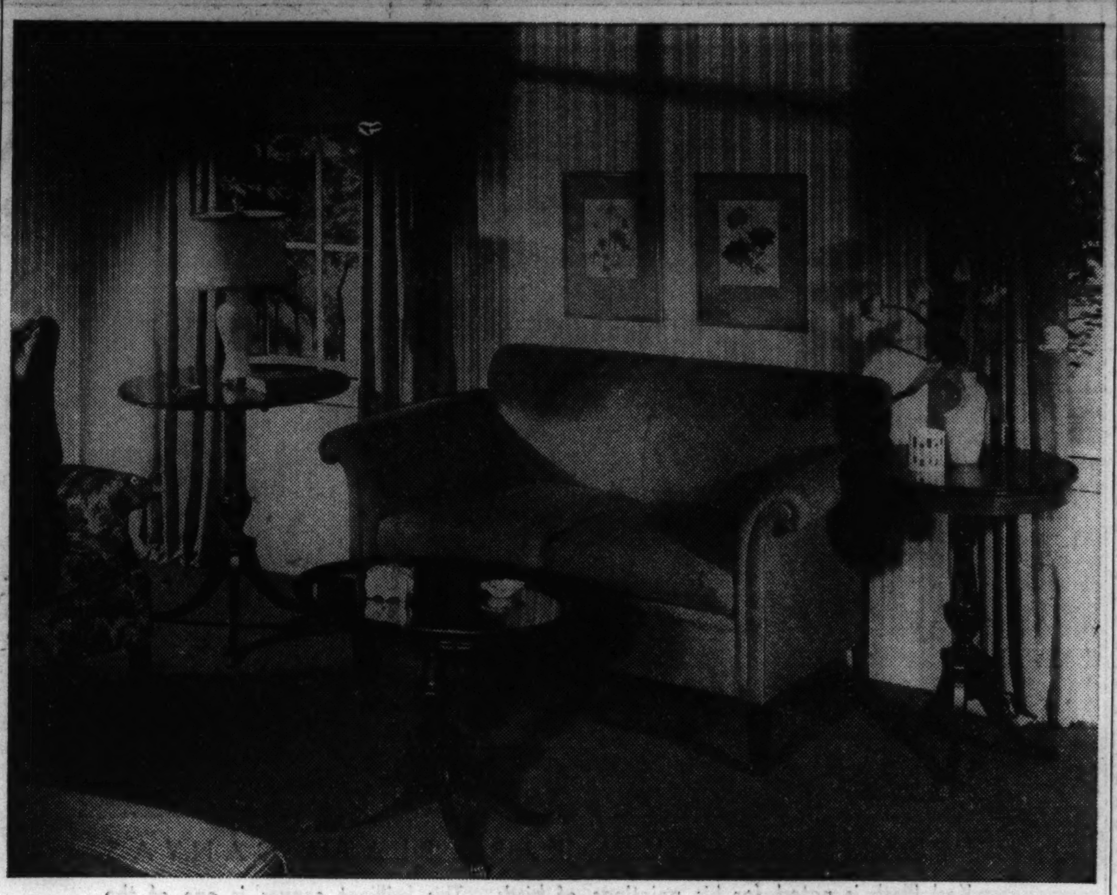
When purchasing book or magazine stands measure the height of the chair-arm next which they are to be placed. The top of the table should be level with the arm for comfort and convenience. When choosing a lamp table consider the height of the lamp you're going to place on it, and the depth of the nearby chair or couch. There is nothing more annoying than to have to sit beside a lamp that is just a trifle too high, for the glare from the unprotected bulb is well nigh blinding. Be sure the table is low enough and the lamp shade comes down far enough to avoid this.

Instead of the low coffee table which makes you lean 'way over to reach articles on it you may prefer the new, higher tables. These are just as good looking, are available in all the popular cabinet woods, and closely approach the height of our old tea tables. Which, after all, is a sensible height for any one sitting in a chair or on a couch.

Some of the most attractive period tables have sunken, copper or tin lined compartments for plants. These may serve beside a couch or as a separate table and are intended for 18th century English rooms and for ones done in the French Provincial manner.

Other popular models are Pembroke tables with small drop leaves at either end, and drum top tables which often have inlaid tops of leather. Duncan Phyfe styles with pedestal supports are always good in colonial rooms. These are usually done in mahogany like the ones shown in the picture today.

The model at the extreme left is a copy of an 18th century tilt-top table. The one in the foreground has a glass top and is for cocktails, and the one nearest the couch may be used for any of a number of purposes. All are most reasonably priced.



[Grignon Photo.]

Small tables play a big role in a room's furnishings. Those in this picture are of mahogany in the Duncan Phyfe style and are appropriate in almost any traditional setting.

W. R. Helmholz, Eleanor Bacon Are Newlyweds

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL. Yesterday marked the peak for June, the month of weddings, with more than a dozen couples here saying "I do." Among them are Miss Eleanor Richardson Bacon and Waldemar Robert Helmholz, a former Milwaukeean who has chosen to return to that city with his bride.

Last Sunday marked the wedding of Miss Verna Herbst, daughter of Mrs. Edna Herbst of Pasadena and Dr. Vernon Bernard Herbst of Beverly Hills and Chicago, to William McDonald Hull. It was a quiet ceremony at the home of Dr. Herbst in place of the large garden wedding that had been planned, because of the recent death of the bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. Henrietta Merrill.

The maharaja of Kapurthala, who is visiting in southern California and was entertained only recently in Pasadena, was host at the rehearsal dinner, a privilege he sought because of his long friendship for Dr. Herbst, who has visited the maharaja many times in India.

News which finds deep interest in Pasadena society is the announcement of two engagements this week: That of Miss Martha Bugbee, daughter of the Ralph W. Bugbees of St. Louis, Mo., to Ray Lyman Wilbur Jr. of Los Angeles, son of the Stanford university president [they will wed in the fall]; and that of Miss Onnalee Olson, daughter of the Fred Gordon Olsons of Los Angeles, to Bill James Cord, son of the Errett Lobban Cords of Beverly Hills. Many Pasadena debs attended the announcement luncheon for fifty guests at the Bel-Air Bay club. The wedding probably will take place in August.

D.C.Rich Denies Exhibit Bid to Milwaukeean

By Eleanor Jewett.

During the Chicago Artists and Vicinity show held this past spring at the Art institute several persons reported that a WPA picture from Milwaukee hung in the exhibit through invitation by the Chicago Art institute. There was a misleading legend on the frame which suggested the theory, but Daniel Catton Rich, director of fine arts of the institute, refutes it in these words: "The exhibition by artists of Chicago and vicinity is entirely a juried exhibit. No invitations are issued for this showing and no WPA artist from Milwaukee or elsewhere was admitted save by the jury of selection." That seems to clear up the misunderstanding adequately.

In a recent article we asked: "How far does 'vicinity' reach? How much ground does it cover?" Mr. Rich answers: "By action of the trustees of the Art institute on March 29, 1928, the area of exhibition was set to include Chicago and a radius of one hundred miles." Which disposes neatly of that subject.

Meanwhile WPA pictures flourish like the green bay tree, appearing in and out of season at the Art institute, Navy pier, No Jury shows, and so on. It is amazing the number of well-known modern artists who have made the WPA rolls. There are Gustave Dalstrom, Aaron Bohrod, Macena Barton, and quantities of others who appear regularly in current exhibits. It is extraordinary how a certain group manages to keep on the good side of the government subsidy and how difficult it is to join unless one knows the right person. Either one must be utterly unknown or one of THE moderns. Search as we can, no other person have we been able to find associated with the Chicago WPA.

Another startling fact of national magnitude is the type of art wanted by the WPA heads. Only modern [a fancy term for bad painting and sculpture] is acceptable. The more unintelligible and the more banal the output the better it is liked. This is illustrated in every WPA exhibit placed before the public and in the pieces of so-called art being sent out to schools and public buildings. Paintings and sculpture may be ugly, vulgar, weird or socialistic. Propaganda of all socialist kinds is very acceptable, and the pseudo-primitive is eagerly welcomed.

This is true over the entire nation, stemming from Washington, where the heads of the WPA art department are thoroughly modern-minded. The museums of the country [including Chicago, which indeed is a leader] are encouraging similar kinds of art, Modern art that began by being strong, virile, and splendidly rebellious, has degenerated into a whining parody, a series of penny thrillers. Epstein in England and Dali [now in New York] do something, usually something shocking, and at once a hundred little unimaginative artists do something and fail to be shocking, but succeed in coming near enough to the modern note struck by Dali or Epstein to guarantee their acclaim by modern juries and modern influential authorities all over the United States.

Modern art has fallen in this country into no better status than that of a racket. Those who practice it are almost entirely of tenth rate ability. Very few of the younger men and women have had any art training of importance [the modern art school gives a bitterly poor imitation of a training in art except where a conservative artist is the instructor] and they cannot draw, nor can they appreciate balance, design, or color. You have only to look at student work to realize the truth of this statement and it holds good for other places than Chicago.

A young man who saw a great many of the paintings which passed the Chicago Art institute juries and other paintings which were done by artists on the Chicago WPA rolls, decided that some of it [and that the most enthusiastically acclaimed] looked like pictures he had made in school when he was a boy, so he painted a few in that naïve fashion and submitted them to the WPA authorities here. They were a great sensation and he was taken on the roll. When, however, he tried to improve his painting through study with recognized non-modern artists in town, he was told those efforts were no good, to keep to his "fresh, naïve manner."

Meanwhile the Art institute makes the news again by the selection of Mr. Rich to serve as chairman for the jury for the awarding of prizes in the contemporary art section of the department of fine arts of the Golden Gate International exposition at San Francisco. On the jury are two museum directors, one museum curator and two artists: Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of the Carnegie museum at Pittsburgh; Henri Marceau, assistant director and curator of paintings and sculpture, Philadelphia Museum of Art; Mr. Rich, acting chairman; Henry Varnum Poor, New York artist, and William Gaw, San Francisco painter. This is a modern jury and it will be interesting to see how the awards go. It is our bet the majority of the prizes will be given to modern paintings [if Chicago does not get one, it will be amazing] and that one prize will be thrown to a conservative work to placate those who are irritated by today's trend.

Cape Cod Area Begins Summer Program Early

HYANNIS, MASS.

Encouraged by an early influx of visitors from virtually every section of the country, the numerous resort places of Cape Cod already are conducting a full program of activities which will carry through the summer.

Beautiful estates, occupied only during the summer months, their terraced lawns a brilliant emerald green and their gardens a riotous picture of luxuriant bloom, are in readiness for the families arriving each day. Many persons are here from the central and midwestern parts of the country to spend vacations in the pleasant surroundings of New England's famous ocean playground.

Hotel owners and managers of clubs report good registration figures to date, with a long list of reservations made for later in the season. Among the places where sports, recreational and social schedules are in swing are the exclusive Oyster Harbors and Wianno clubs, both of which are located in the wealthy Osterville community. Stoneleigh Gables at Hyannisport has been open for several weeks, and activity also is under way at the Chatham Beach club and fashionable Hotel Belmont, surrounded by its cottage colony, in West Harwich.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Boyd of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. David Dangler of Lake Forest are among the many summer home owners of the Oyster Harbors colony who are expected to open their homes next week. Activity at this seashore resort will center around the Oyster Harbors club. For sports minded members of the colony there will be a number of interesting golf and tennis tournaments throughout the season, as well as yachting and riding. The weekly dances at the club will begin with a gala Fourth of July celebration.

Staying at nearby Hyannisport are Mr. and Mrs. George S. Payson, Mr. and Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Forgan and family, and Mr. and Mrs. W. France Anderson and family, all residents of Chicago. The Henry A. Gardners, now en route to Europe, intend to be here for part of the summer, probably arriving on the Cape about the middle fo August.

• • •

The Cape playhouse in Dennis, long famous for its summer presentations of the latest Broadway hits, will begin its thirteenth season tomorrow with a revival of the comedy "Merton of the Movies." Owner Raymond Moore has engaged some of the stage's and screen's foremost stars for appearances during a ten week schedule. Thornton Wilder is signed in a rôle in his own Pulitzer prize play, "Our Town." The veteran actress, Ethel Barrymore, is to have the lead in "White Oaks," and Edward Everett Horton, film comedian, will star in "Springtime for Henry."

Jane Cowl will return once more to the floor boards of the picturesque Dennis theater in a George Bernard Shaw vehicle, "Captain Broadchain's Conversion." The original company of the New York show, "Kiss the Boys Goodbye," and Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale in "Spring Meeting," also are on Mr. Moore's list of offerings.

At Provincetown, the tip of the Cape, the summer theater season will get under way July 1. This is an outstanding year for the Cape-end playgoers and actors, since it marks the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Provincetown players, a small group of writers whose plays on a Provincetown wharf were the forerunner of the nation-wide "little theater" movement. In recognition of the birthday, Neil McFee Skinner, manager of the wharf theater, plans a play festival which is to include productions given by the original company.

Playwright Sinclair Lewis, who wrote his first novel in Provincetown, heads the celebrities slated to appear at the Cape-end playhouse. He is booked for the week of Aug. 21 in a vehicle yet to be selected.

Generally speaking, weather on Cape Cod has been favorable. Public beaches and those managed by private groups have been open for several weeks. Although the highest temperatures recorded to date are in the high 70's, the waters are warm enough for swimming.

Children Lend Their Welcome to Royal Visit

By May Birkhead.

NEW YORK.

People in New York still are talking about the recent rapid visit of the British sovereigns. Some of the picturesque touches are remembered, even at this comparatively late date. Through the courtesy of friends, we had a chance to see King George and Queen Elizabeth from a window in upper Fifth avenue. The youngsters who gathered along the line of the procession at this point were overlooked by most reporters of the event. We do not know who had charge of this group of children, but the size of the youngsters and their doings suggest that they may have come from a kindergarten. The children, ranging in age from 3 to 10, were riding in, or maneuvering, what seemed to be nearly 100 floats, decorated with paper and flowers. Some of the babies were in perambulators.

• • •

One set of little boys was drawing along some red wagons, with the king and queen sitting on an improvised throne, the king with his scepter, the queen in robes of state. Some of the girls in other floats were decked out as Britannia, some of the boys wore Uncle Sam costumes, and everywhere American and British flags were flying. One microscopic float showed five little girls dressed in white, wearing poke bonnets, and bearing the legend, written in a sort of childish scrawl: "We are glad the king and queen liked our quintuplets."

Even among many of the usually well informed here, there seems to be some confusion about references to the queen as by origin a commoner. We haven't an Oxford dictionary at hand, but commoner, in this connection, simply means that the queen, before her marriage, was not of royal rank. She descends, however, from a long line of earls, her father having been the 14th earl of Strathmore, an ancient Scottish peerage, while her mother was a Cavendish-Bentinck, great-granddaughter of the third duke of Portland. The Scottish seat of the queen's family, Glamis castle, in Angusshire, figures, it will be remembered, in Shakespeare's "Macbeth." The first Lord Glamis was given this title nearly 500 years ago. The present queen passed her childhood and youth at Glamis [pronounced Glahms]. It has been the custom, for many generations, for the heir to the title, on reaching his majority, to be conducted to the secret chamber. That is the only visit he ever makes there and it appears one is quite enough. It is said that the heir on emerging always shows marks of terrific ordeal.

About 400 years ago the widow of the fifth Lord Glamis was burned as a witch for having designs on the life of a Scottish king. Her son also was condemned, but was given a respite from execution until he should reach his majority. By that time it was known that the accusations were false.

• • •

Rumor, apparently well founded, has it that the duke and duchess of Windsor—possibly because of the reception had by the king and queen—hope to visit the United States and very soon.

Be that as it may, many well knowners are hurrying from this side to Europe. Miss Anne Morgan and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt left recently on the Normandie. For years they went each summer to the cure at Marienbad and then wound up their stay with a few weeks at Blérancourt in France, where they have established a tidy place for wayfarers, to the profit of the Musée de Coopération Franco-Américaine, full of interesting relics.

Jean Zay, the French minister of national education, also sailed, after having been here in connection with the inauguration of the French pavilion at the world's fair. Among those seen dining at the French restaurant there recently were Dr. and Mme. Serge Voronoff, who also sailed recently on the Normandie.

Miss Sylvia Gollay Is Fiancee of Irving Footlik

Strawberry Fete Held in Stockbridge

By Cary Hayward.

PITTSFIELD, MASS.

Mrs. Harry C. Holloway of Glencoe, Ill., and Tamarack, Tyringham, was general chairman of a strawberry festival held yesterday afternoon under the giant maples at the Berkshire Garden center, Stockbridge. Among those assisting were Mrs. Bernhard Hoffmann, president of the Center association, Mrs. W. Rockwood Gibbs, and Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett. This is the strawberry season in Berkshire and the party was one of the important society events of the early summer.

Mrs. Thomas H. Blodgett was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Livingston Hall, wife of Prof. Hall of the Harvard law school, at her garden party on Wednesday at Great Pine farm, Great Barrington. The place was so named from its pines. The garden setting, with its tea and light refreshment tables under the trees, was singularly attractive. At the head of a group of society waitresses was Miss Mary De Windt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delano De Windt and granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Heyliger A. De Windt of Winnetka.

• • •

Before the garden party guests visited seven of the finest South Berkshire gardens. At Rollaway Hill, the summer home of Mrs. Walt Talcott of Rockford, Ill., they saw hillsides covered with mountain laurel whose pink and white blossoms in mass make a scene of rare beauty. Mrs. Talcott was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Walter A. Forbes of Rockford. Greatly admired also was the orchard farm garden of Mrs. George O. Forbes of Rockford, who was assisted by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Aubrey T. Barnes.

This week-end the display of mountain laurel in the Mount Everett state reservation, 2,200 feet elevation, is at its peak. This is said to be the largest unspoiled area of the scentless bush wild flowers in New England. Visitors are given greeting cards from the reservation commissioners who, in prohibiting cutting the laurel, say:

"It is our fixed policy to conserve, for the benefit of all, the rare natural beauties which make the reservation distinctive among the public lands of the commonwealth."

• • •

Mrs. Francis Peabody Butler of Lake Forest is with Mrs. Donald F. McPherson at Court Hill, Pittsfield, for an extended visit. Spending the week-end at Court Hill are Mr. and Mrs. John Elting of Chicago, who were married last May; John Villiers Farwell of Lake Forest and his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Horace W. Carpenter, who are at their farm at New Milford, Conn. Mr. Farwell was in New Haven this week for the sixtieth reunion of his Yale class of 1879.

Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury of 1100 Lake Shore drive is at Tor Court, Pittsfield, for the summer, and in July will be joined by her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Kimball Salisbury of 1415 Astor street.

Registered at the Red Lion inn, Stockbridge, last week, were Miss Katherine E. Erwin of Lake Forest, Mrs. Edward P. Farwell, Mrs. S. P. Farwell, Miss Nancy and Robert L. Farwell, and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Scribner, all of Winnetka.

North Shore of Massachusetts Already Busy

By Lawrence Stanton.

BEVERLY, MASS.

From Nahant to the tip of Cape Ann the glorious north shore of Massachusetts is proving alluring to a wider range of visitors than for many seasons. The mansion houses in all of the communities are open for the long season and the estates never looked more attractive than they do in June.

This year there are more cottagers from the midwest than for several seasons, and some will be here for their first summer. With the happy combination of social and sport life, the towns bordering along the shore and running into the Myopia country are gay places, and will take on more life as the colleges and schools close for the vacations.

• • •

Yachting is to be more popular than ever this season with the clubs at Marblehead, Beverly, Manchester, Gloucester and Annisquam all arranging attractive schedules. The yacht clubs always are a center of interest, and the races of the Eastern and Corinthian clubs are known wherever yachtsmen meet.

Perhaps the best known of all the north shore clubs is the Myopia Hunt club at Hamilton, where its golf course, one of the oldest in the country, has been called the St. Andrews of America. The Essex County club at Manchester has a course on which many championships have been played and these, as well as many other courses, are in excellent condition.

Tennis is a favorite sport on the shore, with the midsummer tournaments at the Essex County club always bringing out stars of national and international reputations. The Myopia tennis has been one of the features in recent years, and more are playing this season than for many years. The Myopia club also offers diversion in the way of polo, and a long schedule of matches with teams in New England and Long Island has been arranged.

With the clubs, country and yacht, all active this season, the program will supplement the social gayeties which always fill the calendar. Washington will be especially well represented by officialdom this season.

• • •

The north shore will have its turn in entertaining royalty when Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway will be received with an elaborate program at Symphony hall, Boston, on July 3. They will be guests of William A. Coolidge, Coolidge Point, Manchester, where they will spend the week-end.

Mr. Coolidge's friendship with the prince dates back to their student days at Balliol college, Oxford, where for two years in 1925 and 1926 the crown prince studied political economy. As the son of the late Queen Maud of Norway, the sister of King George V. of England, Crown Prince Olav is the first cousin of the present King George VI.

Plans for their entertainment at Manchester include a birthday celebration for the crown prince on July 2. He will be 36 years old. They also plan to sail in John S. Lawrence's boat, the Moose, in the regular July 4 race of the Corinthian Yacht club at Marblehead. The crown prince's favorite sport is sailing.

Frederick Clay Bartlett of Chicago has returned to White Hall, his summer home at Chapman's Corner, from Waterville, Me., where he was given the honorary degree of master of arts at Colby college. Mrs. Bartlett accompanied him on the trip.

President Frank W. Johnson of Colby gave the following citation in regard to Mr. Bartlett in conferring the degree. "A native of Chicago, Mr. Bartlett was educated at St. Paul's school and pursued his professional studies at the Royal Academy of Art in Munich and in Paris under Collin, Aman-Jean, and Whistler. In the St. Louis exposition in 1904 he was awarded a silver medal. He has painted murals for several important buildings in Chicago, and examples of his work may be found in the leading American galleries. An accomplished artist, a foresighted connoisseur and brilliant collector, he has given to the museum of his native city a unique collection and has led the way to an appreciation of modern art."

When Chicago Was Young:

It's residents were saddened by death of Gen. Sherman.

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Feb. 15, 1891.

Dear Julia: We are saddened here by the death in New York of Gen. W. T. Sherman. Only twenty-five years since the close of the civil war, yet most of the great leaders are gone. Will has been reading aloud comments on the general's life. Ex-President Hayes told of a letter Sherman wrote him, very tender and beautiful, after Mrs. Hayes' death. English military men call Sherman the greatest all-around soldier of the Union army. I was interested in the opinion of a British officer, who said he could only compare the march to the sea with that of a Chinese general, Tio, who, like Sherman, cut himself off from his base of supplies and, with 100,000 men, traversed a sandy desert extending for hundreds of miles, to crown his operations with success.

Gen. William T. Sherman.

Will says it is often supposed by those unfamiliar with military affairs that Sherman made a wild dash for the sea and by good luck was successful, whereas he planned his move carefully and accomplished his great feat by clear thinking and precision.

It is beautiful to read of the funeral rites being conducted by his son, Father Thomas E. Sherman, a Catholic priest. Will is going to St. Louis on a special train for the final services with sixty-five members of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee from Chicago. The general will be laid to rest in Calvary cemetery here.

• • •

While we were thinking of mortality and immortality today, I came across a verse I wrote last summer about the tower of St. James church. Will wants me to send it to you, and I do so, somewhat hesitatingly, for it isn't real poetry. You, who have seen this old tower, which stood through the fire of 1871, and who know how much it means to this neighborhood, will read into the verses more than the mere words.

Saint James' Tower . . . 1891.

Clear seen against the evening sky,
Type of a temple not made with hands,
Dark and rugged and strong and high,
The friendly tower of the old church stands.
The little moon pauses above its head
To say a prayer, ere she hastes to bed.

It saw but ruins about its feet
Twenty swift-flying years ago;
About it the scorching flames had beat,
But the tower undaunted faced their glow.
'Twas chance? Perhaps. Yet the church folk say
The breath of God saved the tower that day.

This noon I saw its shadow fall
[The sun was hot in the blistering street]
On a mother, seated, whose children small
Played on the cool stones at her feet.
And it shelters in winter, too, I mind,
The thinly clad from the wind unkind.

And "I wish that my life might be," I said,
"Like that sturdy tower by the city street,
A shield and a shelter. And, unafraid,
I would I might face pain's fiercest heat;
Giving the weary, in storm and shine,
An hour of peace in a Name Divine."

And now, my dear, with much love and hoping I haven't erred in sending you this poetical effusion, I am,

Your old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOT NOTES.

The tower of St. James' Episcopal church, Wabash avenue and Huron street, a landmark of the near north side, is undergoing repairs. It stood through the fire of 1871, though the church itself was destroyed.

Henry Bull and the Ten-Mile Ditch. Mrs. H. P. Grant, Evanston, writes that her father, Henry Bull, who came from England to Chicago in 1852, had the contract for draining the region now called Lake View and decided to make his home there. He lived for fifty-four years in the house he built. He began what was known as the "ten-mile ditch." Mr. Bull also claimed the distinction of laying the first permanent rails of the Chicago and Galena railroad on Kinzie street.

The Chicago Manual Training School. Mention of this fine institution has brought letters from former students. Roy Owens writes that one should not spare adjectives in mentioning Dr. Henry H. Belfield, who had such a strong influence on the boys of the school.

Emory S. Rockwell writes: "As a student of that school, in the class of 1900, I have a very fond remembrance of its activities and associations. I followed two of my brothers who attended this school, one in the class of 1897 and one in the class of 1899. Some of the graduates are: Gov. Horner, Judge Jarecki, Fletcher W. Rockwell, Noble B. Judah, Edward Eagle Brown, Herrick H. Hammond, Hubert Burnham, and Alfred Carton. The class of 1900, at their graduation dinner, pledged themselves to meet annually in the years to come. This class has just held its fortieth annual dinner, at which there was an attendance of thirty-five."

Martha's Vineyard Is Prepared for Vacation Colony

VINEYARD HAVEN, MASS.

Martha's Vineyard is ready for its summer colony. This island suffered from no severe storms this last winter. The wreckage left by the storm of last September has been taken care of and everything is in readiness for the summer. This week-end will see the closing of the schools on the mainland and families soon will be arriving. At Oakbluffs the Lions club started the season with a convention of the Northern New England clubs, the Wesley House, Ocean View, and Beatrice House opening up for this event.

The program at the Martha's Vineyard Country club is being made up. The golf course has wintered well and is ready for play. The Edgartown Yacht club has had a thorough overhauling, and many boats have been put overboard. The racing schedule will be completed as soon as the entries are received. At Katama the bridge over Mattakeesett creek has been replaced, and South Beach can be reached by auto. The Edgartown Golf club has been played on during the winter, and early guests are planning their opening tournament.

Stonewall bridge in Chilmark has been replaced, and the direct road to Gay Head reëstablished. The fishermen's houses at Mememsha are being rebuilt and work is progressing on the new wharf. The early arrivals are enjoying a good run of striped bass. They are of good size and have plenty of fight. Mackerel are being caught in the harbors and the sword fishermen report good catches. At East Chop the Beach club is open and the Rice playhouse is nearly ready for the season. The summer schedule for the boat line is in operation, and people are arriving daily to open their places for the season.

Woman's Aid to Have Picnic for the Blind

More than 400 blind men, women and children will be the guests of the Chicago Woman's Aid at a picnic on Thursday. The group will meet at 9:30 in the morning at the Illinois Industrial Home for the Blind at 1900 Marshall boulevard, and will be transported by bus to the golf shelter pavilion in Jackson park.

All arrangements have been made by the committee for sight-saving and assisting the blind, of which Mrs William Sultan is chairman. Besides planning this annual outing, the committee also is in charge of providing school children with glasses. In the last year over 480 children were properly fitted through a fund which has been established for that purpose.

They will meet at 6:30 on Tuesday at the "Attic" for a southern chicken dinner and entertainment provided by Negro spiritual singers. Mrs. Beulah Christian Mayher is president.

Members of the Order of the Eastern Star of Illinois will be guests of Minnie M. Caperton, grand conductress, at a smorgasboard luncheon on Saturday at the Midwest Athletic club.

The women's division of the Electric association, numbering 350 members, will give its annual June party Tuesday at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Dinner will be served at 6:30 in the east lounge and will be followed at 8:30 by dancing and entertainment on the beach walk. Miss Claire Thompson is chairman.

Mrs. L. L. Bomberger will be hostess to the members of the Colonial Coverlet Guild of America on Wednesday. A picnic lunch will be served on the grounds of her home "Janeida," near Buchanan, Mich. Guests are invited to "emulate the Potawatamies" by roaming where they will. Mrs. Edna C. Nelson is president of the guild.

About 25 underprivileged children from the relief administration rolls will be guests of the Chicago Philanthropic Club juniors today. Each child will be called for and taken home by a junior, who also will have the responsibility of providing a picnic lunch.

The group will meet in Jackson park and tour the Rosenwald museum. The afternoon will be spent in the picturesque Japanese gardens.

Chicagoans Go to Ephraim for Resort Season

By Verna Wilson.

EPHRAIM, WIS. Many Chicagoans who have been making frequent week-end trips to their Ephraim homes since early spring have now established their households in the village for the summer season. New boats are going into the water daily, and sailboats again dot protected Eagle harbor.

Mrs. Alfred Wolfe has been at Stockcliff since March. Her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Stock, are spending the summer in Europe. Young Frederick and Alfred Wolfe will be with their mother until school opens in the fall. Clarence Clement and Arthur Gross of Chicago have been Mrs. Wolfe's guests during the past week.

Her friends and Ephraim neighbors, Col. and Mrs. W. W. Yaschenko, arrived recently for the season. They are finding much satisfaction in enlarging the gardens about their newly developed property, where thousands of new perennials and shrubs have been added this spring to the impressive beginning made last year. They also found that their summer home proved so attractive to their many friends that it has been necessary to increase their accommodations for guests.

• • •

Dr. and Mrs. Otto Kampmeyer and their daughter Jacinta of Evanston will spend their first season in the Ephraim home built for them since last summer. There Dr. Kampmeyer hopes to find the quiet atmosphere in which he can write at leisure after a busy winter of teaching and administrative duties at the University of Illinois, where he heads the anatomy department. Mrs. Kampmeyer and Jacinta just returned from the east, where, following Jacinta's graduation from Albertus Magnus College for Women and the completion of her studies at the Yale school of music, both attended the world fair in New York.

The spring and early summer season at their Door county home has been a busy one for Mr. and Mrs. Donald Boynton of Baileys Harbor. This week-end they are entertaining Mario Chamlee of New York, Edith Mason Ragland and William Ragland of Chicago, Mrs. William Peter of Lake Forest, and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Caldwell and Mrs. George Woodruff of Chicago.

Mrs. Roger Vail of Highland Park also is bringing a number of guests to Ephraim for the week-end. Her mother-in-law, Mrs. Henry Vail, arrived for the season last week, and will have her niece, Mrs. Edmund Eitel, with her for a couple of weeks. Mr. Eitel will drive north for the week-end.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ingwerson of Wilmette and her three children, Robert, Barbara, and Janice, have leased the George Norton home for their first extended visit in Ephraim, where they plan to spend much of their time sailing. Mr. and Mrs. Ingwerson made a preliminary trip to Ephraim earlier in the year as the guests of Fred Crawford of Chicago, who has been spending his summers in Ephraim since his boyhood. Mrs. Crawford returned from California recently, and now has opened their Ephraim home for the season, where she is entertaining her aunt, Mrs. Cora Downie of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Sanborn of Evanston arrived the latter part of May to enjoy a long season in their remodeled and redecorated home at the north end of the village. Mrs. Charles Ball of Winnetka and her sons Don and Charles, with their friend Hugh Brown, are occupying the also remodeled Jacobs home, next door, for a few weeks. John Ball and Paul Sullivan were brief visitors in Ephraim, but have returned to Winnetka for summer school.

Mr. and Mrs. John Matter of Winnetka returned to Ephraim in May after spending the winter and early spring traveling through the gulf and Atlantic coast states. They drove east last week to be present at the graduation of their daughter Janet from Wellesley. All will be back in Ephraim for the summer season, including Jack Matter, who has been attending school in Colorado during the past year.

WILD FLOWER TIME IN WISCONSIN

White trillium, also known as the large-flowered wake robin, is one of the showiest of Wisconsin's native blossoms. It has thin white petals and yellow anthers.

Au Sable Chasm Puzzles Experts

AU SABLE CHASM, N.Y.—The walls which enclose this great rent in the earth's surface are again resounding to the cries of vacationists as they shoot the rapids in boats manned by north country experts.

A mile and a half long, Au Sable chasm has a succession of gorges, caves, waterfalls, and cliffs whose origin has confounded geologists and others who have studied its strange sandstone formations.

Legend has it that before the coming of Samuel De Champlain and the white men the deep recesses were used by the Algonquins and possibly the Iroquois Indians as hiding places from their enemies.

Watch Hill, R.I., Storm Center, Opens Season

By Charles Hammond.

WATCH HILL, R. I. Returning summer residents are finding Watch Hill rehabilitated from the effect of last September's hurricane with new Beach and Yacht clubhouses rapidly nearing completion, wider bathing beaches and a general air of readiness for the season. The principal loss of thirty small cottages on the Fort road is compensated by the restoration of Napatree Point to its former untrammeled beauty, free of all buildings. The point is a mile long, sickle shaped sand bar stretching out into the western horizon. Watch Hill cottagers once paid dearly in cash to keep this point from becoming cluttered with buildings and the hurricane ruthlessly carried out their original intention.

The old Watch Hill families are all coming back. Chicago will be represented by Mrs. William J. Chalmers, Mrs. George R. Nichols Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hibbard, Mr. and Mrs. Oren E. Taft, and Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps. Mr. and Mrs. Truman H. Newberry of Detroit are again taking their place as leaders in the summer community. Mr. Newberry, as president of the Watch Hill chapel, has announced a service of prayer and thanksgiving in memory of those who lost their lives at Watch Hill in the hurricane for the opening next Sunday.

The Misquamicut Golf club, unharmed and more attractive than ever, opened its season with a dinner bingo party Wednesday evening with the president of the club, Melsom E. Perin of Washington, D. C. and his charming wife informally receiving old and new members. The club's eighteen hole course and tennis courts are ready for play.

The new clubhouse for the Beach club is a larger structure than last year and combines spacious lounges, bar and grill, also bathhouses under one roof. A new feature of Watch Hill will be a score of cabanas in front of the club. The new Yacht club house will be ready for opening July 1, when the usual program of races will be resumed.

The Ocean House opened on Tuesday, June 20, for its seventy-fourth season with many reservations from former patrons.

Smallest Church Owes Its Origin to a Horse Race

The smallest church in this hemisphere, and perhaps in the world, is the San Cristo chapel at San Juan, Porto Rico. Oddly enough, it owes its origin to a horse race. Over its present site ran a street known as Cristo street, which in 1753 was the favorite racing ground of young Spanish nobles. In the course of an especially keen contest one young rider lost control of his steed and horse and rider tumbled off the cliff. Gen. Tomas Prats, a spectator, prayed quickly that the boy be spared. Miraculously his prayer was answered, though the horse was instantly killed. As an act of thanksgiving the general had the tiny church built.

This Talisman Made of Petrified Dew?

SINGAPORE.—One of the most valued possessions of the sultan of Perak is a stone which, tradition says, is made by petrified dew. This talisman is believed by the Malays to have many miraculous powers. An important part of the sultan's regalia, the stone has been in possession of the Perak dynasty throughout recorded history and is said to have been given to the first sultan by To Temong, a girl saint of Perak. The sultan's sword of state is also of great antiquity. It is believed by Malays to have been the sword of Alexander the Great and to have been used by Mahomet at the battle of Badr.

Disarmament.

Instead of carrying the traditional police night stick, Bermuda officers wear a little striped band on their sleeves to indicate that they are on duty. Their only "armament" is a small billy club, tucked out of sight in the hip pocket.

THE TRIBUNE TRAVELERS' GUIDE

DOMESTIC TRAVEL | FOREIGN TRAVEL

Visitors Have Rummy Time in This Paradise

By Percy Wood.

If they are so fortunate as to have a resident friend, visitors in Trinidad are introduced to a slow but ordered sort of tropical life, in which the siesta is rigidly observed and tea time is followed by a more spirited period which might be called rum time.

This is not meant to imply that the British colonials who rule the rich little island a few miles off the Venezuelan coast are besotted remittance men. They are good business men—merchants, importers and exporters, ship chandlers, and oil people—and they have managed their ventures well enough so that a few hours of supervision each day is all that is required.

Consequently, there has developed an elaborate series of rest periods throughout the day and evening which an American visitor finds wholly charming. It is an effortless schedule made possible, in part, by cheap domestic labor. The house servants are West Indian blacks, but there also is a large contingent of East Indian Hindus, who cling to their own ways of dress, religion and other habits, and assimilate only in an economic sense.

• • •

Notes on a typical day in Trinidad begin at the jetty at Port of Spain. An extensive harbor development is under way, but, until docking facilities are available, the trip from the cruise ship is by launch or rowboat.

The host is waiting dockside, and a few courteous words from him clears overnight baggage through the customs in a few minutes. A car is at the curb, and a short drive through tree-tangled streets ends before a big, roomy house surrounded by a high wire fence in the center of a section of capacious homes set in large yards. It is only a few blocks from the Savanna—the large park and race track in the center of the city. Close by is an imposing mansion occupied by the governor of the island—generally a career diplomat with a title.

A Trinidad home is a light and airy place, not overburdened with furniture and possessing a long veranda where most waking hours are spent. The yard is an exotic adjunct where orchids bloom near avocado pears and limes. If the owner has a taste for tropical birds there will be a mammoth cage built about the base of the avocado tree and containing brilliant macaws and parrots. The intermittent thump of pears alighting on the top of their cage does not seem to bother the birds.

• • •

Although it is only 9 a. m. and breakfast is before one, the order of the day calls for rum cocktails. It is a casual ceremony, not prolonged by the customary sipping of the American cocktail hour, for the Trinidadian quaffs his with a toss and visitors are expected to do likewise. Then, and only then, is breakfast served.

This leisurely meal completed, the host proposes a visit to his business establishment while the women shop for Hindu or native silver bracelets. One of the "must" stops on this tour is at the shop of an East Indian who has a zoo of reptiles, monkeys, and parrots in the rear of his store. Sidewalk bargaining in Trinidad is just what the word implies. You pay according to your ability to haggle.

The host guides his men guests through his store or ship chandlery with few pauses, and then makes a bee line for his club for 11 a. m. rum punches—which seem to differ from the cocktails only in the size of the glass. On the way he probably will stop at the bitters factory, where tourists drink on the house. The only qualification to this generosity is an insistence that whatever is ordered includes bitters as one of the ingredients.

• • •

The host's club is likely to be in the big leather chair tradition of similar American meeting places, but it also will include a wide veranda overlooking a garden where small animals run wild. With the rum punch will come a dozen or so small and very delicious oysters, which should be dipped in a hot sauce. It is a tasty combination.

This mid-morning recess is likely to last until 1 p. m. and lunch time. Back on the cool porch of the house more cocktails are waiting, but so intense is the heat that a liberal perspiration seems to dissipate an ordinary American's reaction to alcohol. Lunch probably will include an avocado salad—the pears far larger and more delicious than are obtainable in, say, Chicago.

Siesta follows luncheon and is observed by most of the stores and shops. These establishments haul down metal curtains over their street fronts, and the business thoroughfares are deserted until the broiling afternoon sun has spent its blaze. Then it is tea time. Another short period and it is cocktail time—enjoyed perhaps at one of the cool, spacious golf clubs on the outskirts of the city.

After dinner the party once more stretches itself in long cane chairs on the veranda. Mosquitoes buzz angrily at the close mesh screen which, the visitors are told, serves a double purpose in guarding against vampire bats.

In the midst of the conversation a trio or quartet of blended voices accompanied by a guitar drifts from the street. "Listen," says the host, "this is a calypso. You'll hear about it yourself presently."

And so you do. The performers beyond the fence soon begin an impromptu and highly original ballad about the pretty little lady in the blue dress—your wife—who, they say musically, has unquestionable virtue, is beautiful beyond expression, and is a credit to North America. Yourself, you hear, are strong as a lion, yet kind and handsome. The host's wife is a lovely lady, renowned for her good works, and the host is a veritable giant in the business life of the island. All this in extemporized and charming verse. It is worth the shilling you take to the gate.

"Calypso" originated with the blacks in Trinidad, and many of the allegorical stories sung by the performers have been recorded for sale in America.

• • •

On this pleasant note—plus a long, cool planters' punch—the day ends. "To bed" may mean to a full sized couch or a surprisingly comfortable hammock, which, in either event, is covered with mosquito netting. You drift to sleep to the gentle accompaniment of the calypso singers vaunting the praises of the neighbors in the next block. Trinidad, you vow, distinctly has its points.

Princess' Toys to Go on Display

LONDON.—Toys and playthings of the little princesses who remained at home while the British king and queen were touring the United States and Canada will be featured at a three month exhibit of royal possessions, to open here June 28. Other possessions of the royal family to be shown include many of the queen's belongings from Glamis, her family home; one of Queen Victoria's dolls, and a portrait of Paderewski painted by Princess Louise.

New Type Bus for Norwegian Railway

A new type rail-bus will be introduced this summer on the Bergen-Oslo railway. It will accommodate fifty-five passengers and cut the running time from Bergen to Oslo to about eight hours. The railway rises to a height of 4,010 feet at Finse, its highest station, and cuts through some of the finest scenic terrain of Norway.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

Letters regarding travel conditions and experiences are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

MEXICO.

Chicago, June 18.—To the Travel Editor: My wife and I, just returned from a trip to Mexico, are Mexico conscious at the present, and all articles on that country interest us very much. The one written by John Tempest in THE TRIBUNE June 11 seems incredible for an American to take such an attitude.

Before we left home we were advised by every one who had been there to be careful of the drinking water and food. We should drink only bottled water and eat in the best hotels and restaurants. How one could eat for 25 cents a day, as Mr. Tempest did, seems too fantastic for belief, judging from the places we went to.

Our trip was a wonderful experience. The scenery is very beautiful. We can hardly wait until we can pay a return visit to Mexico. RALPH E. PANNELL.

—AND MORE MEXICO.

Chicago, June 18.—To the Travel Editor: We noted, in today's TRIBUNE, the letter from Mrs. B. C. Bachrach, objecting to John Tempest's article in your paper on "How to Live in Old Mexico on 25 Cents a Day."

A fig for your "consternation," Mrs. Bachrach! Why, only a year ago, and in exactly the same way as did Mr. Tempest and his sister, we lived in Mexico for four months. And nothing even remotely approaching disaster reared its ugly head.

Far from primitive, the "casas de huespedes" mentioned by Mr. Tempest are much like our own "tourist homes" and "family hotels," although the less expensive ones are more similar to American boarding houses.

We, too, bought and ate food from street vendors [in spite of disapproval from Mexican friends who were afraid our American stomachs "couldn't take it"]. Moreover, we never, at any place or time, bothered to question the water we drank, and not once have we had cause to regret our "recklessness."

On the contrary, our visit was much more enjoyable and informative than that of the tourist who takes most of his meals at Sanborn's, and sees Mexico through a hotel or automobile window, could ever be.

In Tacuba [outskirting Mexico City] where our $12 a month [about 40 cents a day] included three large and very good meals daily—to say nothing of between meal snacks and all sorts of minor services for both of us—we chopped our own wood for the hot water heater and went with the senora when she did her marketing.

In Guadalajara we baked American cakes and made fudge for "our family," and even helped the senora try out new recipes.

We learned to speak Spanish [it's amazing how quickly one learns a new language when he has to] and everywhere we stayed—Puebla, Morelia, Tetipac, Oaxaca, Jalisco, Vera Cruz—we became part of the family. Side trips, parties, picnics, and weddings were only a few of the advantages we enjoyed by living in Mexico instead of touring it. We traveled by bus whenever possible, a few times by train [even second class], and on horseback, and had no trouble whatever.

Now we're not suggesting that every traveler live as we did. Most Americans wouldn't like it at all—especially those who are accustomed to living in the best hotels and eating only perfectly prepared foods; those who have never stooped to eat the lowly "hot dog." We just want to say that it can be done, easily and safely. And we'll bet we had even more fun than Mrs. Bachrach did! HELEN AND EUNICE LOSEFF.

AN EMERGENCY OPERATION.

Chicago, June 20.—To the Travel Editor: The Matson liner Lurline arrived in San Francisco from Hawaii May 24 with more than 600 passengers. Proving again the adequacy of emergency hospitalization at sea was a successful appendectomy performed by the ship surgeon, Dr. J. N. Ingram. The patient, R. A. Abercrombie of Chicago, is now resting easily at St. Luke's hospital. Dr. W. S. Midleton, dean of the University of Wisconsin school of medicine, who was a passenger, aided Dr. Ingram as an observer. MRS. H. V. ABERCROMBIE.

MAIL FOR SHUT-INS.

South Chicago, Ill., June 14.—To the Travel Editor: Please add the name of my nephew, Joseph Nasich, to your shut-in list. He has heart trouble and has been in bed for the last six months. He is 15 years old. He is especially interested in Alaska, but would like to receive letters from everywhere. His address is 9012 South Green Bay avenue, Chicago. MRS. MARY KOZUL.

Chicago, June 12.—To the Travel Editor: Please add the name of Edgar Trent, State Sanitarium, Oakdale, Ia., to your list. He is about 58 years old and is suffering from tuberculosis of the throat. About all he can do is listen to the radio and read. G. E. STICKLER.

Kankakee, Ill., June 4.—To the Travel Editor: I am 71 years old and have been a shut-in for a long while. Cards and letters would be deeply appreciated. Perhaps one of your readers would have an old Bible or a pair of eye glasses that I could use. Address: Kankakee State hospital. MRS. BERTHA MATTERN.

Muskegon, Mich., June 1.—To the Travel Editor: May we, too, join the shut-ins who receive mail from travelers? We'll be here for a long time, and we'd greatly enjoy cards or letters to relieve the monotony. Address: Tuberculosis Sanatorium, Route 3, Box 171.

RUTH REED,
MARIE CASTONDA.

Haitian Citadel Is as Weird as a Nightmare

By Anson Brown.

CAPE HAITIEN, HAITI.

It is like the sudden frightened awakening in the middle of a dark night. Some one must be in the room, probably with a gun in hand. The clock on the table ticks noisily, yet above it all a board creaks and there seems to be the sound of an intruder's stealthy breathing. Fear and excitement are both present. What monster, what inhuman form is lurking by the door? Turn on the light. Click! Nothing there. The imagination again.

What has all this to do with Haiti? Spend some time poking around alone in the dungeons of Christophe's citadel near Cape Haitien and the same eerie attitude will seize you, for all the ghosts of more than a century ago are lurking in the pitfalls of the castle. I know. I spent hours up there on the top of a 3,000 foot mountain, and I'm crazy to do it again [crazy, probably, in more than one sense of the word]. The Parthenon in Athens isn't nearly as exciting, as colossal, as downright skin-crawling as is this huge monument to a mad black man once gone berserk with power.

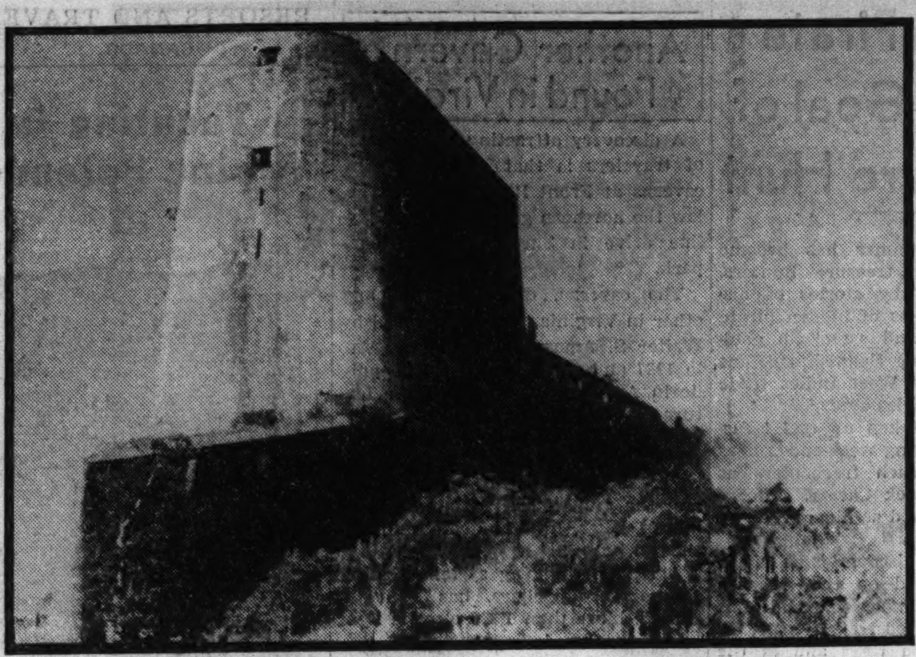
It has been a revelation to me to find that the story of Emperor Jones was no myth, that such a man actually lived a hundred and twenty years ago, that he enslaved his people, built huge palaces, and finally committed suicide by sending a silver bullet into his brain. It all took place here in Haiti, where today the descendants of Christophe's slaves have laid down the hoe and gone back to sleep.

Most of the plantations have again been claimed by the jungle, and the era of splendor is now represented by nothing more than broken walls, forgotten doorways, crumbling stairs. But back about 1812 the court of King Christophe I. was as highly "cultural" as that of any European dynasty. The women were in laces, the men in knee breeches; there were perfumes, silks, imported wines. Christophe's own sons were princes, his two unappreciated nephews were dubbed Comte de Marmalade and Comte de Limonade. There were dancing girls and carriages. The port of Cape Haitien buzzed with more activity than did the shipping center of New York City. Today an occasional cruise ship rests at anchor for a few hours while the passengers climb the torturous trail to the citadel, but the visitors are back on board before the sun has quite set, and the boat steams away over the horizon, leaving the quiet harbor to reflect the setting sun; leaving the people to go back to their voodoo drums in the valleys.

• • •

Cape Haitien is on the north side of the island, 250 miles by car if you survive the trip, for the word road in Haiti means almost any stretch of path from which the boulders and trees have been cleared. Three of us hired a car for $30 for the 500 mile round trip, and why I'm still living to tell the story is another mystery. We all but rolled down a mountainside twice, smashed a fender on a tree, ran over two dogs, five chickens, and a pig. The colored driver and owner of the erratic vehicle gained great glee out of destroying everything that crossed his path. Our objections only made him more accurate in his aim.

After a restful night in a clean pension in Cape Haitien one is prone to forget the rigors of the day before, what with prospects of a day of exploring in the mountains. We had already seen a few of the ruins, but the citadel was to be the climax.



THE CRUMBLING PALACE OF A MAD KING

Christophe's citadel, atop a mountain in Haiti, still stands as a monument to a black man who went berserk with power.

Our cab took us to a town called Milot, fourteen miles in the interior, and there we paused to view the ruins of Sans Souci, one of the nine lesser palaces built by the tyrannical Christophe. This was the spot where he killed himself. An earthquake in 1842—along with the American tourists— has left Sans Souci a massive bulk of roofless stone ruins. Even today, though, the huge star-apple tree still blooms in the open court before the palace stairs. Here the king once held court with the high officials of state. Now small green lizards crawl up the black trunk, jet crows pick at the apples in the branches, and the indolent natives sleep in its shade.

• • •

We three rented anemic horses from some of the localities who had gathered around us on our arrival. Our ascent began. On all sides towered the mountains, dark green, steeping in the heat from the plains. Three thousand feet we had to climb, in and out small valleys and pathways, between large boulders and overhanging ledges. Ever upward, puffing and wheezing. One hour passed. We paused to water the horses in a mountain stream.

Far below lay the ruins of Sans Souci. There was Milot, with its little white houses baking in the sun. To the north in the blue haze was the cape and the placid emerald of the Caribbean. Coconut palms were in abundance around me. So were breadfruit trees [thanks to Capt. Bligh of the Bounty]. A humming bird zoomed among the trumpet vines clinging to the rocks. A cool breeze [at last!] swept through the thick lush foliage. I rested my saddle sores.

The climb carried us over two mountains. Still no sight of the citadel. Once a cloud swept down on us, enveloping the caravan in a momentary fog. We passed many straw huts and the ever-present blacks standing in the doorways or sitting on the hard clay ground. Some of the children ran out of sight and the cur dogs barked at the horses' heels. The noise was incessant. I dismounted and continued on foot. Still no citadel.

• • •

Onward and upward until soft muscles began to complain. Another cloudy swept down. I rounded the curve in a foggy mist. I looked up as it began to clear, and stopped in amazement. Was the prow of a ghost ship bearing down on us? The northern point of the gigantic palace staggering directly above us surpassed in sheer incredulity even the Colossus of Rhodes. It was far more unearthly as wisps of clouds clung for a moment to its bulk and then swept on. My heart was pounding in my ears. Can the Taj Mahal be more imposing? Some day I shall know.

Large iron doors at the base of the prow were opened, awaiting us as though a prefabricated sesame had already been uttered. I felt dwarfed, insignificant, like an ant exploring the crannies of a basement. We had entered into a dungeon, dank, dark, with musty odors creeping through the gloom. Scarcely able to see the stairs, we climbed from step to step, each one heavy with a carpet of soft moss. I could easily imagine the wealth that had once been here. We passed rows of cannon, each with its individual window through which to fire out over the valley green.

Up more stairs, then, and out into the courtyard. In the very center lies a dollhouse of stone, containing the remains of Christophe. A small cannon stands menacingly in front of it. Even in the noon sunlight it was a bit ghostly, a bit inconceivable.

• • •

It is difficult to put such an impression in words—all this romantic history crumbling around me, clouds sweeping in, moisture crawling down the gray stone walls, wind whining through openings that once were windows.

Later I shall come back and spend the night by the tomb—if I can get by the guards. I'll build a fire in the courtyard, and watch the bats fly around in the weird shadows, and listen to the throb of the voodoo drums in the distance. As far as I'm concerned Christophe can lie still in his tomb. I'll have the movie camera ready on the highest turret, so that when the dawn breaks over the Haitian mountains I can capture the sunrise in color. Only in this way can the works of the incredible Christophe be portrayed to those who have never been here, for Christophe was mad enough to believe he was God!

Summer Social Season Opens in Nantucket

By Whitman Pearson.

The last Sunday in June finds vacation activities well under way at this pleasant island resort thirty miles off the Massachusetts coast. NANTUCKET, MASS. Every day sees a great increase in the size of the summer colony as the island steamers and planes from Boston and New York bring hundreds of additional vacationists across Nantucket sound.

Islanders boast that Nantucket has a summer which is "five Septembers long" and every year a larger number of summer visitors takes advantage of this to stretch their island vacation from May to October. Among the very early arrivals this season were Col. and Mrs. Robert Stewart of Chicago, who opened their attractive Pleasant street home the first week in May. The Stewart residence, a large square brick mansion built by a retired shipmaster during the golden age of Nantucket whaling, is one of the show places of the island.

● ● ●

Visitors to the Stewart home are especially impressed by the exquisite murals which decorate the spacious dining room, and by the beautiful garden which provides an ideal setting for frequent outdoor parties.

Mrs. Benjamin F. Taylor is another Chicagoan who believes in beginning her Nantucket sojourn early, for her upper Main street residence has been open since the middle of May. Dr. and Mrs. Frank X. Walls and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Atkins are other members of the Chicagoan colony who have arrived for the season.

On June 14 the Nantucket Yacht club, center of the island's social and sporting activities, was officially in commission, and this week finds club affairs swinging into midseason tempo. The first trial races of the summer will be held Saturday afternoon, and that evening the spacious club ballroom will be the scene of the season's first dinner-dance.

● ● ●

A community Fourth celebration, bigger and better than last year's highly successful affair, will add to the regular holiday activities on Independence day. Athletic events will make up the morning program, with the special feature being a modified marathon race. Parades are rare events on the island, so Nantucket's historic cobblestone streets will be well lined with spectators for the mammonth parade which will be the highlight of the afternoon's activities. Nearly thirty elaborate floats will be featured in this procession. The evening program will be climaxed by a spectacular display of fireworks at the Municipal beach, and the Fourth of July ball, the yacht club early season premier social event.

The Siascon [better known as Sconset] casino is to the quaint village at the eastern end of the island what the yacht club is to Nantucket town, and last week officers at the casino were planning a busy program for the vacation season. Robert W. Stark of Philadelphia is president of the casino association, and he is ably assisted by Vice President Frederick P. Boynton of Chicago.

No place in America has a better right to a summer theater than this same Sconset village, for here, over a quarter of a century ago, the summer idea had its inception. At the turn of the century this tiny hamlet was a popular retreat for many stage celebrities, and to Sconset nearly forty years ago Percy Haswell, Mary Mannering, George Fawcett, Regan Hughston, and others who had ascended to Broadway fame brought the best talent of the American stage in informal recital. Last summer the theater returned to Sconset and hundreds of Nantucket's theater lovers looked forward to their weekly trek across the moor for the productions of the playhouse group. The same company, aided by guest artists, will present another series of outstanding plays during the current season.

Visiting Nelson's Flagship.

Visitors may see Nelson's flagship, The Victory, at Portsmouth, England, in a dry dock built in 1656 [the oldest drydock in the world]. Nearby is the Victory museum, with many memorials of Nelson, Napoleon, the Battle of Trafalgar, and the Napoleonic wars.

INTENT ON A BIT OF TOY SAILING

Tadoussac, summer resort on the lower St. Lawrence river in Quebec, provides the background for this picture of flaming youth.

Time Is Ageless in the Land of Blueberry Pie

By Larry Powell.

The clock does not strike in the land of the blueberry pie, Quebec's northern fringe of civilization. Instead, time sits on a doorsill with the natives and spins legends that first had their birth in Canada four centuries back.

Founded 101 years ago by French-Canadian pioneers, the Saguenay settlements—Pointe Bleue, St. Felicien, Peribonca, Tadoussac, and a score of others—still pattern their customs after those of another age. Square dancing, outdoor baking, hand weaving of family clothing, quaint idioms—all of these today are as they were 100 years ago, when a band of twenty-one pioneers moved into the country of the Montagnais Indians, set up their sawmills, and built their log cabins.

In almost totally isolated communities of the Saguenay—shut from the outside except for visits of cruise ships during the summer months—the sense of timelessness is especially noticeable. In St. Basile, for instance, the habitants of the four family hamlet live a daily scheme that might have been lifted bodily out of the early 1800s.

● ● ●

Not many mountainous miles away is the forgotten town of Descente des Femmes. Buried in a valley, the village of nine families conducts its life with little concern for the outside. A perfect world in miniature, the community has its small red church, cheese dairy, and one room schoolhouse. There are no doctors or lawyers; the tiny town manages to survive without them.

In this settlement, as in all the others that bring sound and color to the pine clad mountains, music is an essential part of social life. Not the music of radios, but that brought forth from old violins, pianos, and other instruments. On Saturday nights the villagers gather and merge their musical talents. Bathed in the light of kerosene lamps, they group in parlors or a common meeting place and dance and sing to tunes that have long been dead in the memory of city folk.

The picking and the cooking of blueberries is another common interest binding the communities of the Saguenay together. Here in August visitors see entire communities deserting shops and homes to pick the fruit. It is then that the mountain country becomes the land of the blueberry pie. Kitchens are busy with canning and baking, and the Saguenay people turn out their national dish—one which, they claim, cannot be equaled in any other part of the world.

● ● ●

Other anachronistic aspects are the domestic scenes built around the old fashioned spinning of wool and the weaving of Scottish tartans on roughly hewn home looms. Using orange tinted spinning wheels that were shipped into the country when clearings were just being hacked out of the forest lands, housewives in L'Anse St. Jean, Grand Baie, and Baie Ste. Catherine can be seen, on any summer day, spinning yarns for socks, sweaters, and mittens for their families.

During the winter months, in spotless cottages, the same housewives spend their days at their looms, weaving red and blue checked plaids for dresses, shirts, and bedspreads.

Time's recess in the Saguenay is also noticeable in the Montagnais Indian reservation at Pointe Bleue on Lake St. John. Members of a tribe that controled the country when Jacques Cartier first explored it in 1535, they still live with the simplicity of ancient times.

New Attraction: a Herb Exhibition

Herbs will have their place in the sun in Poland late this summer. A National Herb, Mushroom, and Preserves fair will be held in Wilno the first three days of September. The exhibit will demonstrate modern ways of preparing and preserving herbs, with all kinds of choppers, slicers, dryers, and packaging and canning machines on display.

Animated Pincushion.

A rare lion fish, supposed to be extinct, was caught off Honolulu recently and shipped to the Bermuda government aquarium by Vincent Astor. Dazzled by the brilliance of its fifty flaring fins, Bermuda newspaper men described it variously as an "animated pincushion" and a "glass blower's dream." Its sting is said to be fatal but reposing in a glass lined aquarium tank it is as harmless as it is beautiful.

Hidden Pirate Loot Is Goal of Treasure Hunt

Miami this summer has become headquarters for treasure hunters, lured by stories of discoveries of hidden pirate loot and sunken gold-bearing Spanish galleons that traveled the West Indies trade route three centuries ago. MIAMI, FLA.

Visitors have taken up real treasure hunting, making week-end cruises to places that such freebooters as Jean LaFitte, Black Caesar, and Sir Henry Morgan used as hideouts along the coast.

Several recent discoveries of buried coin have spurred on the treasure minded, and a number of expeditions have been organized here for searches along the Florida Keys and in the nearby Caribbean.

● ● ●

A Chicago broker, Waldo Logan, is the latest to join the ranks. He has arrived here to meet Capt. John D. Craig for an expedition to the Isle of Pines, off the Cuban coast, to investigate a sunken ship that is believed to the S. S. Albany, an American war sloop that disappeared in 1854. Old cannon recently taken from the wreckage are thought by the navy department to be from the Albany.

Dr. Cyrus French Wicker, former professor of international law at the University of Miami, has identified a number of coins found near the sunken ship as a kind used by slave traders along the east coast of Africa. He made the identification after conferring with scientists of the American Museum of Natural History and the Numismatic Society of New York.

● ● ●

Another recent find is a pirate treasure, said to be worth approximately $75,000 in old Spanish doubloons, and taken from an excavation at Trujillo City, Dominican Republic.

Discoveries in the last few years on the mainland and among the coral keys south of Miami include a cache, estimated in value at about $45,000, on Captain's key; pieces of eight and ecclesiastic gold coins, found on Matecumbe key; twenty-eight cannons and coins, taken from a British naval vessel that disappeared in 1695, and found off Careysfort Lighthouse, and an as yet unappraised cache found on Lower Matecumbe key.

Another Cavern Found in Virginia

A discovery attracting the interest of travelers is that of the Skyline caverns at Front Royal, Va., just below the northern gateway to the Skyline drive in Shenandoah National park.

The caverns, different from any other in Virginia, were discovered by Walter S. Amos of Winchester, Va., in 1937 and were opened to the public in April of this year. Their features include an underground river, which winds its way beside dry walkways, later plunging into a colorful waterfall; the helictites, or cave flowers; the multicolored painted desert, mirror lakes, Capitol dome, and Cathedral hall.

A modern lighting system, costing thousands of dollars, has been installed. More than 1,300 electric light bulbs were used.

Tropical Land Is a Paradise of Paradoxes

By Betty Browning.

Guatemala is a paradoxical paradise. It lies in the tropics—between Mexico and Honduras, in case you're a bit vague as to Central American geography—yet it is visited even more in summer than in winter.

There are several reasons for this. Guatemala is as cool, or almost as cool, in July as in January.

School teachers, largest single class of globe trotters, are free to travel in summer. So are most other professional people.

It is possible to see the country in seven days. And the tour includes a gorgeous sequence of jungle plantations, ruined Spanish cities, volcanoes, coffee fincas, mountain lakes, pagan shrines, and Indian markets brilliant with native costumes and wares.

But if you wish to make the complete tour the trip from Chicago and return takes nineteen days—and that is more time than many persons can afford in the winter. Nineteen days, that is, if you go by banana boat, as most of the travelers do. The only alternative is to fly.

• • •

Which leads to another paradox: Guatemala, one of the least industrialized of countries, is dominated by "big business"—the banana business.

Without bananas there would be no boats. Without bananas, too, tourist travel in Guatemala would be almost a minus quantity. The single track railroad that takes you across country from the Atlantic port to the highland capital and the picturesque hinterlands is maintained by banana revenues. So are the twisting mountain highways over which expert Indian chauffeurs speed you at the pace of an amusement park "ride." Banana is king in Guatemala.

It is the highland, and not the profitable and steaming banana country, that gives Guatemala its allure for visitors. Antigua, capital of Guatemala until an eighteenth century earthquake left it a magnificent ruin, is there in the highland. There, too, you will find the Indian villages, essentially as they were before the first Spaniards marched down from Mexico to fresh conquests.

• • •

Each village still weaves by hand its own costumes, different from any other village's; still grinds its corn, holds its market days. Human beasts of burden, running for miles at a swift trot, still carry vast loads of pottery and furniture on their backs. From childhood these natives have been trained to carry loads, and must always bear the same weight in order to keep their balance. When they have nothing else to carry they carry stones.

Virtually the only innovations the white men have introduced are the churches. Each village, no matter how humble, has two—chiefly, they say, so that the religious processions bearing elaborately garbed statues may have a destination when they leave either of the churches.

"They say," refers here to Oscar Assardo. He and a dozen other young men are the travelers' most valuable sources of information on Guatemala. [The guide books, for some reason, all seem to be inadequate.] Guatemala's state department and foreign office necessarily offering few careers, these young men, all educated at foreign universities, have turned guide.

Belonging to the infinitesimal minority of Caucasians in their country, they have a penchant for collecting colorful data about their Indian fellow countrymen. Thereby they provide Guatemala with a highly unusual commodity: intelligent information for tourists.

• • •

One more important news source for the traveler: the Palmers. They're Lewis and Mildred, and each has a strongly individual personality, yet they're known collectively in Guatemala as "the Palmers." Both are Americans, both were aviators, but they have given up flying to conduct a charming establishment where Guatemala delicacies and textiles are obtained.

Mildred Palmer has a flair for interior decorating, and it was she who completed the restoration of the famous "House in Antigua" when the death of her friend, Dorothy Popenoe, left it unfinished. Now Mrs. Palmer is restoring a lovely old Spanish colonial house of her own, just a square or two away from the Popenoe house in the ancient ruined capital of Guatemala.

It is delightful to sit at dusk in the patio of this house and look beyond the fountain and the warm tiled roof to the peak of Agua, one of the two volcanoes that once destroyed the town and now stands guard above it.

IT'S A BUSY DAY FOR THE INDIANS

Natives taking produce to market across Lake Atitlan, in the highlands of Guatemala.

Europe's Season Nears Its Height

The height of the tourist season in Europe will be reached in July. Many of the American travelers overseas will go to Zurich, Switzerland, where the national exposition is being held, the nearest thing to a world's fair in Europe this summer. Others will attend such affairs as the annual Palio races in Italy, the Royal regatta, and the Searchlight tattoo in England, the Lingiad in Sweden, the music festivals at Salzburg, and the Wagner festivals at Bayreuth.

Tobacco Festival.

WILSON, N. C.—This town, largest cigaret tobacco auction market in the world, will hold the annual North Carolina tobacco festival July 18 to 20. Sponsors from 115 towns have been invited to contest for the title of tobacco queen.

Giant Sequoia Has Watched Over Us for 3,800 Years

Only on the western slopes of the Sierra Nevada grow the giant Sequoias—or "big trees," as they are more commonly known—largest and oldest of living things.

Within the boundaries of Yosemite National park there are three stands of these ancient trees: the Merced, the Tuolumne, and the Mariposa groves. Of these, the Mariposa is the most famous, for in it are more than 600 mature sequoias, including some of the finest and largest known specimens.

Patriarch of the grove is the Grizzly Giant, whose age has been estimated at 3,800 years. Its greatest base diameter is 34.7 feet. Most photographed is the Wawona tree, through which, in 1881, was cut a tunnel wide enough to admit the largest stagecoaches of that era. This tree stands on the main road through the grove. The tunnel is 26 feet long. One of the largest is the Massachusetts tree, which was blown down in the winter of 1927, but, even so, requires a stairway to mount its trunk. Another—the Fallen Monarch—has supported stage coaches and an entire troop of cavalry on its prone trunk.

But these are virtually the only casualties in the grove. Even the oldest of the other Sequoias show no signs of weakness or decay, despite the ravages of time and the elements.

To stand in the shade of these big trees is like being in another world—a world where time stands still. John Muir said: "No other tree in the world has looked down on so many centuries as the Sequoia, or opens so many impressive and suggestive views into history."

Boats Kept Busy.

MIAMI, Fla.—Treasure hunts along the Florida Keys, fishing excursions into the tropical waters of the Gulf of Mexico, and a variety of social activities will highlight the summer program planned by the Cruising Mariners, a new organization of boating enthusiasts formed here. The organization plans to keep busy the fleet of motorboats, largest in the south, which makes year-round headquarters at Miami.

They're Solving Mystery Engulfing Weather Changes

LAKE PLACID, N. Y. — Studies being made at the meteorological observatory and radio research laboratory atop Whiteface mountain are clearing up a lot of the mystery that for ages has surrounded the weather.

The laboratory is set up in the shelter house at the top of the elevator shaft which connects the end of the Whiteface Mountain Memorial highway with the peak of the mountain. It is operated jointly by Rensselaer Polytechnic institute and New York university. The United States weather bureau also coöperates with the station, which supplies meteorological observations to the bureau seven times a day, winter and summer.

Engineers on duty nearly a mile above the sea prepare maps of the paths followed by storm forming low pressure areas as they swing eastward across the United States. The observatory thus serves as an outpost from which warnings of storms can be sent out to the eastern part of the country.

Meteorological measurements are made at frequent intervals of the day and night, and these are transmitted by short wave radio to several airports.

Whiteface is the only mountain in the United States from which important research into ozone is being conducted.

Nations Ready to Turn Plague Against Locust

BOMBAY.—(AP)—Within ten years, it is prophesied here, the locust, said to be the oldest insect enemy of mankind, will be subdued.

Several countries in Europe, Asia, and Africa are preparing a joint campaign to exterminate the insect.

An Indian government survey shows that the permanent breeding grounds of the locusts extends far over the sandy soil along the Arabian sea, the interior of Makran, and the Great Indian desert, although the locust population at any particular place is subject to great fluctuation.

A system of marking locusts and then liberating them has been tried to determine their movements. Extensive research also has been conducted into their breeding and habits.

Cairo: the Most Fantastic Sight in Travel World

By Frederic Babcock.

CAIRO, EGYPT. Curved sails billowing on the Nile . . . sunset glinting on a vast sea of gilded domes and minarets . . . palm trees dark against the sky . . . caravans of camels disappearing into a blue haze . . . the Pyramids, oldest of man-made wonders . . . the Sphinx, chipped and broken, but still gazing with that Mona Lisa smile out over the yellow sands . . . Cairo, rising like a dream city out of a desert . . . refinement and crudity, culture and ignorance, civilization and semi-barbarism . . . relics dating back to the year 4400 B. C. . . . an air of mystery that for centuries has challenged, and baffled, the whole world.

Without a doubt, Cairo and its surroundings form the most fantastic sight—and one of the most fascinating—in all the field of travel.

As far as this traveler has observed, there are only three other scenic spectacles that can compare with that produced by the moon rising over the Pyramids. Those three are: Sunrise over Lake Louise, in the Canadian Rockies; the Bay of Naples, as viewed from Sorrento at sunset, and the harbor at Rio de Janeiro, as seen from Sugar Loaf mountain just as the lights of the "necklace" are turned on at twilight.

● ● ●

The obvious sights hereabouts are all that the casual visitor has time for. He senses, but cannot grasp, their historical significance. To grasp that would require years of study. The average tourist has only a few days.

But even in that time he yields to the irresistible. He comes to realize that here civilization was born, nurtured, and brought to a high state of perfection; that the land of the Pharaohs was great long before Greece and Rome were ever heard of; that it was building stupendous temples and monuments and pyramids while the rest of mankind was living in huts and caves.

He also discovers that this country is virtually changeless. Time has made only slight alterations. Except in Cairo and Alexandria, innovations are few. Egypt is much the same as it was before the coming of Christ. Water is still transported the way it was in Moses' time. The grain is winnowed under the methods used when Joseph was governor.

● ● ●

As everybody knows by this time, the Nile, main artery of life in this country, overflows its banks each spring. In the early days this flooding obliterated all landmarks. In order to establish rightful ownership to property, the surveying and registration of land became a common practice. Then, to settle property line disputes, courts of law were established. In this way, as the years wore on, the Nile brought about social, legal, and civic order [and also —sad to relate—the institution of taxes for the maintenance of that order]. Likewise, the giant stream, running the length of the country, led to the building of boats and the consequent development of commerce. Thus Egypt can rightfully claim to be the birthplace of progress.

Today it is one vast mausoleum. It is filled with memorials to the men who gave it its earlier glories. Here the dead alone are great. Here silence broods over the relics of antiquity, the reminders of other and nobler days. Here are preserved—as mummies—the bodies of more than 700 million of the departed.

● ● ●

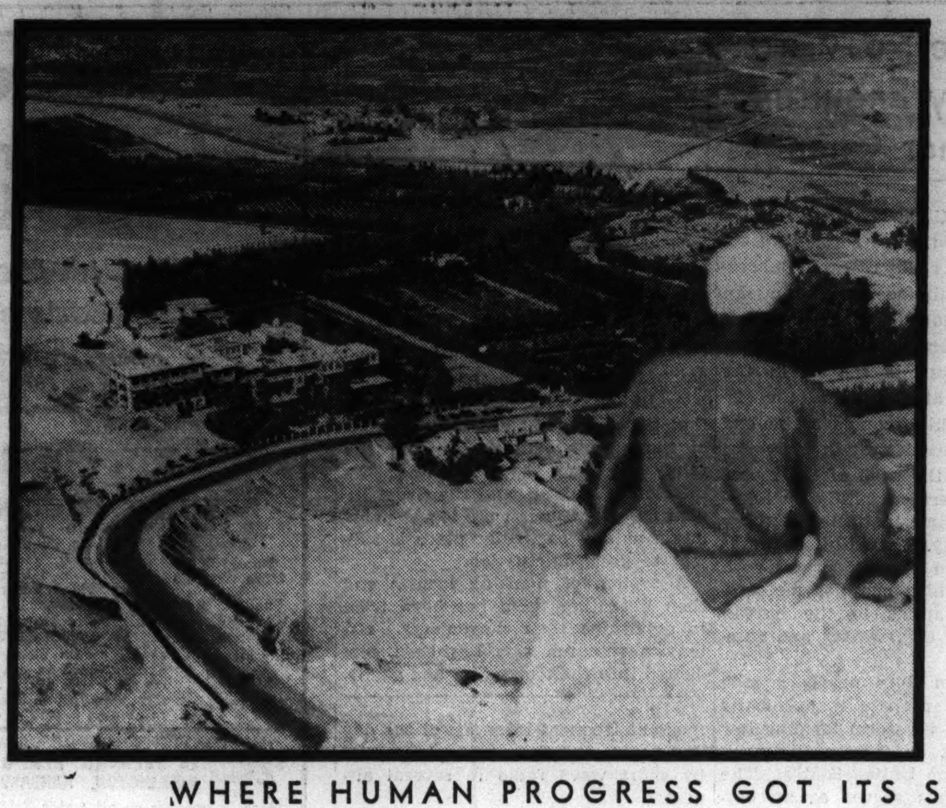
Why the mummies? The old-time Egyptians believed that after proper purification the soul would return to the body in some distant age. So the corpse had to be made impervious to decay; it had to be kept ready to receive the spirit. The elaborate process of mummification was evolved. Each of the twenty-six dynasties had its own method, but all used a combination of wax, salt, soda, spices, and aromatic gums. The wealthy classes paid something like $1,200 for a superfine job of embalming; the middle classes got a less satisfactory process for around $100, and the poor simply salted their dead. The results of the superfine jobs were bodies which will last forever—and some of which are still on display for all who wish to see them.

To lie undisturbed after death seems to have been the chief aim in life of the old timers. So the rich ones built their tremendous tombs. Of the many thousands of these, the most amazing—aside, perhaps, from that of Tut-ankh-Amen at Thebes—was that erected by Cheops, a king of the fourth dynasty, about 3,000 years before the Christian era. Today it is known as the Great Pyramid of Gizeh [Gizeh being, of course, a suburb across the river from Cairo].

● ● ●

This pyramid, largest of the whole array, is a combination of monument, tomb, and prophecy. Egyptologists claim that passages of hieroglyphics in it are an open book in which one may read not only the happenings of the last 5,000 years, but also what is going to happen for many years to come. Some experts even insist that these passages foretold, to the day, the beginning of the world war and the beginning of the depression.

How was it done? Solve that riddle, and you will clear up much of the mystery that is Egypt!



WHERE HUMAN PROGRESS GOT ITS START

Looking from the top of the Great Pyramid of Gizeh, oldest known landmark of a civilization that existed something like 5,000 years ago. The view is toward the Mena house and its gardens.

Old License Numbers.

DUBLIN.—License numbers for vehicles long pre-date the era of the automobile. One of the interesting exhibits in the National gallery here is an ancient list of license numbers for sedan chairs. The list is dated 1787, the year the American constitution was drafted. Names on it are arranged alphabetically with the residance of the owner, and the whole was published in accord with an old law.

Summer Makes Its Irish Debut at Parknasilla

There is one place in Ireland where summer comes earlier than anywhere else in the Emerald Isle, and that is at Parknasilla, on the Kenmare river, in the county of Kerry, which contains the Lakes of Killarney.

The region around Parknasilla is considered not only one of the most beautiful in Ireland but in the entire British Isles. There bud and blossom flourish long before they make their appearance elsewhere in Ireland. The vegetation is really semi-tropical. Ferns and palms such as one would expect to find in the West Indies grow in profusion.

The strange thing about the district is that it is like a parkland of the tropics dropped upon the Atlantic seaboard of Ireland.

Exploring Newest Playground by Foot and on Horseback

BRYSON CITY, N. C.—By foot and by horse outdoors vacationists this season are exploring America's newest national park—the Great Smoky mountains. As yet undeveloped for the casual tourist—who at present must stay in towns bordering the park—the playground for exactly that reason appeals especially to the woodsman.

More than 500 miles of trails are marked and mapped in the park. They include a splendid stretch of the Appalachian trail, which follows the crest of eastern America for seventy-one miles.

The vacationist, traveling light and following his own bent, sees the Smokies better than any one else. Afoot or ahorse, the trails take him through the leafy forests to the symmetrical virgin stands of balsam and spruce, and into valleys where few white men penetrated until the last few years. The plant life is profuse and varied.

One of the favorite trails is to Mount Le Conte, reached from Cherokee Orchard. The eastern end of the Appalachian trail from Newfound Gap is another; it is a round trip of less than eight miles. For an extended trip of two or three days, hikers like the trip from Newfound Gap to Davenport Gap, a distance of thirty-one miles, most of it more than 5,000 feet high. For the hardy hiker, an interesting trip is from Smokemont to the Three Forks section of Ravenfork. It takes him into the largest stand of virgin red spruce and balsam in the park. The distance is twelve miles each way.

She's 50 Years Old.

BERLIN.—Most persons who have visited this city remember "Berolina," the comely bronze lady who represents Berlin personified, and who has her headquarters on Alexanderplatz. The "old girl" made her debut fifty years ago on Potsdamerplatz as a plaster cast. She was moved after being cast in bronze.

"I have just returned from Europe"

. . . says
THE MAN FROM COOK'S

Malcolm La Prade, nationally-known travel commentator.

"I have just returned from EUROPE where I visited eight countries on the 'Kungsholm' Spring Cruise.

"When we sailed from New York on April 21st, there was the usual war scare . . . headlines and radio flashes. One weekly news magazine announced May 15th as the definite opening date of hostilities!

"Many of our friends were confident that we were heading for disaster:

. . . we would encounter battle fleets off Spain
. . . Gibraltar and Tangier would be attacked
. . . French Morocco would be invaded
. . . Paris would be filled with marching troops
. . . Londoners would be wearing gas masks
. . . we would have to climb over barbed wire entanglements to see the tulip fields of Holland.

★ ★ ★

"As we actually found it, Europeans were going about their business as usual:

. . . the opera was in full swing at Covent Garden
. . . Maurice Chevalier was packing them in at the 'Casino de Paris'
. . . the tulip fields of Holland were incomparably beautiful
. . . the Moroccan countryside was ablaze with wild flowers
. . . at Stockholm the King of Sweden was attending the tennis matches and playing a set or two himself.

We found it very pleasant to travel in Europe, far from the harrowing headlines."

Hitler's BLOOD PURGE

(Acme photo.)
Fraulein Elizabeth von Schleicher

By Kurt G. W. Ludecke

(Adapted from the book "I Knew Hitler." Copyright: 1937: Kurt G. W. Ludecke.)

Germany's Day of Terror Five Years Ago

Foreword Five years ago next Saturday the world was stunned by what it read in its morning paper (it was Sunday morning). All the whole day and the night before the red hand of death had fallen heavily on Germany. Adolf Hitler had consolidated his power by means of a blood purge in which 800 to 1,200 persons lost their lives. Here is the inside story of what happened in Germany on June 30, 1934, as told by a man who once was high in the circles of the National Socialist party—the party of Hitler.

THE BLOODY Saturday of June 30, 1934, will go down in history as the most baleful chapter of Adolf Hitler's life. Developments leading up to the blood purge are entangled in a hopeless snarl of lies, intrigues, and contradictions; it is still impossible to unravel the full truth, for dead men are silent. To one familiar with the external facts and the psychology of the persons involved, however, the background is sufficiently clear to allow a competent interpretation, not exact as to detail, but probably correct.

● The precise historian who in some distant future seeks to analyze the purge is likely to have to deal entirely with opinions laid down for propaganda by Hitler's contemporary foes and by the admiring beneficiaries of his rights. The archives of the Gestapo or other agencies will be careful not to offer unfavorable documentary evidence. The chief assassins undoubtedly have not confided compromising and incriminating data to paper. Hitler alone knows both sides of the story. When he, Hermann Goering, Paul Joseph Goebbels, Franz von Papen, and Werner von Blomberg write their memoirs their explanations of the massacre will all have to be taken with more than a grain of salt. History has not always succeeded in probing obscurity to the bottom, and perhaps never will sound this pit.

● The interpretation of the blood purge offered here is based on intimate knowledge of the natures of Hitler and his tools.

● The threats voiced on the occasion of Hitler's speech* at Bad Reichenhall on July 2, 1933, had not banished the specter of the "second revolution" that had hovered over the nation since March of that year. The general discon-

Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan

The Revolt of Ann Sothern

By ED SULLIVAN

Hollywood.

AS A RESULT of her fine job in "Trade Winds," which she followed up with "Maisie," youthful and attractive Ann Sothern is the talk of the town. She should be the talk of the town, because she gambled $50,000 and a year of her movie career on the proposition that Hollywood was wrong and she was right. She came close to starving, but she won, and that, as the rabbit said, is a tale of importance.

Ann Sothern—she stuck it out and won.

Miss Sothern is a rarity in this town because she refuses to be a yes-ma'am. She's a rarity because she went on a year's sit-down strike. One fine afternoon the young woman walked into the executive offices of RKO, where she was under contract at $50,000 a year, and informed them that she wanted to be a comedienne. Failing in that, she told them, she'd retire from pictures.

At first they thought that the California sunshine had addled her pretty head. She assured them that she was sound of limb, wind, and intellect. "At present I have a good job here," she explained, "but it won't last long, because the parts I'm playing are daffy, as well as dopey, and they will wash me up in pictures quickly." The executives tried to josh her out of it, but she told them that they had been served with an ultimatum—"give me different parts or else."

Roger Pryor

In such an exaggerated case of player independence studios have learned that it is sound economic reasoning to suggest that the performer take a long layoff and cool off. "That is what I had in mind," said the amazing Miss Sothern. "I'm quitting now."

Now, other players had carried their fight for different parts to this extent. Then, after they'd missed a few pay days, they returned to the studio sensibly and went back to work again. The security of a weekly check is the most compelling argument in the world. And then there is the added consideration that a performer knows that he or she must keep in action to stay before the public.

Weeks passed, and the resolute Sothern girl stuck it out. The money she had saved started petering out, and to give herself a greater degree of security Ann gave up the place in Beverly Hills and took a cheaper apartment in Hollywood. A month passed, three months, six months. The bank roll was getting smaller all the time, and in addition to her natural desperation there was the almost nightly irritation of the parties she attended to keep up "front."

"At every party people were discussing rôles they had in pictures," she recollected. "It seemed sometimes that their conversation just was pointed at me. Of course, that was silly on my part, but when you're out of work for a long time you start getting sensitive." She was denied even the consolation of explaining to people that she had embarked on a sit-down strike, because out here, when you tell people that you are out of work because of a deliberate desire on your part, they move away hurriedly. "Martyrs lead a very lonely life," observed Miss Sothern.

The race with time continued. It was easy enough for her to observe the struggle, because the bank book served as an indicator. Six months dragged into seven, then into eight.

"It got so that when I'd go to the bank to withdraw another sum of money for expenses, even the teller seemed to be pitying me," said Ann. "It was awful."

Friends now started urging her to give up her foolhardy cause, pointing out as delicately as possible that the public soon would forget her completely if she didn't get back on the screen to prod their memories.

Then, with the year almost exhausted, Ann Sothern was offered a rôle in Walter Wanger's "Trade Winds." She had rejected other rôles because they didn't give her a chance at comedy. She grabbed this one hastily, because the part was made to order for her. She was an instant hit. With equal care she selected her next rôle, in "Maisie," opposite Robert Young. She ran away with the press notices.

The Sothern eyeful who conducted this one-girl revolt and carried it through to a successful conclusion was born in North Dakota (the town is Valley City) and lived most of her life in Minneapolis. Her real name, and the name under which I knew her back on Broadway, is Harriett Lake. A lot of girls out here claim to have been Ziegfeld girls; she actually was a Ziegfeld girl, having worked in several of his shows.

One of four sisters, she took readily to the stage, because her mother was Concert Singer Annette Yde, and from the time she was old enough to toddle around the daughter's environment was musical. Her career was charted when the mother went to Hollywood to teach voice to actors and actresses who suddenly had been plunged into talking pictures. Harriett, in the course of a visit, was signed to an M-G-M contract.

It was then that she met famous Florenz Ziegfeld at a Hollywood party. Ziegfeld signed her to play the supporting lead to the late Marilyn Miller in "Smiles." It was after a succession of Broadway musicals that she was signed again to a Hollywood contract, because the coast was looking for singers. Up to now Miss Sothern has yet to sing a song in a flicker.

She is married to Roger Pryor, himself a former stage and film player who became a band leader when he became convinced the movies were typing him out of existence. Pryor's father was the bandsman, Arthur Pryor.

Newfoundland's New Airport

A Big Help to Ocean Flying

By WAYNE THOMIS

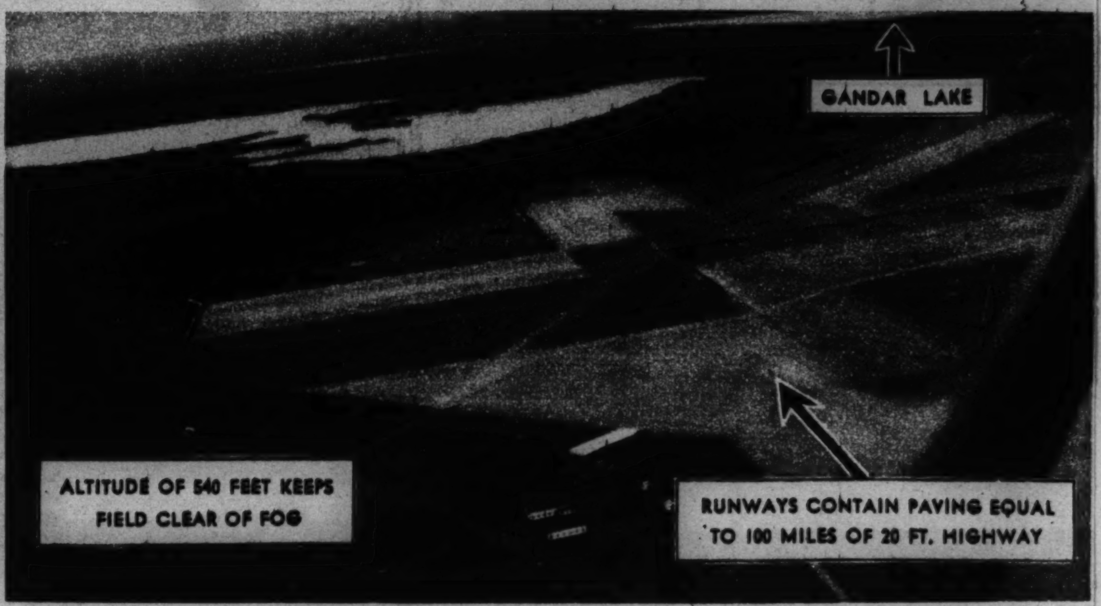
ONE OF THE least known airports in the world—the Newfoundland flying field, situated in the midst of 500 square miles of virgin timberland on the bleak little triangle of rocks and scrub brush in the mouth of the bay of the St. Lawrence river—is destined soon to become one of the world's most important aviation terminals.

The field that has just been completed after nearly three years of heroic work by a crew of more than 1,000 men, is to be the jump-off point for most of the east-bound trans-Atlantic airliners and the initial port of arrival for most of the ocean air trafic that is west bound.

Naturally the airport will be used only by machines capable of take-offs from and alightings upon land. But less than two miles from the hangars, hotel, and passenger terminal on the airport lies Gandar Lake, some thirty miles long, two miles wide in the narrowest point and more than 1,000 feet deep. Gandar Lake will become, with the completion of docking and refueling facilities there, the port for the big flying boats used in the Atlantic passenger and mail service.

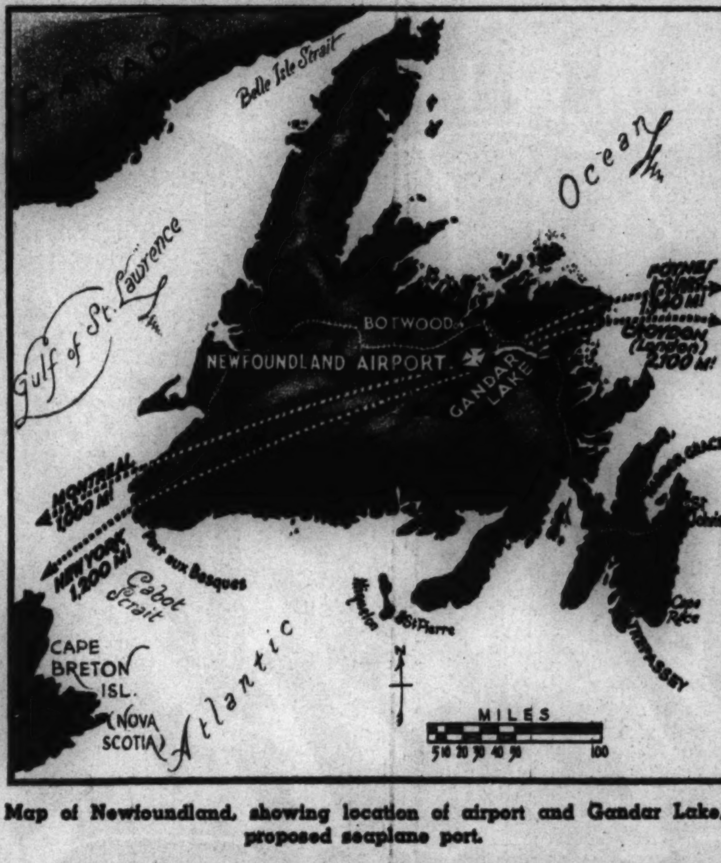
• • •

Within a short time, however, both European and American companies will begin making the ocean crossing with huge substratosphere land planes. Pan-American Airways expects to make experimental mail flights this summer in a Boeing 307 stratoliner if delivery of the three planes now on order is completed in time. And Imperial Airways has on order three huge Fairey land planes that will cruise at high speeds at 20,000-foot altitudes.



GANDAR LAKE
ALTITUDE OF 540 FEET KEEPS FIELD CLEAR OF FOG
RUNWAYS CONTAIN PAVING EQUAL TO 100 MILES OF 20 FT. HIGHWAY

Newfoundland's new airport as seen from the air.



Map of Newfoundland, showing location of airport and Gandar Lake, proposed seaplane port.

The importance of the Newfoundland airport is that it lies at the extreme eastern point of the North American continent. From Newfoundland airport it is 1,940 miles to Foynes, Ireland, or roughly 2,100 miles to Croydon, the big international airport of entry outside London England. Thus trans-oceani airplanes bound east will lan there to fill their fuel tanks fo the long ocean crossing. An westbound planes will refue there before continuing to Montreal or New York.

Indeed the natural location o Newfoundland field may caus the southern route—New Yor to Horta, Azores; Lisbon, Portugal and thence to either Pari or London—to be neglected This route is nearly 1,000 mile longer than the northern airway, but it is preferred at thi time because none of its harbor ever is locked by ice. Ice ca prevent the flying of big clippe ships such as Pan-American Airways flying boats from usin the shorter northern passage But when the land planes com into use winter will have n terrors, and the land planes ca make the northern crossing th year round.

• • •

The site, specifications for th field and the funds for the creation of this airport out of th raw wilderness were provide by the British air ministry More than one and a quarte millions of cubic yards of eart were removed in clearing an flattening the field. A smal hill was cut away and a lake i the airport area was filled.

Then paving equal in area t 100 miles of road twenty fee wide was put down. The fiel was surfaced with two and three quarters million gallons of asphalt, and graded to a perfection of smoothness and leve pitch. Four vast runways wer laid out, three of them 4,500 fee long and 600 feet wide and th other 4,800 feet long and 1,20 feet wide.

The airport site is 25 mile southeast of Botwood, the sea coast town that is being used a the port for the early clippe plane flights. From the coast th country rises to a broad rollin plateau 540 feet above sea leve This places the airport, and incidentally Gandar Lake, abov the thick coastal fogs.

As an assurance for all-weather operations the field will b equipped with the latest type of radio and blind landing facilities in the way of flush typ lights, a million candle-powe rotating beacon, and lights outlining the field boundaries an obstructions.

The First Spot News Color Picture

ON PAGE ONE of today's Picture Section is a color photograph of the $4,000,000 fire which on May 11 destroyed five Chicago grain elevators and killed nine men. When The Tribune reproduced this picture in its morning editions of May 12 it became the first newspaper to illustrate a spot news story in color.

Less than twelve hours elapsed from the time the picture was taken until it went to press, although the complicated processing of color photographs for commercial publication is usually expected to consume anywhere from ten days to two months.

Behind The Tribune's ability to beat a daily deadline with an exclusive color photo lies three years of pioneer work with a color camera adapted to newspaper needs. This is the Bermphol single-exposure,. natural-color camera. The Bermphol contains three plates and three color filters with mirrors to record the red, yellow, and blue primaries of all colors simultaneously.

But the process of color photography in 1936 was still considered too painstaking and delicate for outdoor photography—unless one wanted to use a color motion picture camera and wait for days while the film was sent away to be processed. The use of the Tribune camera at first was confined to the color studio, where conditions could be controled and models made up. Production was limited to illustrations for the Sunday sections and advertisments.

Then in the spring of 1937 the color cameramen went outdoors for the first time—to try for photographs of wild flowers in their natural state. They got them, remarkably real reproductions, but the effort was great to make plant life "hold the pose." Muslin screens had to be used to prevent the wind from blowing the flowers, and wires fastened to weaving branches. Time exposures were needed, and the shutter was closed every time a leaf began to move, and then reopened.

Gradually the color staff was able to speed up its shutters and plate sensitivity by using faster emulsions on the film. This made outdoor conditions less hazardous to good work.

But the long processing of the picture—from development to engraving—still remained as an obstacle to achieving daily press tempo. The photographer had to do six things to his three plates: (1) Develop a negative for the red, the yellow, and the blue. (2) Make black-and-white positives of each. (3) Apply color pigment tissues to the corresponding three prints. (4) Transfer these single-color images to celluloid. (5) Transfer the three images to a single sheet of paper, one exactly on top of the other. (6) Make a finished print by another transfer.

This finished print was then sent to the color engravers, who again had to separate the three colors, one to a plate. This is done with color filters and color-sensitive emulsions in a camera which provides the correct dimensions for printing and the half-tone screen "dots" to pick up the printer's ink. Then three copper engravings—one to reproduce each color—are made.

How could all these time-consuming operations be speeded up? The answer was to eliminate the last four steps in the color studio and the first one in the engraving room. The photographer now sent three glass positives, each marked for color, to the engraver, who made half-tone negatives. The latter now had no color separations to make.

This is what happened in reproducing the fire picture. It was taken at 1 p. m. on May 11, and by 1 o'clock the next morning the first copies were on the street.

Dear Miss Tinée: Mickey Rooney is sure swell! He is truly the greatest actor in America in the younger class. Don't just send orchids; send him the whole flower shop! That's what I think of him.

MICKEY ROONEY
Called "greatest actor in younger class."

I have seen him in "Boys Town," "Stablemates," the Hardy series, "Huckleberry Finn," "Slave Ship," and several others, and I think he is superb in them all. I sure would like to meet him.

Could you please squeeze in a picture, a short biography, and his address?

Much success to you and your column.

Yours very truly, G. BANDT.

Editor's note: For such an enthusiast I guess we can do a bit of squeezing. Mickey's real name is Joe Yule Jr. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. Educated Dayton Heights and Vine Street grammar schools and Pacific Military academy in Hollywood. Career started when he appeared as a baby in a vaudeville act with his parents. Address him care of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, Culver City, Cal. Thanks for the kindly wish.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just seen "Stand Up and Fight" at our neighborhood theater, and by the time I left the theater I was ready to stand up and fight for my two bits. I'll take the third chapter of "Flash Gordon" to it any day. I'd think M-G-M would be thoroughly ashamed to show it! It is certainly no plug for their studio. But I suppose they can't afford to show good pictures all the time. I would like to know where I could send for a photo of Priscilla Lane. Could you please print a little bit concerning her?

Best wishes, and thanks a lot for your grand column. Yours truly,

The Inside Story of Hitler's Blood Purge

How He Consolidated His Power in Germany

tent and unrest had kept pace with the increasing economic difficulties and Germany's growing isolation. By the spring of 1934 the negative, indeterminate aspect of the Nazi dictatorship was all too apparent. Now criticism was open and unrestrained, coming chiefly from the conservative wing led by the economic reactionaries, and from the radical wing led by the Nazi activists — those so-called "national bolshevists" who were weary of Hitler's middle course.

Hitler was following his characteristic policy of lurching along with a foot on each side. But it was obvious that if he did not soon crack down on the malcontents on both sides he would have to cope with either a second revolution or a reactionary putsch.

Hitler's eventual course was largely determined by the imminence of Hindenburg's death. The problem of succession was now acute. The man who wanted the presidency and the chancellorship knew that the reaktion had no intention of entrusting him with the supreme control of the reich, including the high command of the army. Once more a forgiving fate offered Hitler a chance to redeem himself, to attain his goal with the intellectual honesty of the strong. And again he preferred fraud -- fraud which this time ended in murder. Deliberately he created a situation which enabled him to buy the highest executive power in the realm, but at the ghastly price of bloodletting.

The Fuehrer proceeded with his double game. In Ernst Roehm and Goebbels he had admirable instruments for goading the radicals on and for holding the masses in line; Goering's job was to manipulate the reactionaries in his rôle of their house servant. The reaktion was not a unit, comprising as it did numerous groups and subgroups, divided by political and economic interests, by personal ambitions and divergent viewpoints, in their attitude toward National Socialism. There were two main groups: the first, the Hindenburg faction, which included Papen, Baron von Neurath, and Blomberg and was based on the landed aristocracy and the Reichswehr, represented the political side of the reaktion; the second, the Goering-Thyssen-Schacht group, guarding the interests of heavy industry and the banks, with the police and the Stahlhelm as instruments of power, stood for the capitalistic side.

The Hitler faction in the reich embraced the middle classes, the farmers, and the non-Marxian workers. The party, the S. A., and the S. S. were its instruments of power and were in the main revolutionary in spirit. If Hitler should choose to down the reaktion by force he could count on Roehm, Goebbels, R. Walther Darré, Dr. William Frick, Rudolf Hess, Heinrich Himmler, Dr. Robert Ley, Alfred Rosenberg, and Baldur von Schirach, his most prominent men with direct political power.

If, on the other hand, the Fuehrer chose to buy off the reaktion, there was only one man he need fear—Roehm, his chief of staff. Now that Gregor Strasser had been eliminated, Roehm was the sole independent revolutionary activist with a definite aim and definite power.

Hitler apparently was preparing himself for either eventuality. It is significant that at about this time he deprived Goering of his most powerful weapon—the secret police. On April 20 Himmler, the leader of the S. S., was made chief of the Gestapo. The man was Hitler's creature body and soul. Only 33 years old, he now possessed formidable power second only to Roehm's.

The Fuehrer continued his strategy of luring Roehm out on the end of a limb. On April 18, quite unnecessarily and of course to no avail, the chief of staff expounded the spirit of the S. A. and of the German revolution in a bombastic address before the wrong audience and at the wrong place. He spoke before the diplomatic corps and the foreign press at the propaganda ministry, in Goebbels' presence and undoubtedly at the little devil's suggestion. In parading before the whole world the revolutionary significance of the S. A. poor Roehm, straightforward and unimaginative, was doing exactly what Hitler wanted—he was thrusting his head farther into the noose.

His master was now playing his unscrupulous game in masterly fashion; again his personal interests were at stake, and again he was without peer in political machination. Using Goebbels to frighten the reaktion with the threat of the "second revolution," he went on beguiling his old warrior Roehm to come out into the open. The revolutionary S. A., long the bête noir of the reaktion, would be splendid barter in exchange for the presidency and the army of the reich.

Let us remember the dates. Roehm made his speech on April 18. Himmler was appointed on April 20. In early May, Goebbels opened his dykes with a new flood of propaganda against "reactionaries and killjoys, alarmists and paltry critics." The little agent provocateur was succeeding both in scaring the reaktion and in throwing dust into Roehm's eyes. The S. A. chief's blindness to his danger can be explained only by the supposition that he must again have fallen under the spell of Hitler's "sincerity." Hitler definitly can exert fascination, and a man of Roehm's psychic weakness perhaps could not escape from his magnetic orbit.

Convinced of his leader's good faith, he apparently advised reconciliation with Gregor Strasser. Through Rudolf Hess, Hitler opened secret negotiations with Gregor the apostate looking to his reëntry into the cabinet as minister of economics.

• • •

It is unlikely that Hitler thought seriously for a single moment of taking Strasser back. He was negotiating with him for three reasons: to dupe Roehm, to make the reaktion more tractable when he let it be known that something was afoot between him and Strasser, and to keep him as an ultima ratio [last agreement]. Obviously a potential Roehm-Strasser front with Hitler's blessing was a nightmare to the reaktion.

Gen. Kurt von Schleicher's reappearance on the scene at this time did not simplify matters. His reconciliation with the Hindenburg circle suggested an opposing potential combination, for the general was ambitious and may have been seeking revenge. He was invited to a meeting in Bad Nauheim on May 16 at which the commanding generals of the Reichswehr discussed the problem that would be created by Hindenburg's death. Apparently even then the generals were agreed with Blomberg on Hitler, who reputedly had already made his pact with the Reichswehr minister on board the battleship Deutschland after maneuvers on April 11, 1934.

It is alleged that on this occasion the generals also debated the plan of the Hindenburg circle for securing from the dying president a political testament which would name the ex-crown prince as his successor; he was to be a regent, like Admiral Horthy in Hungary. The regent would be entrusted with the direct command of the Reichswehr and would immediately proclaim a state of siege, which would automatically transfer the entire executive power from the Hitlerian civilian authorities to the reactionary military authorities. Though Hitler would remain as head of a new cabinet, government on the side by the party and by the S. A. would be abolished. Hitler could not have relished the plan.

The reaktion was now united, however, in working for the liquidation of the S. A., which they feared as the nucleus of a future "people's army." That danger had to be averted at all costs, for it would deprive them of their chief instrument of power, the Reichswehr.

Though Goering was not popular with the foreign office, which loathed his incursions into foreign fields; or with the Reichswehr, which wanted his air force incorporated into the Rechswehr ministry; nevertheless Hermann the bully was now invaluable to the reaktion because of his known hatred of both Strasser and Roehm. He had been Roehm's deadly enemy ever since the beer hall putsch in 1923, when Roehm had ascribed to Goering, then leader of the S. A., the main guilt for the catastrophe and had publicly branded him a coward who had fled.

While the front of the reaktion, with Papen, Neurath, Blomberg, Goering, Fritz Thyssen, and Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, fought the battle of its life with the front of the revolution headed by Roehm, with Gregor Strasser now looming in the background, Hitler made irreconcilable promises to both sides, still standing between them, ready to strike with Himmler and the S. S., but letting things drift.

• • •

Roehm was engaged in a duel with Franz Seldte to bring about the liquidation of the Stahlhelm, the private army of the reaktion. At first Hitler sided with his chief of staff, but withheld his approval when Roehm ordered its dissolution. The dispute ended in a compromise, with the Stahlhelm becoming an S. A. reserve. Though Roehm seemed to have won the advantage, it was a Pyrrhic victory, for it had brought him into direct conflict with the Reichswehr, which was now convinced that his real ambition was to get command of the army.

Roehm's next step in the face of warning symptoms which should have put him on his guard is almost incomprehensible. If he had misgivings his Fuehrer probably was still able to dispel them; no doubt he appealed to Roehm's sense of duty, harping on the old theme of "higher interests," pointing to the impending death of the "Old Bull" [Hindenburg], which would settle everything. But now, for heaven's sake, let him keep quiet, for important decisions had to be made. There was the coming visit to Mussolini, and Schacht's efforts to obtain foreign loans.

At any rate, on June 8 the Voelkischer Beobachter* printed an official report from Roehm's press bureau saying that the reichsminister and chief of staff was suffering from "a painful nervous disorder" and was taking a vacation of several weeks on the advice of his physicians; to forestall all misinterpretation, he declared that after his recovery he would continue to administer his office.

Evidently Roehm felt sure of his standing. Two days later the V. B. published his decree to the S. A. in preparation for its regular annual summer furlough, to begin July 1. Scoffing now at rumors of the impending dissolution or reduction of the S. A., he thus challenged his opponents: ". . . If the enemies of the S. A. hope that after its leave the S. A. will not be recalled, or will be recalled only in part, they may enjoy this brief hope. They will receive their answer at such time and in such form as appears necessary. The S. A. is and remains Germany's destiny."

• • •

Two things, however, must have convinced Roehm that Hitler was planning to betray him. The first was Blomberg's leading article on the front page of the V. B. on June 28: the Reichswehr minister declared that the army's rôle in the third reich was clear and unequivocal, that it acknowledged the new state and stood behind the new leadership. The second was the infamous exclusion of Roehm, an officer of the old army, the man on whose shoulders Hitler had risen to power, from the ranks of the "National Union of German Officers." It was a deadly insult, an irreparable blow to a reichsminister and Hitler's chief of staff, and it could hardly have been dealt him without the consent of Hitler and the Reichswehr.

Whatever he may have thought, he must have known then that Hitler had outwitted him, "the soldier who knew no compromise." But he could scarcely have had an inkling of the end Hitler had in store for him when in one of his last statements Roehm said, "The storm troops are ready to die for the ideal of the swastika."

At any rate a notice went out summoning all the S. A. leaders throughout the reich to appear in Wiessee—Roehm's retreat—on June 30 for a conference.

Events moved swiftly toward the ignoble last act of the drama. On June 28 Hitler flew with Goering to Essen to attend the wedding of Staatsrat Terboven. Goering returned to Berlin on the 29th, and Goebbels joined the Fuehrer, who had embarked on a round of visits to labor camps in the Rhineland "in order not to warn the traitors, so that the plan to carry out a thorough purge could be laid down in all details." This the little doctor confided to his public in a radio recital on July 1.

In his apologia before the reichstag the Fuehrer later declared:

"At 1 o'clock at night [the night of June 29-30] I received two alarming dispatches of the most urgent nature from Berlin and Munich. . . . At 2 in the morning I flew to Munich. Minister President Goering meanwhile had already received the order . . . immediately to take analogous measures in Berlin and Prussia in the action of purging."

Which is tantamount to saying that when Hitler was assured that all preparations had been made to nip in the bud a nonexistent attack on the régime he gave his accomplice Goering the cue to begin the massacre in Berlin; he would attend to the bloody work in Munich himself.

Hitler's apologia also declared that he had decided "to go personally to a prearranged meeting of S. A. leaders in Wiessee," an admission that Roehm's last act—if Roehm's it was—had not been secretive and therefore not conspiratory. Hitler as supreme leader of the S. A. had the right to preside at any S. A. meeting, anywhere and at any time. Dr. Otto Strasser reports that he personally saw a telegram which the adjutant of a murdered S. A. gruppenfuehrer showed him. It ran: "All obergruppen and gruppenfuehrer are ordered to appear in the staff quarters of the chief of staff in Wiessee at 10 a. m. on June 30. Adolf Hitler."

• • •

Reaching Munich at 4 in the morning of June 30, Hitler was informed that the S. A. leaders residing there had already been either killed or arrested. He then set out for Wiessee, heavily guarded by S. S. men riding in armored cars before and behind his cavalcade. With him were Dr. Goebbels, Major Buch, Wilhelm Brueckner—Roehm's former friend and confidant, now Hitler's adjutant—Julius Schaub, Sepp Dietrich, Christian Weber, and Emil Maurice. They arrived at the Gasthaus Heinzlbauer about 6 o'clock.

While his companions "stormed" the rooms of Edmund Heines and other S. A. leaders, Hitler pounded with the handle of his dog whip on the door of Roehm's room. "Open the door!" he yelled.

Roehm's sleepy voice answered, "Yes, but who is it?"

"It's I—Hitler! Let me in!"

"What! You already? I thought you weren't coming before noon," and Roehm opened the door. Hitler met him with a flood of abuse, and Roehm, coming to himself in anger, began to roar back at him. He was being handcuffed when the innkeeper, awakened by the up-

Who They Are

- The S. A., or Sturm Abteilung, are the politico-military group known as the storm troops. By 1934 they were said to number two and a half million. The Black Reichswehr originally was banded together to increase the military strength of Germany above the 100,000 set by the Versailles treaty. It was out of the Black Reichswehr that the S. A. grew.
- The S. S., or Schutz Staffel, are the bodyguard group organized by Hitler, commonly called the black bodyguard. This is a small group as compared with the storm troops.
- Stahlhelm (Steel Helmets)—An organization of German World war veterans. It helped put Hitler in power, but was dissolved by the Nazis late in 1935 for being too conservative.
- Reichswehr—The term applied to the German army of 100,000 men as permitted under the Versailles treaty.
- The Gestapo is the German secret police.

A NEW ADVENTURE EVERY WEEK IN THE GRAPHIC SECTION

1 In the study of Dr. Bernhard Markham, a criminal hand has taken the life of that celebrated surgeon. In a panic, the doctor's housekeeper, Miss Prouty, notifies police. Whom did she suspect? "The Red Circle!"

DETECTIVES INVESTIGATE

2 "He was experimenting with a new truth gas," Miss Prouty tells Detective Flannery. "He was going to turn it over to the army." Detective Cassidy seizes the phone: "This is a case for Peter Quill!"

3 In Dr. Markham's laboratory, Peter Quill and Gail Carson listen to the housekeeper's story of the surgeon's dream: ". . . He thought the army could use the truth gas fighting Red Circle spies."

4 "And to think," Cassidy muses aloud, "that the gas in one of them hollow glass marbles can make a criminal tell all he knows, and him conscious all of the time!" But his soliloquy is cut short by . . .

5 Crashing glass! A steel ring clangs upon the floor; to it a note is tied: "Don't start nothing you can't finish. We're watching you. The Red Circle."

6 Dispatched by Cassidy, Flannery dashes outside to pursue the perpetrator of this theatrical trick; but he returns baffled and mystified. His report:

WINDOW BROKEN BY METAL RING LABORATORY
FRAGMENTS OF GLASS ON SILL

SANDY COURT NO FOOTPRINTS
ALLEY
DR. MARKHAM'S BODY FOUND HERE

7 A high brick wall without window or door. Sandy soil between it and the house. But not a trace of footprint. The steel ring could hardly have been thrown into the laboratory by any one unless he had flown past the window!

8 Peter Quill studies the broken glass on the OUTER sill. Abruptly, he wheels and begins . . .

9 Shattering truth gas containers. "Nix! State's evidence!" protests the startled Cassidy. "You mustn't break those!" screams the housekeeper. "You mustn't! Because . . .

10 ". . . they make me give myself away. I was stealing them; I wanted to sell the formula to the Red Circle. But the doctor found out. He gave me truth gas and made me confess. He was going to call the police . . .

11 "Yes . . . Yes . . . I killed him!" As the hysterical wretch is led away, Peter Quill explains: "It was an old trick she used . . . throwing a stone outward through the window and simultaneously tossing the ring to the floor. . . .

12 "Prouty wrote the note with a pencil she used at the telephone pad; that was determined by my portable X-ray while the note occupied you. But now Prouty is finished as a tool of the Red Circle. The truth gas still is safe for the army!"

Macaroni Salad Is a Luncheon in Self

By MARY MEADE

IT'S WARM weather food, all of it. The chilled macaroni and fruit salad, ready for its dressing, the unusual ribbon cookies, the jellied strawberry tarts, and the Fourth of July special salad with pimiento stars and mint "firecrackers."

The macaroni salad bowl consists of cooked macaroni which has been marinated in French dressing for an hour, orange sections, strips of avocado, pitted sweet cherries, and sliced apple. Mayonnaise dressing is served separately. One could put into such a salad fresh berries, pineapple, grapes, sliced peaches, or pears. The macaroni gives enough substance to make the salad into a luncheon all by itself.

Ribbon cookies are made from a basic dough divided into three parts. Chocolate and nuts are added to one part, chopped candied cherries to the second, and poppy seed to the third portion. The three doughs are packed together into a small bread pan and chilled. The loaf is sliced when the cookies are ready to be baked, and each cookie will consist of three layers. These are "different" cookies, and you'll like them, I know.

RIBBON COOKIES
(8 dozen, thin)

2½ cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup butter
1⅓ cups sugar
1 egg, beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup chopped candied cherries
¼ cup chopped pecans
1 ounce sweet milk chocolate, melted
2 tablespoons poppy seeds

Sift flour and measure. Sift twice with baking powder and salt. Cream butter until soft and gradually add sugar. Beat until light. Add egg and vanilla and beat until smooth and fluffy. Add flour mixture a small amount at a time, mixing well. Divide dough into three equal portions. Add chopped cherries to one part, nuts and melted chocolate to another, and poppy seed to the third. Line a small, narrow bread pan with waxed paper and pack the chocolate nut dough into the bottom as evenly as possible. Over this pack the cherry dough. Have the poppy seed mixture on top. Cover with waxed paper and chill for several hours or overnight. When ready to bake turn out of the pan and slice very thin. Place on ungreased cookie sheets and bake at 400 degrees about ten minutes, or until lightly browned.

This dough may be stored for as long as a week in the refrigerator, and cookies may be baked a few at a time.

STRAWBERRY TARTS
(Six)

1 envelope (1 tablespoon) unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
¾ cup water
1 cup sliced strawberries
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup sugar
Whole strawberries
Six tart shells, baked

Soften gelatin in cold water. Simmer the sliced berries with the ¾ cup water and the sugar, mashing berries as they cook. Strain off juice. Add softened gelatin, lemon juice, and salt. Stir until dissolved. Cool sirup and when it starts to thicken pour over whole berries, which have been arranged in baked tart shells. Chill until firm. Garnish with whipped cream.

FOURTH OF JULY JELLIED SALAD
(Serves eight)

Cheese Layers

1 tablespoon unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup hot water
⅔ cup cream cheese
½ cup heavy cream, whipped

Tomato Juice Layer

1 can tomato juice
2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin

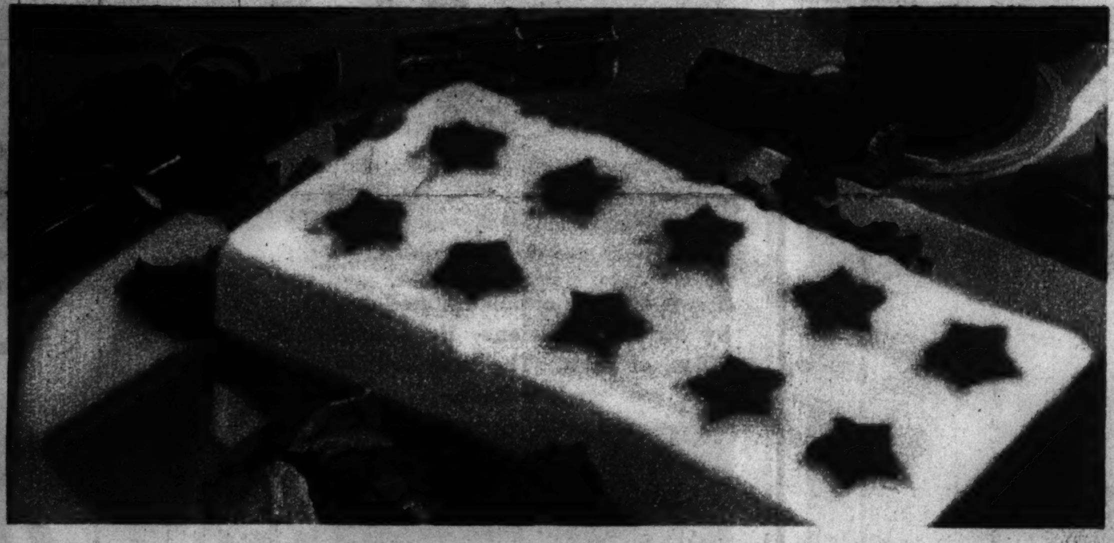
Soften gelatin for cheese layers in cold water; add sugar, salt, and hot water. Chill until it begins to thicken, then add cream cheese and whipped cream. Put half this mixture in a chilled pan and let it become firm in the refrigerator. Set aside remaining portion. Soften gelatin for tomato layer in a little of the cold tomato juice. Dissolve over hot water and add remaining juice. Pour over stiffened cheese layer and chill until firm. Add remaining cheese mixture to make a third layer and again chill. When salad is turned out to serve, garnish with stars cut from canned pimiento.

Iced coffee and hot rolls are served with this salad. The mint firecrackers are packages of mints with outside wrappers removed and pieces of red, white, and blue ribbon around them. Their opening strings serve as "fuses."

Cooked macaroni isn't often tucked into a fruit salad bowl, but you'd be surprised how good it can be, served this way.

Just what you've been looking for—a new and different cookie! These contain cherries, nuts, and poppy seeds.

Jellied strawberry sirup was poured over the whole fresh berries in these tart shells. The result—a scrumptious dessert!



A patriotic salad for Fourth of July. These firecrackers are mints.

YES . . . BUT WHY?

Lincoln-Zephyr V-12

THE STYLE LEADER

You have admired the Lincoln-Zephyr as style leader. This is the car that influenced an industry. But it is very much more!

The Lincoln-Zephyr is a "twelve"—only one in its field. The extra luxury of extra cylinders now costs no more. Here is a difference!

This "twelve" is thrifty to operate—on all roads, in all weathers. Here, too, is a difference!

Beneath the car's modern beauty is the only automotive structure of its kind. Steel-panels, in all closed types, are welded to a rigid framework of steel trusses—great in strength (for safety), light in weight (for efficiency). This is a difference!

But you cannot truly appreciate how different this "twelve" is until you take it on the road! Lincoln Motor Company, Division of Ford Motor Company.

River Reversed for Sake of the City's Health

By GUY MURCHIE JR.

DURING the years immediately preceding the Civil war Chicagoans felt satisfied as to the city's sanitary condition. But the population steadily increased, resulting in more sewage being discharged into the lake and in more and more of the lake's water being pumped out of it to provide for the city. It was only a question of time before the sewage would seriously contaminate the drinking water intakes, especially after sudden rainstorms, which had the effect of flushing out the usually slack river. At last, in 1862, Chief Engineer E. S. Chesbrough brought this matter to the attention of the board of public works, which had absorbed the duties of the earlier board of sewerage commissioners.

"There have been several occasions during the last three years," he said, "when many persons thought they could perceive the effect of the river in the taste of the water, but not until the night of Feb. 10, and during several days since, did that effect become so striking as to convince all who have examined into it of its real nature. . . . The taste thus given to the water supplied to the city is much more offensive than that caused by fish, while it is utterly impossible by any means at the disposal of the board to prevent it at present."

Five years after this report Chesbrough had the satisfaction of completing the building of a tunnel connecting the city water pipes with an intake crib two miles out in the lake. This tunnel was the wonder of its day, and it helped keep Chicago's drinking water clean for a while. But with the passing of twenty more years, and with Chicago's population at the million mark, even the bigger and better tunnels that had been dug in the meantime were not enough to keep Chicago's water pure. Work had been done toward draining Chicago to the southwest also, with the deepening of the Illinois and Michigan canal and with the building of a powerful pumping station to pump water from the Chicago river into the canal. This pumpage actually reversed the flow of the river in dry seasons, carrying the sewage-laden water away from the lake, but whenever a rainstorm came the run-off overpowered the pump's effect and swept the accumulated sludge out into the lake.

When a particularly big flood in 1885 soiled the lake so seriously that people complained by the thousands, the city council appointed a commission of engineers to study the whole situation and recommend some permanent solution. The commission proposed a scheme we now know as the dilution system, and which called for the digging of a new and much bigger and deeper canal to drain the city area toward the southwest, permanently reversing the river's flow and diluting the city sewage with lake water that would never return to the lake. This plan was preferred to a scheme for piping the sewage to sand dune areas, because it would serve a shipping purpose as well as a drainage purpose.

It was such a vast and expensive plan, however, that the city could not have carried it out, and so the state legislature created a special district with a government and boundaries of its own and the power "to levy and collect taxes, issue bonds, and build and operate sanitary works." Thus the sanitary district of Chicago came into existence in 1889, being "the first sanitary district in history to be governed by officials elected by popular vote and endowed with the resources and powers to carry on a system of sewage disposal."

• • •

The first and greatest task to be undertaken by the district, of course, was the digging of the Chicago sanitary and ship canal. This job attracted the attention of engineers all over the world, for it was to serve a shipping purpose as well as a drainage purpose. Water was first admitted to the canal Jan. 2, 1900, and two weeks later the canal was put into full operation. It was not until thirty-three years later, however, that large cargo vessels could for the first time pass directly from the Great Lakes to the Mississippi river by way of Chicago's man-made waterway. On. Feb. 27, 1933, the sixty-mile channel from Joliet to Utica was opened, making this through trafic by water possible.

The drainage canal's southwest end, or outlet, was made lower than the level of Lake Michigan, creating a steady current away from the lake and thus carrying out the sanitary district's prime purpose of preventing the city's sewage from polluting the water supply.

After this main channel between Lake Michigan and the Illinois river system was opened the sewage elimination in the middle section of Chicago which it served was of course immensely improved. But the vast area of South Chicago, with sewers emptying into the filthy Calumet river, was left as badly off as ever; and the north branch of the Chicago river, the receptacle for most of the north side's sewers, was still almost stagnant. Therefore two more important canals were dug (as shown on the map), one called the Calumet-Sag channel, which connects the Little Calumet river with the main canal, reversing the Calumet's flow in the same way that the Chicago river had been reversed; and the other called the north shore channel, connecting the lake with the north branch of the Chicago river in such a way as to draw water out of the lake to flush that section of the river and carry its sewage on down into the south branch to join with the rest of the city's sewage.

While all this was being put into operation, naturally the people living along the Des Plaines and Illinois rivers southwest of Chicago began to protest about the injustice of being on the receiving end of Chicago's great sewage disposal plan. Even people as far downstream as St. Louis complained that their water would be soiled by Chicago, and they tried to put a stop to the whole plan.

The sanitary district's answer to these protests was chiefly an explanation of what happens to sewage in a river. The disintegration of organic waste matter, pointed out the scientists, is accomplished by bacteria which consume it. That is plain to see under the microscope. But the bacteria need a lot of oxygen to do their work speedily. The more oxygen the better. In a flowing river any suspended matter is bound to come in contact with a lot of oxygen. This meeting with oxygen, in the form of minute air bubbles and oxygen in solution, is called aeration, and it will purify sewage within a few miles. The diluting effect of a river, of course, also helps purify the sewage.

• • •

An illustration of these processes is the experiment, conducted by two German scientists, in the River Isar, which receives the sewage of Munich. According to their analyses of the river water at the sewer's mouth, each cubic centimeter of it contained 198,000 bacteria. Seven and a half miles downstream, however, they found only 15,231 bacteria per cubic centimeter, and twenty miles below the sewer's mouth the number had been reduced to 3,602. Since bacteria live on organic matter, the reduction in numbers of bacteria downstream indicated a very rapid disintegration and purification of the organic matter or sewage.

Terminus of the Chicago sanitary and ship canal at Lockport, with power house and federal navigation lock, which connects with the Illinois waterway.

And so the sanitary district of Chicago went ahead with its work. Besides the canal construction already described it had to build some large sewer tunnels along the lake shore in order to intercept the sewers that until then had emptied directly into the lake. These intercepting sewers served to divert sewage from the lakeside sewers to the river-canal system so that Lake Michigan would not be polluted. Pumping stations were also necessary to keep up the proper rate of flow in the tunnels.

This great undertaking of the sanitary district was finally completed in 1922, since which time no sewage has been discharged into Lake Michigan in the entire thirty-three miles of frontage between the northern limit of Cook county and the Indiana state line. The whole thing—three canals, the intercepting sewers, and the pumping stations—cost roughly $125,000,000 to build and is known as the "dilution system." It made possible for the first time a year-around supply of absolutely safe drinking water, and it opened up the city's beaches to summer bathers, who formerly couldn't go swimming because of the filth in the water. It also undoubtedly had much to do with the rising of real estate values along the lake shore and the resultant reclamation of this part of the city from railroad tracks, sooty factories, and dumps.

This is the second of a series of three articles on Chicago's great system of sanitation. Next week—the sewage treatment plants.

Mostly About Dogs

By BOB BECKER

Watch Dog's Health in Summer

This picture of Viola von Lindenhof illustrates the well molded head which is typical of good Great Danes. (Tribune photos.)

WITH the arrival of summer dog owners cannot ignore several very important obligations to their pets. During the warm months the owner of a dog should:

Take down the coat of the animal (if it normally has a rather long or thick growth of hair).

Keep it free of ticks and fleas.

See that the animal has plenty of water to drink at all times.

Keep the dog from roaming the streets (dog bites and rabies scares always increase in summer, due to the fact that more dogs are roaming the streets).

Keep the pet on the thin instead of the fat side.

Watch out for signs of "summer" skin trouble.

Thousands of dogs kept as pets would enjoy summer much more and be healthier if their owners would give them a hair trim. Wire-haired terriers, Airedales, Scotties, Sealyhams, and other breeds with thick, wiry coats need a trim from time to time. This care is especially urgent during the hot months. Cockers, springer spaniels, setters, and other breeds with rather thick coats also may be trimmed up for comfort and to improve their appearance. By trimming we do not mean taking a pair of clippers and cutting all hair off their bodies.

Caesar, a 100-pound Great Pyrenees owned by Jack Kimberly, Neenah, Wis., has been trained to haul a small cart. Here he pulls Joan Mary Henrichsen, 7, and Ethel May Oman, 9.

We feel sorry for a dog that has this trick played on him! He is exposed to fly bites all summer, and we doubt if he's much cooler, if any. Trimming the coat calls for the use of a stripping knife and a pair of shears. A professional handler is an expert in the use of both of these kennel accessories. If your dog is the shaggy class and needs help these warm days, see a professional handler about a hair trim. Attention given to the coat of a pet pays dividends in comfort and health and also improves its appearance.

Ticks and fleas can't be ignored. We know by the way a dog scatches that he'd like to ignore 'em but can't! Insect-killing powders, medicinal soaps, and the use of an infrared lamp may be employed in a war against the insect pests that bother dogs.

Every dog needs plenty of drinking water during the summer months. Keep a fresh supply always available for the animal. If that dog likes to go swimming, let him go. It helps keep him cool.

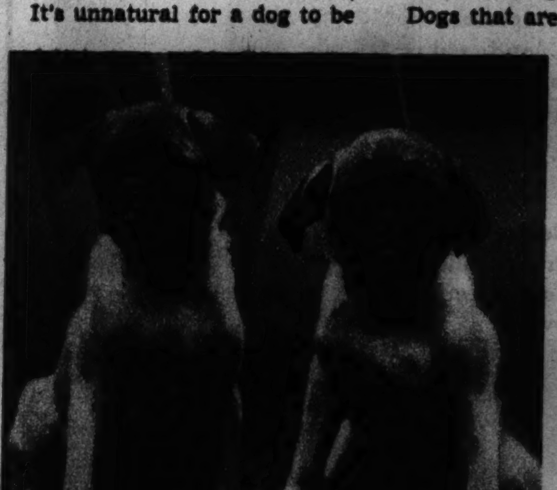
Summer always bring an increase in the number of dogs on the streets. Unfortunately many persons believe that their only responsibility to the family pet is to feed it at night and give it a place to sleep. Having done this, the village, town, or city and the neighbors may look after the dog while it roams the streets from morning until night! This practice means more dog bites reported during the summer and in many cities rabies scares. There is nothing new about this situation. Health authorities, veterinarians, and dog fanciers know the story by heart. As long as we have dogs running the streets we may expect to hear about rabies scares. So the wise dog owner never lets his pet become a vagabond, one that runs around uncontroled, thus having contacts with other animals which may be diseased.

It's unnatural for a dog to be fat. If a pet is going to be much overweight he can stand it better in winter than during the hot summer months. Your veterinarian will tell you that as a rule the lean house pet is much healthier, much more comfortable, and less susceptible to summer skin trouble than the fat one. So the wise dog owner sees that his pet gets no snack between meals, takes more exercise, and is fed a sound diet during the summer months. If this is done the chances are that the dog will enjoy better health, although there is evidence to support the theory that some dogs are unusually allergic to certain things, and others seem to develop skin trouble when hot weather comes. Some breeds seem to have more skin eruptions in hot weather than others.

• • •

There is one problem involving the dog that the owner can't do much about. This is the thunderstorm business. Some pets are deathly afraid of thunder. We have owned a dog of this type, and how we worked to see if we could instill some confidence in the animal! But the task was hopeless. When a storm came up we resigned ourself to the fact that the poor pup was going to crawl under a bed or a table or go into a closet or some other place until the storm was over. No amount of talking to the dog or anything that we did helped at all.

Dogs that are afraid of thunder may be so terrified that they act unnaturally, just as does a human being under the stress of great fear or a shock. Such dogs will ignore commands and go around in a sort of daze. Our experience has been that once a dog becomes frightened of thunder it will stay that way. And nothing much can be done about it.



Pug dogs, which were popular some years ago, are making a comeback. These puppies are only three months old.

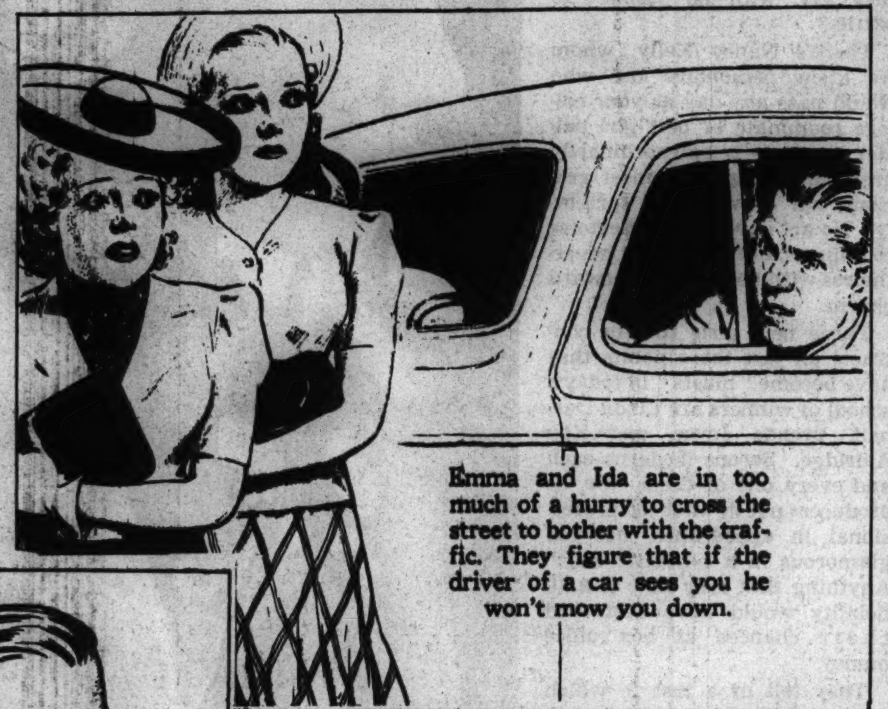
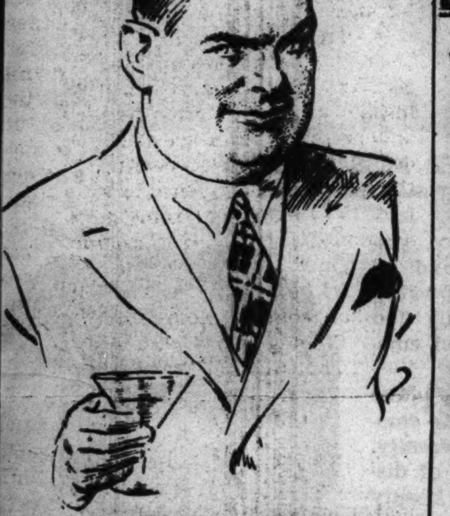
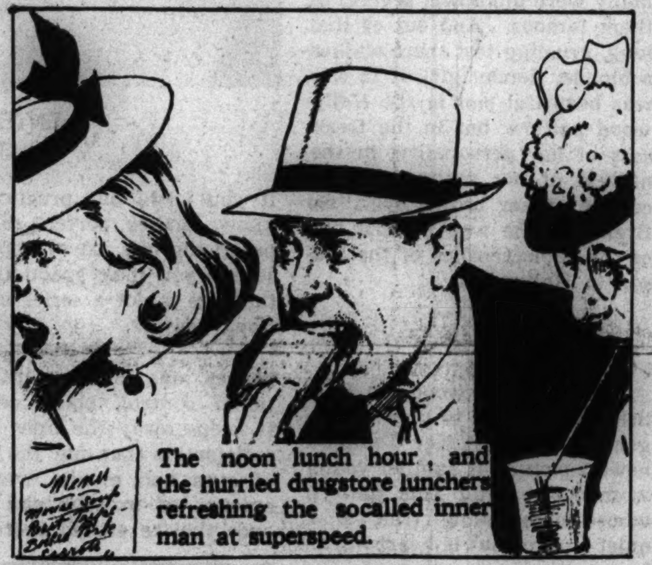
Little Edna, fed up on childhood's happy hour, which can be pretty much of a bore, is trying out big sister's make-up accessories. She's in a hurry to grow up.



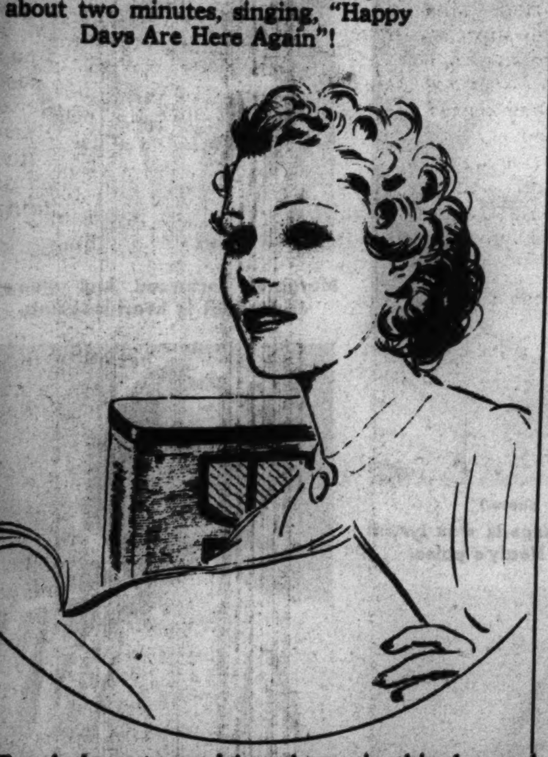
Emma and Ida are in too much of a hurry to cross the street to bother with the traffic. They figure that if the driver of a car sees you he won't mow you down.



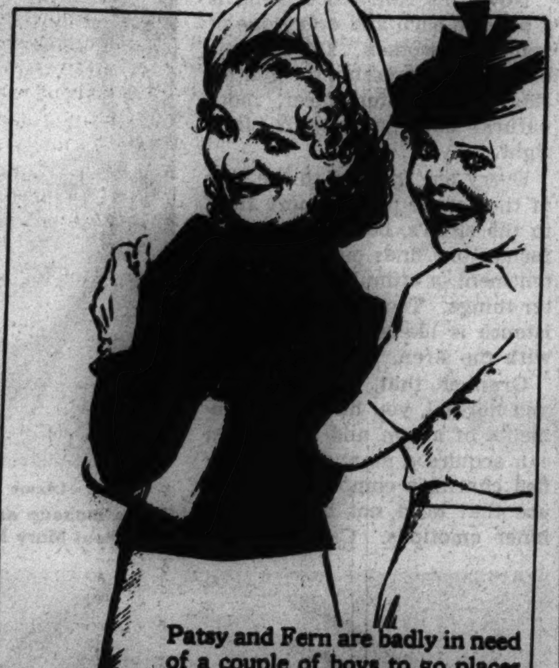
The quick drinker, who wants the effect in a hurry. Mixes a dynamite cocktail. People find themselves floating up to the top of Radio City in about two minutes, singing, "Happy Days Are Here Again"!



The noon lunch hour, and the hurried drugstore lunchers refreshing the socalled inner man at superspeed.



People have to read in a hurry in this day and age, skipping through best sellers, skimming the newspaper headlines, and forming their political opinions on what they hear in the radio news broadcasts. (This girl reader looks at all the pictures in the weekly news magazines, but seldom reads the captions.)



Patsy and Fern are badly in need of a couple of boys to go places with them on Saturday afternoon. Naturally, if they expect to get anywhere, they will have to work in a hurry. And will have to put over a double amount of charm and devastating sex appeal in about a quarter of the time a society girl uses up in the process. Luckily, the fleet's in.

Gems of # American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are to be presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Men and boys learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. The following is the third of the series.

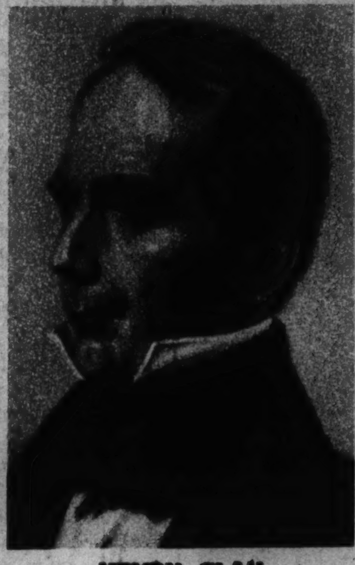
MARQUIS DE LAFAYETTE, famous French hero of the American war of independence, at the age of 67 revisited this country from July, 1824, to September, 1825. He was received with popular applause and officially voted $200,000 and thirty-six square miles of land. On the occasion of the hero's presentation in the house of representatives in December, 1824, Henry Clay, speaker of the house, delivered one of his most notable orations. Here it is in full:

"General: The house of representatives of the United States, impelled alike by its own feelings and by those of the whole American people, could not have assigned to me a more gratifying duty than that of presenting to you cordial congratulations upon the occasion of your recent arrival in the United States, in compliance with the wishes of congress, and to assure you of the very high satisfaction which your presence affords on this early theater of your glory and renown. Although but few of the members who compose this body shared with you in the war of our revolution, all have, from impartial history or from faithful tradition, a knowledge of the perils, the sufferings, and the sacrifices which you voluntarily encountered, and the signal services, in America and in Europe, which you performed for an infant, a distant, and an alien people; and all feel and own the very great extent of the obligations under which you have placed our country. But the relations in which you have ever stood to the United States, interesting and important as they have been, do not constitute the only motive of the respect and admiration which the house of representatives entertain for you. Your consistency of character, your uniform devotion to regulated liberty, in all the vicissitudes of a long and arduous life, also commands its admiration. During all the recent convulsions of Europe, amid, as after the dispersion of, every political storm, the people of the United States have beheld you, true to your old principles, firm and erect, cheering and animating with your well known voice the votaries of liberty, its faithful and fearless champion, ready to shed the last drop of that blood which here you so freely and nobly spilled in the same holy cause.



HENRY CLAY

"The vain wish has been sometimes indulged that Providence would allow the patriot, after death, to return to his country and to contemplate the intermediate changes which have taken place; to view the forests felled, the cities built, the mountains leveled, the canals cut, the highways constructed, the progress of the arts, the advancement of learning, and the increase of population. General, your present visit to the United States is a realization of the consoling object of that wish. You are in the midst of posterity. Everywhere you must have been struck with the great changes, physical and moral, which have occurred since you left us. Even this very city, bearing a venerated name alike endeared to you and to us, has since emerged from the forest which then covered its site. In one respect you behold us unaltered, and this is in the sentiment of continued devotion to liberty and of ardent affection and profound gratitude to your departed friend, the father of his country, and to you, and to your illustrious associates in the field and in the cabinet, for the multiplied blessings which surround us, and for the very privilege of addressing you which I now exercise. This sentiment, now fondly cherished by more than ten millions of people, will be transmitted with unabated vigor down the tide of time, through the countless millions who are destined to inhabit this continent, to the latest posterity."

---

Henry Clay is a good example of the proverbial great orator; his speeches were written in the complex, florid style of his day, and they lose much in cold print. But when Clay thundered them in congress they were genuinly great speaking. In order to appreciate this speech to the Marquis de Lafayette we need to visualise that scene in the house: the listening representatives, the old French general—a man out of America's historic past, and the dynamic Clay himself.

Clay uses one very noteworthy device to give power and point to the whole oration: the extended figure of the returning patriot, ending with the striking sentence, "You are in the midst of posterity." From this arresting picture Clay builds in a series of extremely speakable sentences to his climax.—Comment by Martin Maloney of Northwestern university school of speech.

Germany's Day of Terror

roar, appeared on the scene with a "Heil Hitler" on his trembling lips. The Fuehrer asked that the disturbance be excused.

The cavalcade took the road back to Munich with Roehm and the S. A. leaders as prisoners. Whenever other S. A. leaders were encountered driving their cars toward Wiessee, Hitler arrested them. Still others were gathered in as they arrived at the railroad station in Munich, coming from all parts of the reich.

The death caravan reached the Brown house, which had been occupied by the S. S. Rudolf Hess was waiting there with everything in readiness, and Hitler had only to pass sentence, which he did, looking rather seedy and shouting himself hoarse. The condemned men were transported to the old Stadelheim prison and there shot by S. S. squads under the command of Major Buch.

Roehm was locked in a cell with a revolver—a last act of grace on the part of his Fuehrer. The press of the world reported his suicide. But he declined to do Hitler this favor, and on July 1, according to a laconic statement published in the Zoelkischer Beobachter on the following day, he was killed. Sepp Dietrich, leader of S. S. obergruppe ost and commander of Hitler's Leibstandarte, shot Roehm in his cell, to be rewarded a few days later for his heroic deed by promotion to the post of obergruppenfuehrer.

Ernst Roehm had met his end in the very prison where he had been incarcerated eleven years earlier for his valiant efforts in support of Hitler in the beer hall putsch.

It is not my wish to make an entire martyr of Roehm. He was admittedly shaping plans which aimed to influence the trend of the Nazi revolution. But compared to Goering and Goebbels he was an honest revolutionary who always ranked the idea above the leader, and Germany highest of all. He was incapable of treason.

Men who were not S. A. leaders and not Nazis also met sudden death within Hitler's special sphere of operations. Gustav von Kahr, the former minister president of Bavaria, was now 73; eleven years earlier he had been chiefly responsible for the frustration of Hitler's beer hall putsch. He was dragged from bed in his nightshirt. Days later his mutilated body was found in a swamp near Dachau, not far from Munich.

Meanwhile the chief head hunter of the reich was busy in Berlin. Most of Goering's quarry were killed in the former Kadettenanstalt Lichterfelde, then the barracks of the Hitler S. S. Leibstandarte. One of his chief concerns was to account for the S. A. leader Karl Ernst, to whom had been delegated the actual laying of the reichstag fire, and his S. A. accomplices. Obviously these men knew too much. Of those in the secret only four are now alive—Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, and Count von Helldorf. Possibly there is a fifth, for it is reported that one of Ernst's men escaped.

The story goes that Karl Ernst, believing to the last that Hitler had also been betrayed, fell with "Heil Hitler" on his lips. Hitler and Goering had been guests at his wedding.

At 1:30 o'clock on the afternoon of June 30 five Gestapo officials called at Gregor Strasser's home. Strasser was at lunch with his family. They told him to come along; when he asked why he was informed that he was suspected of treasonous activities and that his office at Schering-Kahlbaum was to be searched. When they arrived at the building, however, he was handed over to a waiting S. S. detachment. They drove with him into the Grunewald, a forest near Berlin, and there brutally beat him to death. That is one version; the other has it that he was taken to the basement of Gestapo headquarters and there was shot in the neck; when it was found that he still lived he was killed by blows with gun butts.

His widow tried in vain to get in touch with Hitler, Dr. Wilhelm Frick, and Goering, who had been in her house hundreds of times; Hitler was even the godfather of Gregor's twin sons. On July 7 she received an urn containing her husband's ashes. It bore the number 16 and the inscription "God with us!"

Even Gregor Strasser's lawyer, Dr. Voss, was murdered in his office when he refused to surrender certain documents entrusted to his care concerning Strasser's conflict with Hitler, and a dossier of papers relating to Goering, Goebbels, and confrères.

• • •

Oberleutnant Paul Schulz, Strasser's right-hand man, was taken for a ride and thrown out on the road with the words, "Now run, you swine!" And Schulz, fifteen times wounded, one of the very few men in the German army to become an officer for bravery under fire, ran for his life. Five bullets mowed him down, and he was left for dead, lying in his blood. Regaining consciousness, he dragged himself to the road, to be found hours later by a passing car. He was taken to safety and escaped into Switzerland.

Dr. Alexander Glaser, Strasser's former chief of staff, was shot at the door of his house in Munich and died in the Schwabing hospital. A fortnight after his family had buried his body his brother was handed a tin of ashes and informed that they were Glaser's ashes.

Oberleutnant Gerhard Rossbach, the famous Free Korps leader and Hitler's ally in bygone days, had parted company with him after the Fuehrer's return from Landsberg and had held aloof even after Hitler's rise to power, making no bones about his sentiments, especially for Goering, whom he utterly despised. Now he fell into Goering's trap and disappeared. Long afterward the bodies of the stiff-necked old fighter, his son, and his chauffeur were found in a wood near Muchberg in Brandenburg.

• • •

Early in the afternoon of the bloody Saturday four men of Goering's bodyguard stopped their car at the villa of General von Schleicher, former chancellor. They entered, and within a few minutes both Schleicher and his wife were dead.

As usual, two versions exist. One of them is Goering's. His brazen statement on July 1 declared that Schleicher had been killed because, finding himself faced with arrest, he had attempted "a lightning assault on the men who had been ordered to arrest him." That explanation would not have accounted for the murder of Schleicher's wife, and, indeed, Goering did not even bother to mention her.

The other version is embodied in a letter alleged to have been authorized by Schleicher's old comrades — generals and staff officers of the Reichswehr—and to have been sent to Hindenburg under date of July 18, 1934. Demanding rehabilitation of Schleicher's honorable name and punishment of those guilty of the crime, the document related that a valet showed the four visitors to the reception room; when the general and his wife entered they were instantly shot down without warning.

Intriguer though Schleicher was, he was certainly no traitor to his country. Six months later, on Jan. 3, 1935, at a meeting in Berlin of the leading officers of the German army, he was solemnly exonerated and his death was lamented as a mistake.

So much for the roll call of blood. It has been concerned only with figures prominent in these pages. How many the unfortunates were will never be known. The official statements of Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, and Hess present a maze of contradictions. Hitler himself admitted only seventy-seven, but from all that has since leaked out it can be affirmed that from eight hundred to twelve hundred were murdered. [Among the dead were Dr. Eric Klausener and Gen. Ferdinand von Bredow, formerly of Von Schleicher's staff.]

ONCE more, young women, we would like to talk to you on a subject we stressed recently, because we hear more and more about it as your "big play" if you want to project yourself into the limelight. We think its most telling title might read:

Exit the Siren. Enter Miss Serenity.

We did a little further investigating on this subject since last addressing you. We are taking our cue largely from Hollywood, because you do, too. You would like to be like So-and-So of the movies. In the past this often has led to divorcing yourself unhappily from your own personal — and youthful — charms and graces. Maybe you even "put on an act" completely foreign to your own type and individuality. As things are today, happily, you stand a better chance of being some one in your own charming right, even though you still cue yourself after a Hollywood pattern, because their pattern now is that which belongs to your age.

• • •

The lure—sometimes strange, sometimes flagrant, sometimes striking, and sometimes sensational—one formerly associated with Hollywood stars is replaced today by an unruffled charm and poise. To be sure, a good actress may have plenty of fire, but temperament and emotionalism can be reserved for the footlights or camera. In private life it's modern to be serene.

A smiling, vital, unruffled personality—Sonja Henie.

Let's look over the Hollywood scene. Perhaps one of the best examples of this restful charm that attracts and holds millions of admirers is the skating star, Sonja Henie. Sonja is the hardest working player imaginable. Skating scenes must be made over and over again for eventual perfection. But the little Norwegian girl emerges each time the smiling, vital, unruffled personality that has become a symbol for all performers.

Twentieth Century-Fox has gathered together a brilliant array of personality girls in their teens and early twenties. These girls represent this new girl of today, with slim, strong physique, bright, clear eyes, fine complexion, with that well groomed, clean look that gives a feeling of assurance.

One of these new girls is Mary Healy, a brown-eyed, brown-haired New Orleans girl who was discovered by a visiting talent scout. Mary was a secretary. Studio makeup experts, usually inclined to be blasé, wax lyrical about Mary's charm, her naturalness, her poise—a girl, they say, with no "isms" to battle.

There's Nancy Kelly, whom we know personally and who would pass any day as your college roommate or best girl pal. Her carriage is extraordinarily graceful, her manner most gracious, her conversation sprightly. No act in Nancy's répertoire to impress, but she does it nevertheless with her straightforward charm.

Three new girls to win contracts on just these points that have become "musts" in today's school of winners are Linda Darnell, Brenda Joyce, and Kay Aldridge. Serene moderns each and every one of them. Or, as producers put it, "not too professional in appearance, not too glamorous in a synthetic way." Anything that may hint of artificiality would have destroyed their chances at box office money.

They tell of a test in which fifty-eight girls participated. Many were unknown, several of them famous. And out of that long, grueling test there walked a blonde, slender girl of 18 who was beautiful, not in the Hollywood pattern, but in the freshness of her personality, in the naïveté of her manner, in the candor of her brown eyes. So Brenda Joyce was handed one of the choicest rôles of the season in Hollywood.

• • •

Margaret Lockwood, an English girl brought to play the ingénue lead in Shirley Temple's newest picture, is another young woman cut after this pattern whose outstanding trait is a quiet charm that is heart-warming.

Now, this Hollywood trend is a boon to each and every one of you young women. You can now be yourself, stressing the gentler side, the sweeter, nicer, more natural side that is your birthright.

Every one is lured to the side of the serene person more than to the siren's, because with the former one finds peace and contentment, a stimulant to do better things. Too turbulent an existence is likely to be one's lot with the siren.

Granted that, being human and normal, you have your moments of storm and strife, you can acquire a manner of unruffled charm, a complete composure that need not betray your inner emotions. Call it acting if you wish, but practice, you know, makes perfect, and by practicing this art of appearing serene you may gradually find that life is not a series of emotional crises.

It's really one of the greatest beauty aids to court this emotional control, poise, serenity. It keeps away the lines of dissatisfaction that mar the beauty of eyes and mouth, which no amount of makeup can efface once they're etched there.

LOOK WHAT HOLLAND ADVERTISED LAST YEAR!
THE MORNING NEWS
HOLLAND CAN NOW INSTALL A FURNACE FOR LESS THAN ANY OTHER MANUFACTURER!
BESIDES GIVING THE BEST VALUE BY FAR HOLLAND ABSOLUTELY GUARANTEES PERFECT HEAT IN EVERY ROOM!
PIPE FOR PIPE...CASTING FOR CASTING...SIZE FOR SIZE...HOLLAND'S PRICES ARE AMERICA'S LOWEST!
AND NOW
HOLLAND AGAIN REDUCES FURNACE PRICES

THOSE HOLLAND MEN CERTAINLY DID A PERFECT JOB—DIDN'T THEY?
YES..AND USING SO LITTLE COAL SAVES ME MANY A TRIP TO THE BASEMENT!

Guaranteed Perfect Heat in Every Room . . .

Now at Lowest Prices Ever Offered

● Increased production for the predicted 1939 building boom has substantially reduced Holland Furnace manufacturing costs and that saving is being passed on to home owners. Now, it is more than ever true that a Holland heating system costs less than any other on any fair basis of comparison. Matched pipe for pipe—casting for casting—size for size, it not only costs less but is also definitely more efficient.

SCIENTIFIC PLANNING IS IMPORTANT

In comparing a Holland estimate with others, however, bear in mind that Holland definitely guarantees you perfect heat in every room. Holland's own expert engineer comes into your home. He measures every room with utmost care; scientifically computes heat losses of every kind and studies every other factor that will influence the size of furnace, size and arrangement of pipes and every other detail. Then he plans a system sure to give you adequate heating capacity. Finally, if you decide on Holland, your heating plant is installed by the factory's own specially trained mechanics to make sure that every detail is properly carried out.

A heating plant of too little capacity will cost less at first but it will shortly become a source of discomfort with wastefully high fuel and repair bills due to overfiring. Increased operating costs soon far exceed what seemed a saving at first. Make sure, therefore, that every system you consider matches Holland's—pipe for pipe—casting for casting—size for size. If you do, you'll find that Holland wins on price as well as quality.

3 YEARS TO PAY

You will be delighted, too, with Holland's amazingly liberal financing. You virtually make your own terms—take up to three years to pay. So, why not call the nearest Holland Factory Branch right now?
